sw. Alteration of position of bridge—Cold storage company thereby relegated to back street.]—An award was given as compensation for the injurious affecting of lands by the building of a highway traffic bridge over the railway yards of the C.P.R. The claim for compensation arose from the fact that while the old bridge ended at an avenue on which applt. co.'s buildings faced the new bridge runs a city block further north with the result that the co.'s buildings which were formerly on a "front" street are now on a "back" street over-shadowed by the new bridge. The co. was a cold storage co. The accessibility & appearance of its plant were seriously affected, & its facilities for loading & unloading railway cars & trucks were hampered,

The bridge, when built, constituted an obstruction to the navigation & interfered with access to the wharf, so that goods destined for the wharf had to be transhipped from sea-going vessels into barges below the bridge, & the owners of the wharf had to acquire a new wharf below the bridge. The owners of the old wharf, i.e., the freeholders, & a mtgee., & the occupiers, who were tenants at will, claimed compensation under the following heads: depreciation of freehold value of the old wharf; cost of the new wharf; damage through loss of traffic; damage through extra cost of handling traffic at the new wharf; damage to river sailing-barge traffic; damage through total stoppage of dumb craft with goods for overseas; damage through loss of storage rents:—Held: claimants were entitled to compensation only under the first head, & were not entitled to compensation under the other heads.—HEWETT v. ESSEX COUNTY COUNCIL (1928), 138 L. 284a. Reservation of water—Coupled with grant of easements & restrictions.]—By agreements made in 1904 & subsequent years a local authority agreed with the then owner of the S. estate for a supply of water from a pumping station & well on the S. estate. In 1932, S., who had become entitled to the S. estate, sold & conveyed a portion of it, not including the pumping station & well, to X. in fee simple. The conveyance to X. contained certain reservations & a covenant so framed as, if enforceable, to run with the land conveyed for the benefit of the remaining portion of the S. estate. The reservations purported to reserve all water (whether surface or underground) in or under any portion of the property so conveyed to X., & all necessary easements rights privileges advantages powers & liberties necessary for the enjoyment of that reservation. The covenant was not to do anything on the property so conveyed whereby the water supply then obtained therefrom or any part thereof or any supply thereafter to be obtained therefrom in addition to or in substitution therefor should be in any way diminished or the purity impaired. In Apr. 1934, the local authority made a compulsory purchase order under Public Works Facilities Act, 1930 (c. 50), s. 2, for the compulsory purchase of part of the property so conveyed to X. for the purpose of obtaining water therefrom & for the construction of a reservoir & certain works. This order incorporated Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18), s. 68.

S. claimed compensation on the ground that the S. estate & the reservations & restrictions imposed for the benefit of the S. estate by the conveyance of 1932 would be injuriously affected by the proposed works on the land comprised in the compulsory-purchase order. The parties having failed to come to terms, an official arbitrator was appointed, who subsequently acted as an agreed arbitrator under Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18).

In his award the arbitrator found (a) that a pumping station if erected on the portion of X.'s land comprised in the compulsory-purchase order would probably tap water which would otherwise percolate to the area tapped by the local authority's existing pumping station & well on the S. estate & might affect the quantity of water reaching such area, & (b) that a pumping station on the proposed site would not be likely to tap water which, in the absence of such a pumping station, could not be tapped by pumping at the local authority's existing works. He consequently awarded S. a certain sum by way of compensation, but made his award in the form of a special case, referring to the ct. the question whether S. was entitled to be compensated for the injurious affection of his adjoining estate & the interests easements & restrictions appertaining thereto by reason of the proposed works of the local authority & the facts so found by him: Held: (1) though the attempt to reserve percolating water out of the land conveyed by the conveyance of 1932 failed, the reservation therein contained ought to be construed as a while the construction of the subway in front of the buildings prevents future structural changes & adaptations to a serious degree:—Held: after referring to the various items of compensation & the evidence as to damage, the amount of the award was increased to $25,000, & the appeal allowed with costs.—Re WINNIPEG COLD STORAGE CO., LTD. & WINNIPEG CITY, [1934] 2 W. reservation of all necessary rights to enable S. to obtain water from the land conveyed; & the covenant imposed a contractual prohibition on X. & those deriving title under him from doing anything to interfere with the existing & future water supply at the existing works on the S. estate. The claimant therefore had an interest in land which was affected by the compulsory-purchase order; (2) the injury to the S. estate arose from the "execution of the works" within Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18), s. 68; since the statutory powers vested in the local authority under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 51, authorised the construction & maintenance of waterworks for the supply of water, & in order to supply water, it was necessary to draw water from the land taken. The claimant therefore was entitled to recover by way of compensation the amount awarded to him under the arbitrator's award.—Re SIMEON & ISLE OF WIGHT RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1937] Ch. 525; [1937] 3 All E. working. Shortly after the purchase, pltfs. erected two reservoirs & three filter beds on the land purchased. Deft. co. were lessees from the lord of the manor of a seam of coal lying under & adjacent to pltfs.' land. In 1911 deft. co., in pursuance of Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), & the Public Health Act, 1875 (Support of Sewers) Amendment Act, 1883 (c. 37), gave notice to pltfs. of their intention to work the coal under & within forty yards of pltfs.' waterworks. This notice was duly acknowledged, but no counter-notice was given by pltfs. of willingness to treat or to make compensation for or of their intention to prevent or interfere with the working of the coal either within or outside the forty yards area. In 1914, pltfs. purchased from the same vendors further lands adjoining the land bought in 1901 & subject to the same reservation of minerals to the lord of the manor of Wath-upon-Dearne. Pltfs. constructed on this land two further reservoirs, two more filter beds & other works. Damage to one of the reservoirs having appeared between Oct. 1926, & Jan. 21, 1929, caused, as was alleged, by the working of the adjacent & subjacent minerals by defts., pltfs. had the damage repaired. In 1930 a further notice of intention to work minerals near another part of pltfs.' lands & reservoirs was served on the pltfs. by defts., but again no counter-notice was given by pltfs. Pltfs. thereupon issued a writ claiming an injunction & damages or compensation. His Lordship having held on the evidence that the damage to the waterworks was caused by subsidence of the surface directly due to the working of the minerals by defts. & that the surface would have been damaged by subsidence if the waterworks had not been constructed on it, the question arose whether the vendors to pltfs. in 1901 & 1914, when they conveyed the land, had any right of support for the surface of those plots from the subjacent minerals & adjacent land & minerals, & if so, whether this right passed to pltfs. :—Held: (1) on the true construction of the Inclosure Act, 1810, the common law right of support was not excluded by necessary implication & the vendors to pltfs. had a common law right to have the surface supported by the subjacent minerals & adjacent land & minerals; (2) this right passed to pltfs. by the conveyances of 1901 & 1914, & deft. co. was not entitled to ignore this right although pltfs. failed to give any counter-notice under Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), ss. 22, 23. Further, there was nothing in Public Health Act, 1875 (Support of Sewers) Amendment Act, 1883 (c. 37), s. 3 (2), which gives the local authority an option to extend their counter-notice to minerals outside the forty yards area to deprive the local authority of the rights they possessed outside the forty yards area, if the option conferred by that section was not exercised.—WATH-UPON-DEARNE URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. BROWN (JOHN) & CO., LTD., [1936] Ch. 172; 105 L. 356a. —— —— Enfranchised copyholds.]—Under conveyances made in 1879, 1922, & 1927 deft. corpn. acquired land for the purposes of sewage works & a gas undertaking. So far as the present case was concerned, these lands were enfranchised copyholds subject to a custom whereby the lord of the manor had the right to work mines subject to making compensation for damage done including that arising from subsidence. The pltf. co. were the lessees of the minerals under such enfranchised copyholds & also under the adjoining land. In 1934 pltfs. gave the corpn. notice in writing that they desired to work seams of coal under or within 40 yds. of such enfranchised copyholds. Defts. gave no counter-notice under Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 23, to treat for the payment of compensation for such mines, & it became lawful for pltfs. to work the mines. In an action for a declaration as to the rights of the parties, the Vice-Chancellor of the County Palatine of Lancaster, after making a declaration of pltfs.' right to work the mines & let down the surface subject to payment of compensation for damage done including damage due to subsidence provided pltfs. did no wilful damage & did not work the mines in an unusual manner, added that defts. were not entitled to any greater protection in respect of the greater weight imposed upon the land by their sanitary works except where they had acquired a prescriptive right of support for such works: —Held: (1) defts. not having served a counter-notice, their rights in relation to the minerals were the same as those of their vendor & were therefore governed by the custom of the manor; (2) the addition to the declaration stated above could not be supported.—HARGREAVES, LTD.'S EXECUTORS v. BURNLEY CORPN., [1936] 3 All E. The Blackpool Improvement Act, 1917, s. 70, enacted that the provisions of the sect. should, unless otherwise agreed in writing, apply for the benefit & protection of a certain co. as owners of the land referred to in the section. By its terms the owners were to sell & the corpn. was to buy the land therein described at a price to be determined in default of agreement, by arbitration in th manner provided by the Lands Clauses Acts as modified by that Act, & a notice to treat was to be served by the corpn. within a defined time. It was further provided that the corpn. should not use the land so acquired for certain purposes which might cause a nuisance or annoyance to the owners. By Acquisition of Land (Assessment of Compensation) Act, 1919 (c. 57), where by any statute, whether passed before or after the passing of this Act, land is authorised to be acquired compulsorily by any local authority any question of disputed compensation is to be determined in the manner thereby provided, & the provisions of the Act by which the land is authorised to be acquired, or of any Act incorporated therewith, so far as inconsistent with this Act, shall cease to have effect. Notice to treat was served on the owners by the corpn. shortly before the coming into operation of the Act of 1919 but no arbitrator had been appointed to fix the price. A question having arisen whether the compensation was to be assessed under the Act of 1919 or under the private Act of 1917:—Held: the Act of 1919 did not apply, & the compensation was to be ascertained in the manner provided by the Lands Clauses Acts as modified by the Act of 1917; by VISCOUNT FINLAY, VISCOUNT CAVE, & LORD PHILLIMORE on the grounds, (a) that sect. 70 of the private Act embodied an agreement between the parties for the sale & purchase of the land & that the land was not "authorised to be acquired compulsorily"; (b) that the general language of the Act of 1919 ought not, in the absence of clear words, to be construed as affecting the special provisions of sect. 70 of the private Act of 1917; by VISCOUNT HALDANE on the second ground by LORD SHAW OF DUNFERMLINE (dissenting as to the second ground) on the first ground only.—BLACKPOOL CORPN. v. STARR ESTATE CO., LTD., [1922] 1 A. 650a. —— Acquisition of land & appointment of arbitrator under Public Health Act, 1875, (c. 55.)]—A land co. was the owner in fee simple of certain land through which a sewerage board, under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), after duly serving on the co. notice of intention to do so, carried a sewer & a rising main. Subsequently an agreement in writing was entered into between the parties regarding what had been done. Differences having arisen regarding the compensation to be paid by the board to the co., recourse was had to arbn. The arbitrator was appointed under Public Health Act, 1875, & before entering on the arbn. made the statutory declaration under that Act. Having considered the disputes he made an alternative award in the form of a special case for the opinion of the ct. If the ct. was of opinion that compensation was to be assessed solely under Public Health Act, 1875, he awarded the co. £5,090; if the arbitration was under Acquisition of Land (Assessment of Compensation) Act, 1919 (c. 57), & the basis on which compensation was to be awarded was to be governed by the principles in s. 2 of that Act, he awarded the co. £2,148:—Held: as the land had been acquired under powers conferred by Public Health Act, 1875, before the agreement between the parties was entered into, it had been acquired compulsorily, & as there was nothing in the agreement which affected the primary basis of the value of the land nor any other matter, including the appointment of the arbitrator expressly under Public Health Act, 1875, which was inconsistent with the rules laid down by s. 2 of the Act of 1919, that Act applied to the arbn., & the co. should be awarded £2,148.—THURROCK, GRAYS & TILBURY JOINT SEWERAGE BOARD v. THAMES LAND CO., LTD. (1925), 90 J. P. 1; 23 L. G. R. 648.

650b. —— Power to purchase given to railway company—Transfer to public authority.]—Pltfs. were the estate owners in fee simple of certain land & buildings in the City of London. Defts., a public authority established in accordance with the provisions of London Passenger Transport Act, 1933, in Oct. 1935, gave notice to pltfs. to treat for the compulsory purchase of the premises, & subsequently took possession. By the Act of 1933 certain passenger transport undertakings were transferred to defts. including the C. L. Railway. It was provided by the Act that such transfer should include all lands & other property, assets, powers, rights, and privileges held or enjoyed therewith, & further that defts. might exercise all the rights, powers, & privileges which immediately before the appointed day, July 1, 1933, were vested in the C. L. Railway as one of the undertakers & should be subject to all liabilities & obligations to which the C. L. Railway were subject immediately before the appointed day. Among the powers conferred on the C. L. Railway in existence on July 1, 1933, was a power conferred by an Act of 1931 to purchase the premises of pltfs. The time for the exercise of this power was, after the passing of the Act of 1933, extended to Oct. 1937, by sect. 68 of London Passenger Transport Act, 1934. Defts. contended that being a public authority authorised to acquire the particular land in question compulsorily, the provisions of Acquisition of Land (Assessment of Compensation) Act, 1919 (c. 57), as to the compensation payable, applied.

Pltfs. denied this on the ground (a) that if the C. L. Railway (the " undertakers ") had purchased compulsorily before July 1, 1933, the purchase price must have been fixed as provided for by the Lands Clauses Acts as modified by the Act of 1931, & that this was therefore a liability or obligation of the C. L. Railway to pltfs.; (b) that by virtue of sect. 68 of the Act of 1934, the time limited for the exercise of compulsory purchase by the Act of 1931 was extended subject to the provisions for the protection or benefit of (inter alia) any co., body or person mentioned in (among others) the Act of 1931, & that the provisions of that Act with regard to the assessment of compensation in cases of compulsory purchase were provisions for pltfs.' benefit, & (c) that the provisions of the Act of 1931 were not affected by the provisions of the Acts of 1933 & 1934 in the absence of clear words showing that it was the intention of the two later Acts to abrogate the provisions of the Act of 1931:—Held: pltfs.' contentions failed because (a) as the C. L. Railway had not served any notice to treat on or before July 1, 1933, there was no liability or obligation of the C. L. Railway on that date towards pltfs. or their property to which defts. could be subjected in respect of a notice given by defts. subsequently to July 1, 1933, (b) pltfs. were not expressly mentioned as a co., body or person for whose protection or benefit provision was made in the Act of 1931, & (c) the provisions for compensation in the Act of 1931 were general provisions & accordingly the maximum " generalia specialibus non derogant " did not apply.

The compensation must therefore be ascertained under & in accordance with the Act of 1919.—DRAPERS CO. v. LONDON PASSENGER TRANSPORT BOARD, [1937] Ch. 344; [1937] 2 All E. R. 12; 106 L. J. Ch. 121; 156 L. T. 272; 53 T. L. R. 448; 81 Sol. Jo. 199.

702a. Arbitrator incapable of continuing—Power to replace.]—Where an arbitrator, appointed by the Reference Committee under Acquisition of Land (Assessment of Compensation) Act, 1919 (c. 57), s. 1, becomes incapable of continuing a particular arbn., the authority of the Reference Committee includes the power to replace him by some one else.—GROSS, SHERWOOD & HEALD, LTD. v. ESSEX COUNTY COUNCIL, [1927] 1 Ch. 205; 96 L. An action in respect of this damage had proceeded to trial, & judgment had been reserved, when a special Act was passed by the Quebec Legislature to prevent any disturbance of resps.' operations. Resps. were by the Act to make just & fair compensation to applt. for all his properties & rights taken or affected, & the ct. was to determine what properties & rights should upon payment of the compensation become vested in resps.:—Held: (1) the Act did not require the ct. to vest in resps. all lands or properties affected, if in its discretion, it thought compensation for injurious affection sufficient; (2) the amount of an award may be varied by an appeal ct. where it is clear that it is based upon a wrong principle of calculation or not justified by the admitted facts; (3) although undertakers cannot offer remedial works in lieu of compensation, the offer of land taken or easements over land taken for the restoration of a piling ground & a ry. siding was a proper one & ought to be taken into consideration.—CROSS v. GATINEAU POWER CO., [1936] 3 All E. 2225f. —— Open space within London Open Spaces Act, 1893, c. lxxi.]—By London Open Spaces Act, 1893 (c. lxxi.), Hackney Marshes was vested in the L.C.C. in fee simple as & for an open space for the perpetual use thereof by the public for exercise & recreation. Sect. 12 of that Act provided that the council might from time to time exchange any lands forming part of Hackney Marshes for any other lands "adjoining." In 1935, the L.C.C., in purported exercise of their powers under sect. 65 of Housing Act, 1925 (c. 14), of appropriating for housing lands vested in them, resolved that, subject to the certificate of the Minister under sect. 103 (1) of that Act, thirty acres of Hackney Marshes should be appropriated for housing & that fifty acres of land at Chigwell, about seven miles away, should be given in exchange. Appct. having addressed a protest to the Minister against the proposed appropriation & exchange was informed that the Minister proposed to hold a public inquiry under sect. 103 (2) of Housing Act, 1925 (c. 14).

The appct. then obtained a rule nisi for a writ of prohibition to prohibit the Minister from (a) consenting to the appropriation by the L.C.C. of a portion of Hackney Marshes, (b) issuing his certificate under sect. 103 (1) of Housing Act, 1925 (c. 14), approving the giving in exchange of an area of land at Chigwell, & (c) holding a public local inquiry in relation to those matters under sect. 103 (2) of Housing Act, 1925 (c. 14):—Held : (1) prohibition would lie; (2) in exercising its powers of appropriation of land under sect. 65, a local authority need not act by an "order," & therefore the resolution of the L.C.C. was not bad merely because it was not under seal; (3) Housing Act, 1925 (c. 14), which is a consolidating Act repealing & re-enacting Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1890 (c. 70), & Housing, Town Planning, etc., Act, 1909 (c. 44) (from which ss. 65 & 103 are respectively taken), did not affect an Act passed between the original enactment of sect. 57 (3) of the Act of 1890 & its re-enactment in sect. 65 of the consolidating Act. It was manifest that the council could not, immediately after the Act of 1893 had vested Hackney Marshes in them as an open space, have appropriated part of the Marshes for housing under the Act of 1890. They had no greater powers under the Act of 1925; (4) the maxim "generalia specialibus non derogant" also applied to prevent the Housing Act, 1925 (c. 14), overriding the special provisions of London Open Spaces Act, 1893 (c. lxxi.), with regard to Hackney Marshes.—R. v. MINISTER OF HEALTH, Ex p. VILLIERS, [1936] 2 K. 2300a. Validity of order—Inclusion of name of owner of easement.]—By a conveyance made in 1932 appct. sold land to a purchaser in fee simple subject to reservations in favour of himself & his grantees of certain rights to surface & underground water. Subsequently the local district council as water authority acting ostensibly under the Public Works Facilities Act, 1930 (c. 50), s. 2, made an order purporting to be a compulsory purchase order in the prescribed form authorising them to purchase a part of the land comprised in the conveyance, there being inserted in the schedule to the order under the heading "Owners or Reputed Owners" not only the name of the purchaser under the conveyance but also the name of appct., & under the heading "Quantity, Description & Situation of the lands" a full description of the land but no mention of appct.'s easement over it; & the council served upon appct. a notice of the making of the order purporting to be a notice in accordance with the Act & in the prescribed form, the schedule to which notice contained a full description of the lands but made no mention of the easement. Appct. gave notice of objections to the confirmation of the order by the Minister of Health, & by direction of the Minister a public local inquiry was held in regard to the matter before an officer of the Ministry, who stated that the objections raised points of law which could not be dealt with by him but must be considered by the Minister. Having considered the objections & read the report of the officer, the Minister confirmed the order. Appct. thereupon made an application to the High Ct. under Sched. I., Part III., para. 2, of the Act that the order might be set aside on the grounds: (1) that the order was not within the powers of the Act, inasmuch as, though the Act authorised only the purchase of land, the order included the name of appct. who had merely an easement over the land & therefore purported to acquire what was not land; (2) the property to be acquired was not sufficiently described in the order or the notice thereof, as no mention was made in them of appct.'s easement; &, further, that the notice of the order did not, pursuant to Sched. I., Part II., para. 3 (b), of the Act state the "effect of the order," because it did not bring home to the applicant what effect the order would have upon him or his property; & (3) that the Minister did not before deciding whether or not the order should be confirmed give appct. an opportunity of coming before him & stating his legal arguments in support of the objections:—Held : the application could not be supported on any of these grounds, & must therefore be refused.—Re SIMEON (J. 2300f. Quashing order—Order ultra vires—No prejudice.]—(1) Under Public Works Facilities Act, 1930 (c. 50), Sched. I., Part III. (2), the High Ct. has power to quash a compulsory purchase order, "if satisfied that the order is not within the powers of the Act or that the interests of the appct. have been substantially prejudiced by any requirement of this Act not having been complied with." The provision that appct. must have been substantially prejudiced applies to both the above grounds of objection to an order. Accordingly, if an order is not within the powers of the Act, by reason of the Minister having failed to act judicially in some particular or for some other cause, the order will not be quashed, unless it is also shown that the interests of appct. have been prejudiced thereby. In Jan. 1924, after these proceedings he sought to be naturalised as an American citizen. He spent increasing periods of time at his Scottish estate & referred to it as his home in a letter written to resp. in Nov. Since 1920, however, he had made statements in documents & verbally that he intended to live permanently in New York, though such statements were never made to his wife, nor, with one exception, to any personal friend :—Held : the evidence of declared intention of change of domicil was not established, as such declarations must be examined by considering the person to whom, the purposes for which, & the circumstances in which they were made, & be carried into effect by conduct & action consistent with the declared intention.—ROSS v. ELLISON (OR ROSS), [1930] A. Testator's domicil of origin was England, where he was born, but in 1897 he moved with his parents to Scotland, where his father had bought certain property. Testator's father continued to live in Scotland until his death in 1905, when by his will, which was in English form, his residuary estate, including the property in Scotland & other property in England, passed to testator. With the exception of brief visits to England & an occasional trip abroad, testator lived in Scotland from 1897 until his death. He had a great love for his property in Scotland & was anxious that after his death it should remain in his family & not be sold. At his own request testator was buried in Scotland. The exors. of the will took out a summons to determine (inter alia) whether testator was at the time of his death domiciled in England or in Scotland :—Held : as all the evidence showed that the testator's residence was in Scotland & that he intended that such residence should be permanent, the testator was domiciled in Scotland at the time of his death.—Re LIDDELL-GRAINGER'S WILL TRUSTS, DORMER v. LIDDELL-GRAINGER, [1936] 3 All E. The husband was a waiter of Italian nationality & was registered as an alien in England, & as such was subject to the restrictions & liabilities by the Aliens Restriction Act, 1914 (c. 12), & the Aliens Order, 1920 :—Held : (1) the provisions of the Act of 1914 & the Order of 1920 did not preclude the petitioner from acquiring an English domicil of choice ; (2) on the facts, petitioner had discharged the onus on him of proving that he had acquired an English domicil of choice.—BOLDRINI v. BOLDRINI & MARTINI, [1932] P. 9 ; 101 L. A testator who died in Liverpool in 1927, aged eighty-two & unmarried, left a holograph will, valid by the law of Scotland but invalid by the law of England. Testator's domicil of origin was Scottish, & he lived the greater part of his life in Glasgow. Originally employed there as a commercial traveller he gave up that employment in 1882 & never worked again. In 1892 he went to Liverpool to be near a brother & sister, & lived there for the last thirty-five years of his life. He was supplied with the means of subsistence by his brother & sister, & on the death of his sister he succeeded to the whole of her estate. With the exception of family ties he had few, if any, ties in either England or Scotland. United Kingdom of Great Britain & Ireland & had no intention of permanently leaving the United Kingdom. Having divorced his wife he married in 1886 in England his second wife, a lady of English birth, & lived with his wife & children for two years in England. He then returned to Germany for two years & was there engaged on business connected with his father's firm. His wife having become an invalid, he took a house for her in Hampstead, & in it she died in 1906. In 1901 the father of the deceased, who had been the head of the firm at Cüstrin, died & was succeeded in the management of the business by the deceased, who paid frequent visits to Germany lasting for considerable periods, in attendance at meetings of the board, & made the old family house his residence when at Cüstrin on business. On the death of his mother in 1908 at Neuwied he used her house as a second residence when in Germany. Deceased died in 1915 at his house in Hampstead which he had endeavoured to dispose of, though without success:—Held: the true inference to be drawn from the circumstances under which the house in Hampstead was taken & maintained by the deceased was that it was an emergency measure dictated by the condition of his wife & not one which should be held to indicate an intention to establish a family home & thus to adopt a new domicile in this country. The evidence was wholly insufficient to establish the abandonment by the deceased of his German domicile.

Per Lord ATKIN: It is not the law either that a change of domicile is a condition of naturalisation, or that naturalisation involves necessarily a change of domicile.—WAHL v. A.-G. (1932), 147 L. T. 382, H. L.

155a. —— Material consideration.]—D.. who was born in Edinburgh in 1858, went out to Calcutta, India, in 1875 & worked in his uncle's cotton mills, becoming a partner in his uncle's firm in 1880. In 1883 he returned for a few months, but from 1883 to 1900 remained working in India, making his business his life. He seldom went into society, but was fond of Indians, & chiefly associated with them. In 1900 he returned to England & married his cousin, & took her out with him to Calcutta in 1901, but, the climate not suiting her, she returned in Nov. 1901, to England. From Jan. 1903 to 1910, he paid visits for a substantial time each year to be with his wife in England, where he had bought a house. In 1903 a child was born. From Jan. 1912 to Nov. 1915, D. remained in England, being, it was said, detained by litigation. In 1916 his wife went out to Calcutta, & she & her daughter lived with her husband in his flat over his offices. She returned with her daughter after two months. In 1917 D. followed his wife home, & until his death on July 3, 1928, remained in England, except for short visits to India in 1919, 1920, 1922, 1924, & 1925. In his will dated June 28, 1922, he made a declaration of Indian domicile. On his death, the Crown, on the ground that he was domiciled in the United Kingdom, claimed death duties on his estate, the value of which was many millions of pounds. On the question whether, as the exors. of the will alleged, he had acquired a domicile of choice in India & lost his domicile of origin:—Held: the earlier period of D.'s life up to the year 1900 could not be estimated in deciding whether he had acquired a domicile of choice in India in a compartment separate from his later years, & the declaration in his will did not decide the point, but where his wife & children had their permanent residence was material as to a man's domicile. There was a distinction between residence & domicile, & it could not be inferred from the fact of residence that domicile resulted. On the facts there was no clear evidence, as was necessary, of any manifest & concluded intention of change of domicile to overcome the domicile of origin. Therefore the onus of proof of a domicile of choice was not discharged, & D. died domiciled in the United Kingdom.—A.-G. v. YULE & MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA (1931), 145 L. T. 9, C. A.

173a. ——.]—A husband & wife, both born in England of English parents, were married in England in 1905, where they resided together until in 1923 the husband left his wife & went to the United States of America. The husband corresponded regularly with his wife & sent her money until 1932, when she discovered that he was living with another woman as his wife. In reply to an inquiry the husband wrote that he had no thought of returning to England. The wife petitioned for divorce in England, alleging that she & her husband were domiciled in England. The husband did not enter an appearance. At the adjourned hearing, when the King's Proctor had entered an appearance in the suit to argue the question of domicil & of the ct.'s jurisdiction to grant a decree of divorce, a certificate from the U.S. Department of Labour was put in, to the effect that the husband was naturalised in New York in 1930. By the law in the United States of America, the husband in order to have obtained such a certificate must have declared on oath at least two years before his admission as a citizen of the United States that it was bona fide his intention to become a citizen & to renounce for ever allegiance to the state of which he might at the time be a citizen. is or is not domiciled in a foreign country is to be determined in accordance with the requirements of English law as to domicil, irrespective of the question whether the person in question has or has not acquired a domicil in the foreign country in the eyes of the law of that country.

336a. —— —— Action for declaration as to currency in which payable.]—Applts. (defts. in the action), two English cos. having their head offices in London but carrying on business exclusively in South America, were jointly liable to resps. (the pltfs. in the action) for rent in respect of premises occupied by one of them in Chile under a lease drawn in the Spanish language according to Chilean law & executed by all parties in Paris, by which also all parties elected domicil in Chile. The rent stipulated by the lease was 93,500 pesos of 183,057 millionths of a gramme of fine gold monthly, which was to be paid at the option of the lessors either in Chile or remitted to Europe according to their instructions. Disputes having arisen between the parties in view of Chilean legislation which applts. contended prevented them remitting the rent from Chile without official authorisation by the Chilean Government, which authorisation had been refused, applts. commenced proceedings in Chile, which were still pending, claiming a declaration that the rent could lawfully be paid in notes of the Banco Central de Chile. Resps. having brought the present action in England claiming payment of the rent in sterling equivalent to 183,057 millionths of a gramme of fine gold, applts. applied under sect. 41 of Jud. Act, 1925 (c. 49), to have it stayed as being vexatious & oppressive:—Held: (1) the action was a personal action, transitory in its nature, which the English ct. could competently entertain notwithstanding that incidentally it related to an immovable out of England; (2) the legal effect of the clause in the lease by which all parties elected domicil in Chile could not properly be determined upon affidavits; (3) though some inconvenience might be caused to applts. by having to call evidence as to Chilean law with regard to the mode in which the rent could be paid, this did not amount to an injustice sufficient to entitle the applts. to a stay of the action; (4) the fact that an action by applts. against resps. was pending in Chile was not in itself a ground entitling applts. to a stay.—ST. 395a. —— Floating charge on land in Scotland.]—A shipping co., registered in England, but owning heritable & movable property in Scotland, in pursuance of a previous agreement with all its secured creditors, in Mar. 1934, executed a charge in Glasgow in favour of a Scottish bank, whereby, after reciting the agreement, charged with payment of sums advanced by the bank by way of floating security its undertaking & all its property & assets both present & future. By the deed the charge was to rank as a first charge on the co.'s undertaking & all its property & assets whatsoever & wheresoever both present & future subject to specific mtges., & was to be a floating security, but so that the co. should not have power to create any further mtges. or charges ranking in priority to or pari passu with the charge thereby created. This charge was registered in England. Subsequently an agreement for sale of all the co.'s property & assets was entered into but before it was carried into effect the co. was compulsorily wound up & a liquidator was appointed. property & assets of the co. therein specified in so far as such assets were at the commencement of the liquidation of the co. locally situate in Scotland. The bulk of the property having been sold & the proceeds of sale only left in the hands of the liquidator, the question before the ct. was whether in the distribution of the assets of the co. effect ought to be given to the charge executed in Glasgow in Mar. 1934, so far as the proceeds of sale represented heritable & movable property in Scotland at the date of the liquidation :—Held : (1) the charge must be construed according to English law & was a valid equitable security according to English law ; (2) Cos. Act, 1929 (c. 23), s. 270, does not place heritable or other property in Scotland belonging to a co. registered in England in a different position from property belonging to it in England or in any other part of the world. 417a. —— —— ——.]—The Q. Co. was a co. incorporated & carrying on business in Queensland. In Sept. 1886, the Q. Co. issued & deposited with the U. Bank, as security for moneys due & to become due, two debentures, the one for £10,000, & the other for £50,000 ; both debentures assigned the uncalled capital of the co., & were, as the ct. held, valid according to the law of Queensland. In Dec. 1886 the Q. Co. made a call of £50 a share payable in four instalments, in Feb., Apr., June, & Aug. 1887. The co. had many shareholders domiciled in Scotland & some in England. On Oct. 20, 1887, an order was made for winding up the co. in Queensland, & on June 14, 1888, a similar order was made in England. On Feb. 24, 1887, the A. Co., a co. domiciled in Scotland, commenced proceedings in Scotland to recover from the Q. Co. large sums entrusted to them for investment. Immediately after the institution of the action the call moneys due under the call made by the Q. Co. as above, from shareholders resident in Scotland, were arrested by the Scotch process called arrestment on the dependence of the action. Proceedings in this action were restrained by the High Ct. in England on Feb. 24, 1888, on the motion of the English liquidator of the Q. Co., but the order was expressly made without prejudice to the security, if any, upon the amounts payable by the Scotch shareholders in the Q. Co. which the A. Co. had acquired by their proceedings, & the amounts received from the Scotch shareholders were directed to be carried by the liquidator to a separate account. On Sept. 6, 1889, an order was made in the Queensland winding up allowing the claim of the A. Co. for £12,662 4*s.* 5*d.* The U. Bank, whose claim against the Q. Co. had been allowed for £74,000, but who had valued their security at £31,000, took out a summons claiming that the liquidator should pay over to the bank all the moneys in his hands representing proceeds of the said call. The A. Co. claimed to be paid in priority out of the money received from Scotch shareholders. The evidence stated that, according to the law of Scotland, the arrestment had the effect of attaching the fund in favour of the creditor obtaining it, & upon the decree being pronounced in the suit the security would become complete, & that such an arrestment operated as an assignment of the fund duly intimated ; that an admission of the sum due in the winding up of a co. was for this purpose equivalent to a decree ; & that, according to the law of Scotland, in order to create a competent security over incorporeal personal property, the assignment thereof must be duly intimated to the debtor :—Held : without deciding the point whether the maxim "Mobilia sequuntur personam" made the assignment of the calls by the Q. Co. domiciled in Queensland valid in Scotland, the case was governed by the principle that, if a transfer of personal property is carried out validly according to the law of the country where the property is situated, it cannot be made invalid by anything in the law of the assignor's domicil ; & as the evidence proved that the arrestment operated as an assignment by the Q. Co., completed by intimation according to the law of Scotland, that assignment could not be made invalid by the prior assignment, which could only have effect by the law of Queensland.—Re QUEENSLAND MERCANTILE & AGENCY CO., Ex p. AUSTRALASIAN INVESTMENT CO., Ex p. UNION BANK OF AUSTRALIA, LTD. v. COMR. The exor. named in the will obtained a grant of probate in common form in England, &, as a person entitled to probate who was out of the jurisdiction, brought a suit in the Supreme Ct. of New South Wales for the grant to his attorney of administration with the will annexed. The suit was contested by a caveator who claimed that the will was invalid :—Held : the validity of the will as a disposition of immovables & as a title to administer them must be determined independently of the English grant, & the caveator's objection should, therefore, be heard & determined upon the merits.—LEWIS v. BALSHAW (1936), 54 C. 457a. ——.]—(1) The succession to movable property, wherever situate, is governed by the law of testator's domicil, that is to say, the whole law of the country of domicil, including the rules of private international law administered by its tribunals. The inquiry in an English ct. before which such a question of succession comes is, therefore, what the cts. of the country of domicil would decide in the particular case. The result is that, where by the law of the succession to the movables of a testator depends on the law of that testator's nationality, an English ct. will hold that the succession is governed by the law of the nationality & not by the municipal law of the domicil.

A party entitled to share in the appointed assets in default of appointment relied on the effectual revocation of the will according to Italian law:—Held: in the absence of authority the policy of the ct. must lean towards giving effect to the intention of testatrix & ought not to impose upon her as necessary a compliance with English requirements as to revocation which was unknown to the law of her domicil, & the party entitled in default of appointment must succeed.—VELASCO v. CONEY, [1934] P. 143; 103 L. 639. To the cross-reference before this case add "No. 1981a."

639a. ——.]—Pltf. was received by defts., a British co., under a contract made in Detroit, to be carried in one of their steamships from New York to Southampton. The contract contained a clause that the shipowners should not be liable for loss, damage or delay to a passenger or his baggage arising from the act of God, or from causes of any kind beyond the carrier's control, even though the loss, damage or delay might have been caused by the neglect or default of the shipowners' servants. It was further provided that all questions arising under the clause should be decided according to English law. A subsequent clause provided that no claim under the contract should be enforceable against the shipowners unless a written notice thereof was delivered to them within three days after the passenger should be landed from the steamer at the termination of her voyage. In the course of the voyage one of pltf.'s hands was injured by reason of the negligence of defts.' servants, but no written notice of any claim was given by pltf. within the time limited by the contract:—Held: the language of the contract showed that it was the intention of the parties that it should be wholly governed by English law; the clause relieving defts. from liability for the negligence of their servants, though void by the law in force in Detroit, was valid & enforceable, by English law, but, applying the ejusdem generis rule, the clause did not absolve defts. from liability for pltf.'s injury. —JONES v. OCEANIC STEAM NAVIGATION CO., LTD., [1924] 2 K. 640a. —— Inclusion of provisions of local Ordinance.]—Certain parcels of oranges were shipped at Jaffa upon an Esthonian steamship for carriage to Hull. The ship was under time charter to a British firm, who ran a line of steamships called the Jaffa Union Line. The bills of lading, which were signed by directors of a Palestine corporation, the Jaffa Union Line, Ltd., contained the following clause: "This bill of lading wherever signed is to be construed in accordance with English law." Pltfs. were Hull fruit merchants, two of whom were indorsees of certain of the bills of lading & sued as owners of the cases of fruit therein mentioned; nine others had merely paid the freight & sued on an implied contract with deft. shipowners to deliver the cases in good order & condition according to the terms of the bills of lading. The Palestine Carriage of Goods by Sea Ordinance, No. 43 of 1926, incorporated the rules relating to bills of lading adopted by the International Conference on Maritime Law held at Brussels in 1922–23, generally known as the Hague Rules. Clause 4 of the Ordinance was in the following terms: "Every bill of lading . . . issued in Palestine which contains or is evidence of any contract to which the Rules apply shall contain an express statement that it is to have effect subject to the provision of the said Rules as applied by this Ordinance, & shall be deemed to have effect subject thereto, notwithstanding the omission of such express statement." Pltfs.' action was in respect of damage &/or short delivery. Defts. set up various exceptions in the bills of lading, & pltfs. pleaded in reply that the contracts were governed by the Palestine Ordinance; that accordingly, notwithstanding the omission of a statement to that effect, the Hague Rules should be deemed to be written into the contracts, &, therefore, that the exceptions relied on were of no avail. The question whether the bills of lading were subject to the provisions of the Ordinance was set down for trial as a preliminary issue. The judge held that they were so subject, & that all pltfs. were entitled to succeed on the preliminary issue. Defts. appealed:—Held: (1) the express terms of the Ordinance, based on an international convention, could not be defeated by the insertion of a clause in the bills of lading that they were to be construed according to English law, & the bills of lading were subject to the provisions of the Ordinance & the Rules thereunder, &, with those terms read into them, should then be construed according to English law; but (2) the ct. had not sufficient information as to the facts to determine the effect of that decision on the nine pltfs. who sued on implied contracts, &, while the appeal would be dismissed, the judgment must be varied to that extent.—THE TORNI, [1932] P. 78; 101 L. 640b. Agreement for contract to be subject to foreign law—Contract cancelled by decree of foreign Government.]—In May, 1903, pltf. took out a 20 year endowment life insurance policy with defts. for 10,000 roubles payable at defts.' office in St. Petersburgh, & by the terms of the policy all premiums were to be paid in Russia. Pltf. paid all the premiums in Russia down to 1917, & then in London down to 1919. By the terms of an Imperial Decree of the Russian Empire, dated July 7, 1889, which were incorporated in the policy, it was provided (inter alia) that all disputes in connection with insurance operations should be settled according to Russian laws & in Russian cts. of justice. By a Monopolisation Decree of the Russian Soviet Govt., dated Dec. 1918, insurance in all its forms was declared a State monopoly, & in Nov. 1919, a Decree of Cancellation abolished life assurance altogether in the Soviet Republic, & all existing contracts were annulled. In those circumstances pltf., who was prevented by the above decrees of 1918 & 1919 from suing on the policy in Russia, brought an action in England for a declaration that defts. were liable to him under the policy:—Held: the proper law of the contract was, according to the policy rules, the law of Russia, & the effect of the Cancellation Decree of Nov. 1919, was that the contract, if in fact there was any contractual nexus left in existence between the parties after the Monopolisation Decree of 1918 came into force, was annulled, & pltf. could not recover on it.—PERRY v. EQUITABLE LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY OF U.S.A. (1929), 45 T. L. R. 468.

Deft. alleged that the contract or bill of lading was issued subject to the Harter Act, the terms & conditions of which applied to & formed part of such contract, while pltf. alleged that as this Act was not referred to or made part of the contract it did not apply :—Held : the obligations of the parties under this contract were governed by the laws of the United States. f iii. —— —— ——.]—The contract of carriage in question herein was made in the United States of America, both pltfs. were United States corpns., & the contract contained a clause valid & necessary according to such law, but not necessary under the Canadian or English law. Moreover, the insurance certificates issued by one of pltfs. contained an express reference to the Harter Act, a law of the United States which the pltfs. now contend should not be applied :—Held : in the above circumstances, inasmuch as the intention of the parties is to govern, it must be presumed that the parties to the contract intended to be governed by the law of the United States (the Harter Act), & that such law applied. The best criterion of what law is to be applied is to be found in the intention of the parties, & where such intention is not expressed it is to be gathered from the terms of the contract itself & from the surrounding circumstances. Where a bill of lading contains special clauses, not necessary or valid under other laws, but necessary & valid under the laws of the country where the contract was made, the parties are presumed to have contracted subject to the law which gives effect to such clauses.—BUNGE NORTH AMERICAN GRAIN CORPN. & FIRE ASSOCN. to reserve room for certain cottonseed for shipment to London by a steamer to be specified. Under a charterparty made between the owners of the Swedish steamship A. & pltfs. as charterers the A. loaded the cargo at Alexandria for delivery in London; & pltfs., "as agents only," issued bills of lading whereby the cargo was to be delivered in London to the order of the defts. on payment of freight by them at the specified rate. In the course of the voyage the A. came into collision with another vessel, & was so badly injured that she had to be towed to Cadiz, where she was found to be a constructive total loss. The cargo, accordingly, was discharged at Cadiz & delivery was taken there by defts. Pltfs., suing on behalf of the shipowners, claimed distance (i.e. pro rata) freight, which they alleged was payable either under the law of the flag (Swedish) or the lex loci contractus (Egypt). Defts. alleged that the law of England applied, under which pro rata freight is not payable:—Held: all the authorities showed that the best criterion of what law was to be applied was to be found in the intention of the parties, &, if the parties intended otherwise, the presumption was rebutted that a contract for the carriage of goods by sea was governed by the law of the flag; looking at the circumstances broadly, & having regard (inter alia) to the facts that all the documents were in English & on English forms, that delivery & payment were to be in England, the freight engagement notes did not specify a ship of any particular nationality, defts. were a British firm, & the British position in Egypt had for many years been predominant, the inference was that the parties, who as business people must be taken to have intended what was most convenient, intended English law to apply; & consequently the claim for distance freight failed.—THE ADRIATIC, [1931] P. 241; 100 L. 697a. —— Delivery of goods against bill of lading—Property in goods passing by contract with third party.]—In Jan. 1929, pltfs., the Government of Guatemala, purchased aeroplanes & war material from a French firm in Paris for delivery at Guatemala City. By the contract of sale the goods were to be accepted by the purchasers before departure from the sellers' works, & payment therefor was to be made as to 34 per cent. by cash with order & as to the balance of 66 per cent. by a confirmed irrevocable credit with a first-class bank. The sellers undertook to insure the goods & also arrange for their transport to Guatemala City via Puerto Barrios. For these transport services the pltfs. agreed to pay a lump sum. The sellers, by their agents in Antwerp, chartered the Norwegian steamship St. Joseph, owned by defts. for the transport of a portion of the goods from Antwerp to Puerto Barrios. By the bill of lading, which was mainly in English, the goods were to be delivered unto the "Gouvernement de Guatemala or to his/their assigns." The bill of lading contained no reference to the Hague Rules or to the article of the Belgian Code which embodied those rules. On the arrival of the ship at Puerto Barrios pltfs. presented the bill of lading & took delivery of the goods, which were then sent on by rail to Guatemala City. The goods were found to have been damaged during sea transit by reason of the bad stowage of a part cargo of patent fuel also carried in the St. Joseph, & the Guatemala Government sued the shipowners for the damage. The shipowners admitted liability, but contended that their contract with pltfs. was governed by Belgian law, which embodied the Hague Rules, & that therefore their liability was limited:—Held: that pltfs. became the owners of the goods by acceptance, & payment to the sellers, before shipment, & not as consignees or indorsees of the bill of lading within the meaning of Bills of Lading Act, 1855 (c. 111); the only contract between pltfs. & defts. was made by pltfs.' offering the bill of lading to the shipmaster & getting delivery of the goods, & it was a contract made in Guatemala, with which no Belgian had anything to do, except as agent; pltfs. were bound by the terms contained in the bill of lading & nothing more; there was nothing to show that either party intended or contemplated the application of Belgian law to the contract, & it was impossible to import into such a contract, between such parties, a term of Belgian law to which no reference was made therein; even if the contract was made in Antwerp, & pltfs., by taking delivery, incurred the same liabilities as the shipper, who took the bill of lading, they only incurred a liability to which the section of the Belgian Code had no application, for it could not be that a document which, in its inception, had nothing to do with Belgian law could afterwards become subject to it; &, therefore, there must be judgment for pltfs. on their claim, subject to a reference.—THE ST. JOSEPH, [1933] P. 119; 102 L. J. P. 49; 149 L. T. 352; 49 T. L. R. 367; 18 Asp. 375.

702a. —— Contract between foreign broker & English broker—Right of cancellation as between foreign broker & principal—Governed by lex loci contractus.]—By English law, an underwriter acknowledging in a policy of marine insurance that the assured has paid the premiums, the policy cannot be cancelled by the insurance broker on the ground that he has not received the premiums from the assured, without the authority of the assured. But where a Canadian assured instructs in the United States an American insurance broker to effect an insurance in England, which he must do through an English broker, the law applicable on this question of right of cancellation is that of the country where the relation of principal & agent is created—that of the United States. In such a case, the English broker, who is liable to the English underwriter for the premium, cannot sue the assured. but looks to the American broker, who, in turn, looks to the assured for payment:—Held: the question in such a case was one of foreign law—here, that of New York State—& therefore of fact; the ct. accordingly found that the American broker could cancel such a policy on the ground that the assured had failed to supply him with the premium, with the assent of the underwriter, but without the assent of the assured who had failed to pay the premium.—RUBY S.S. The co. had a branch in London & in most of the capitals of Europe, the branch in Paris being its head office for Europe. The general manager of the London branch had no general authority to issue policies in this country. Certain life policies signed by the president & secretary of the co. & countersigned by the general manager for Europe, were issued in London to German nationals before the outbreak of the war. The policies were not under seal. The policy moneys were expressed to be payable in London, but all premiums were payable either at the central office in New York or at the office where the insurance was payable, & proofs of death were to be furnished at the New York office. An indorsement on the policy provided that it should be construed according to English law:—Held: it was permissible & necessary to look at the terms of the contracts & to determine from them at what place the debts would be recoverable; applying that test in the present case, the debts were recoverable in London where they were expressed to be payable.—NEW YORK LIFE INSURANCE CO. v. PUBLIC TRUSTEE, [1924] 2 Ch. 101; 93 L. 705a. Insurance against loss by forged document—Governed by English law—Insurance in London—Business carried on in New York.]—Pltfs., who carried on business in New York, took out a policy of insurance in London against loss which they might incur by having acted upon any document which might prove "to have been forged." During the currency of the policy pltfs. were induced to lend money to a firm by a document containing a false statement of the firm's assets & liabilities. Before the whole of the loan had been repaid the firm became bkpt., & the pltfs. sued an underwriter on the policy. By the law of the State of New York forgery includes "a false statement of financial condition." A member of the firm had since been convicted in New York of forgery. Pltfs. contended that the word "forged" in the policy must be construed by the law of New York where the loss occurred, & that therefore it was immaterial if the document was not a forgery according to English law:—Held: even if the document was a forged document according to the law of New York the word "forged" was used in the policy merely to describe an existing state of fact & not as a term of art to be construed according to the law of the place where the loss happened, & accordingly the action failed.—EQUITABLE TRUST CO. 732a. —— Goods to be smuggled into foreign country—Not enforceable in England.]—F., a financier, L., a distiller, D. & M., a firm of shipbrokers, & one A. were minded to load a ship with a cargo of whisky to be carried across the Atlantic & sold in the U.S. or at some point from which it could easily be smuggled into the U.S., in violation of the laws of that country. D. & M. entered into a contract to buy a steamer for £2,565; F. advanced £250 as a deposit on the purchase. On Oct. 26, 1927, an agreement was entered into between F., L. & D. & M., whereby L. agreed to sell to D. & M. 7,500 cases of whisky

L. agreed to lend D. & M. £2,500 (£1,000 at 8 per cent. per annum & £1,500 at 40 per cent. per annum interest) for the purchase of the steamer, the loan to be secured by a first mtge. on the steamer. F. agreed to lend D. & M. £1,000 at 40 per cent. per annum interest to be secured by a second mtge. on the steamer. D. & M. agreed to insure the steamer for £1,000 against all risks including seizure or confiscation & £2,500 against marine risks & deliver to L. cover notes for £1,500 & £1,000 & to F. a cover note for £1,000. F. & L. agreed jointly to underwrite the insurance for £1,000 against confiscation at a figure to be agreed in the event of the ordinary market rate exceeding thirty guineas per cent. 738a. Payment of rent by bills on London—Illegal exchange transaction.]—Resps. were jointly bound to fulfil the obligations contained in leases of premises in Santiago de Chile granted by the predecessors in title of applts. The leases provided the following way in which the rents should be payable: "Payment shall be effected monthly in advance in Santiago de Chile on the first day of each month by first class bills on London." In 1931, Chilean legislation supervened which resps. maintained prevented them from acquiring foreign exchange in Chile or from paying the rents in Chile by drafts on London without the authorisation of the committee established by the legislation to control exchanges, & that requests by them for such authorisation from time to time had been refused by the committee. The Chilean legislation established a control of international operations of exchange & the transfer of funds abroad, entrusting such control to a committee or commission. The legislation defined international exchange transactions as "the purchase & sale of all kinds of currency & gold in any form & the bills of exchange, cheques, drafts, letters of credit, telegraphic orders, & documents of any other nature requiring the transfer of funds from Chile or vice versa." Conflicting evidence by Chilean experts was given as to the meaning in Chile of first class bills on London. The evidence accepted was that "payable in Chile in first class bills on London" had a special mercantile meaning in Chile—namely, "bills drawn in Chile by one or other of a select list of bankers & mercantile houses in Chile upon one or other of a select list of bankers & mercantile houses in London" & these were known technically as F. C. L. bills. An advocate in Chile who had been Minister of Justice gave evidence that the F. C. L. bills came within the mischief of the Chilean legislation:—Held: the Chilean legislation made it impossible for the rent to be paid as directed, as the mode of payment as already interpreted would have been an international exchange transaction within the meaning of the Chilean legislation.—DE BEÉCHE v. SOUTH AMERICAN STORES, LTD., & CHILIAN STORES, LTD., [1935] A. The second deft., the South American Stores, joined in the lease as guarantor, but so as to become jointly responsible as primary obligor under the contract. The South American Stores carried on business in the Argentine. All parties by the lease elected domicil in Chile. There was evidence that there was no verbal agreement that the rental should be fixed on a gold basis. In July, 1935, the owner served a notice as follows: "Please take note, till further notice, of my option & of the following instructions," & then followed instructions for payment in sterling on a gold basis:—Held: (1) the contract must be construed according to Chilean law, even though part of the performance of it was to be in England; (2) evidence of the intention of the parties which would be admissible in a Chilean ct. to interpret the contract is admissible in England; (3) neither party had any intention other than that expressed in the contract as interpreted by experts on Chilean law; (4) the rent to be paid had been specified as an amount of Chilean money, & not as an amount of gold; (5) the rent was to be remitted from Chile, & no claim could be made to have it remitted from the Argentine by the guarantors.—ST. a i. ——— Debentures payable in particular place.]—Deft., a municipal corpn. in New Zealand, duly constituted under the Municipal Corps. Act, 1933, borrowed from pltf., a life assurance society incorporated in the State of Victoria, moneys by way of special loans, & issued to the pltf. debentures for the amount so borrowed, whereby the principal & interest was made payable in Victoria. The loan was made & secured by a special rate on rateable property in New Zealand & the debentures given under & in accordance with the Local Bodies' Loans Act, 1913 (now 1926). The loan-moneys were paid in New Zealand, the debentures were executed in New Zealand, &, in the event of default by deft., pltf. could not effectively obtain relief except in the Supreme Ct. of New Zealand. The Financial Emergency Act, 1931 (Victoria), s. 19 (1), enacted that except as therein provided every mtge. shall . . . be construed & take effect as if it were a term of the mtge. that on & from the coming into operation of Part III . . . the interest payable under the mtge. should be reduced at a rate equivalent to four shillings & sixpence for every pound of such interest. It was provided by sub-s. (2) that the provisions of the sect. or of any order made under that particular Division of the Act should not operate so as to reduce the interest payable under any mtge. to a rate less than five pounds per centum per annum. It was enacted by sect. 22 (1) that every payment of interest made in pursuance of that particular Division of the Act or of an order made thereunder should be a full discharge of the mtgor.'s liability for interest under his mtge. in respect of the period to which such payment related. Pltf. sued deft. for the difference between the amount of interest payable under the debentures & the amount actually paid by defts.—viz., the reduced amount that would be payable if the Victorian Act applied:—Held: (1) deft. was not entitled to the reduction enacted by the Victorian Act; (2) the proper law of the contract as to its nature & effect was the law of New Zealand, including the obligation to pay interest & the quantum thereof; (3) even if the law of Victoria governed the mode of performance, the Victoria Act did not relate to the mode of performance but effected a variation of an obligation imposed & of an amount payable fixed by the Legislature of New Zealand (as well as by the intention of the parties), which could not be overriden by foreign law.—AUSTRALASIAN TEMPERANCE & GENERAL ASSURANCE CORPN., LTD. v. MOUNT ALBERT BOROUGH, [1936] N. 926a. Parties domiciled in country where decree sought — Validity of marriage in dispute.]—(1) Where the validity of a marriage is in dispute the ct. of the domicil of the parties has jurisdiction, whether it is an exclusive jurisdiction or not, to pronounce a decree of nullity of marriage.

(2) A decree of nullity of marriage pronounced by a ct. of competent jurisdiction, whatever be the ground of the decree, is a judgment determining status & is equivalent to a judgment in rem.

(3) Where the parties are domiciled in a foreign country a decree of nullity of marriage pronounced by a competent ct. of that country will, in the absence of fraud or collusion, be recognised as binding & conclusive by the cts. of England & Scotland, unless it offends against British notions of substantial justice.—SALVESEN (OR VON LORANG) v. AUSTRIAN PROPERTY ADMINISTRATOR, [1927] A. 926b. Jurisdiction dependent on domicil.]—A decree annulling a marriage on the ground of impotence is a judgment in rem altering the status of the parties, & can be pronounced only by the ct. of their domicil. A decree annulling a marriage on this ground deals with a marriage which till the date of the decree was voidable only & not void. In substance it is a decree for the dissolution of that marriage, & is thus distinguished from decrees annulling marriages for illegality or informality.—INVERCLYDE (OTHERWISE TRIPP) v. INVERCLYDE, [1931] P. 29; 100 L. He then returned to Vancouver & in Apr. 1926, he, with another woman, went to Bellingham in Washington, where they went through a form of marriage before a magistrate & returned to Vancouver. Petitioner filed her petition herein in May, 1929. The law of the State of Oregon requires that pltf. in a divorce action must have been a resident & inhabitant of the State of Oregon one year next prior to the commencement of the suit & the Supreme Ct. of the State has defined domicil, residence & inhabitance as synonymous in relation to divorce proceedings:—Held: on the evidence, resp. did not renounce his British Columbia domicil, he was not in the ordinary meaning of the words a "resident" or "inhabitant" of the State of Oregon & did not acquire a domicil there. Domicil being the governing factor, there was no jurisdiction in the cts. of the State of Oregon to grant a decree of divorce, & petitioner herein should be granted a decree absolute.—BIGGAR v. BIGGAR, [1930] 2 D. In the present case the husband was domiciled in the English legal sense in Oregon when the wife obtained a decree of divorce in California on the ground of wilful desertion:—Held: after receiving expert evidence of the law of Oregon & of the effect of "the full faith & credit clause" of the U.S. Constitution, that under the law of Oregon the wife could not claim a separate residence from that of her husband so as to transfer jurisdiction over a divorce action between them to another state than that of his domicile unless he had given her cause by wilful desertion; &, since the question whether the wife had acquired the right on said ground to establish a separate domicile or residence in California was one going to the root of the jurisdiction of the California Ct., said "full faith & credit clause" would not compel the Oregon Ct. to recognise the California decree without inquiring whether she had acquired said right.—WYLLIE v. MARTIN, [1931] 3 W. The husband had agreed to the decree being made. Thinking herself free, the wife went through a form of marriage with another man & lived with him as his wife. The first husband, who was domiciled in England, now petitioned for the dissolution of his marriage, citing the second man as co-respondent. 946b. Foreign court without jurisdiction to grant decree of nullity.]—The disability of a foreigner to marry in England otherwise than in accordance with the law of his country as regards matters of form is a disability of which he can divest himself at will & therefore constitutes no objection to the validity of a marriage contracted by him in England in English form. A decree of a foreign ct. invalidating such a marriage is recognisable in England only if the foreign ct. has jurisdiction over the marriage & even then is open to examination. Want of jurisdiction cannot be cured by mere consent of the parties. A decree of a foreign ct. purporting to annul an English marriage under these circumstances is not severable, & if it is incompetent to annul the marriage, neither is it competent to award maintenance or a lump sum in lieu of maintenance.

The husband, a domiciled Cypriot, married a Frenchwoman in England in English form. Afterwards he repudiated the marriage on the ground that it was not in form in accordance with the law of his domicil. Later, on proceedings by the wife in a Cypriot ct., the marriage was declared null on the same ground by consent of the parties, & it was further declared that the husband should pay the wife a lump sum in satisfaction of all claims, including maintenance. The Cypriot ct. by the terms of its constitution had no jurisdiction to annul a marriage. Still later, the wife, finding the husband in England, took out a summons against him for neglect to maintain her under the Summary Jurisdiction (Separation & Maintenance) Acts, 1895 to 1925. The summary jurisdiction ct., upholding the marriage, ordered the husband to pay maintenance:—Held: the marriage was good & the agreement to set it aside illegal, that the decree of the ct. in Cyprus was pronounced without jurisdiction in compromising maintenance as well as in annulling the marriage, & that the order of the ct. of summary jurisdiction must stand, the measure of maintenance within the limits of the Summary Jurisdiction Act being the means of the parties at the time of the proceedings.—PAPADOPOULOS v. PAPADOPOULOS, [1930] P. 55; 99 L. Both parties had submitted to the jurisdiction of the ct. & the decree was pronounced on grounds that by insulting behaviour & incompatibility of temper the wife had failed to fulfil her marriage obligations. M. then applied for a revocation of the maintenance order. The justices refused the application for the following reasons: (i) they considered that the fact that the marriage had been dissolved in Germany on grounds which would not be recognised in England was not a sufficient reason for them to discharge the order, & (ii) the wife's financial position had not changed & was such that she required the maintenance payable under the order for her support, & the justices therefore exercised their discretion in her favour. The husband appealed:—Held: (1) the decree of the German ct. was valid & binding throughout the world & the justices were not concerned with the question whether the grounds of 951a. ——.]—A husband & wife were married in 1916. In 1922 they went to America, where they settled, the husband getting employment. In 1925 the husband deserted his wife & in 1926 at the husband's request the wife visited certain lawyers in America, where she saw the husband. He said he had decided to take divorce proceedings against her & that he would pay her a certain weekly sum & give her the custody of the child of the marriage. The wife agreed to this, & a divorce petition was duly filed by the husband alleging cruelty by the wife, & alleging that he "resides in & is an inhabitant of the State of Michigan." No answer was put in by the wife, she did not take the point that the husband was not domiciled in that State, & she did not defend the case. A decree was duly made. The wife returned to England &, in order to test the validity of the American divorce, she brought a petition for divorce in England alleging adultery by the husband with the woman whom he had married since the American divorce:—Held: (1) it was clear from the evidence that the husband was domiciled in the State of Michigan when he filed his petition for divorce, & the decree granted in that State was a valid one. The wife, being a single woman, could not, therefore, bring a petition for divorce in England; (2) the American decree was not invalidated by the fact that the interview between the parties at the lawyers might in England be considered to amount to collusion.—CROWE v. CROWE, [1937] 2 All E. 952a. Decree made by mistake—Authority to appear for petitioner withdrawn.]—In this undefended suit the wife petitioned for the dissolution of her marriage on the ground of her husband's adultery in Egypt. Resp., who was engaged in business in Egypt, appeared under protest to the jurisdiction & said that he was domiciled in Egypt. An order was made for the trial of the issue prior to the hearing of the suit, but later resp. abandoned his plea to the jurisdiction. At the hearing the judge drew the attention of counsel to the fact that petitioner had in 1930 petitioned for divorce in Egypt, & had been granted in May, 1930, a decree nisi of divorce in H.M. Ct. at Alexandria; that the husband had given evidence in that suit, though it was undefended, & had given evidence that he was domiciled in Egypt. The hearing was adjourned for the production of the ct. record from Alexandria, which was forthcoming at the resumed hearing:—Held: the proceedings in Egypt amounted to nothing at all, because petitioner had withdrawn all authority from anybody to appear in the cts. of that country. The judge at Alexandria was not informed of that fact, & he proceeded with the suit on the footing that she was represented, whereas she was not. The domicile was really English. PART XII. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 1.—F.

n i. —— —— Marriage to domiciled Englishman—Effect of English divorce decree.]—A domiciled Englishman & a domiciled Scotswoman entered into an ante-nuptial marriage contract which contained this clause, "It is hereby declared that these presents shall be interpreted & the rights of the parties regulated by the law of Scotland." The wife obtained decree of divorce in the English cts. :—Held : the rights of parties under the contract arising on divorce fell to be regulated in the same manner as if decree of divorce had been pronounced by the Scottish cts.—DRUMMOND v. BELL-IRVING, [1930] S. C. 704.—SCOT.

PART XIII. SECT. 2.

1015 i. As to property—Father entitled by law of infant's domicil.]—An infant domiciled in Indore, India, was absolutely entitled to a fund in ct., & by the law of the Indore State her father as legal guardian both of her person & property was entitled to receive & give legal discharges for all moneys coming to her during minority. The father applied for payment out of the fund to him for the benefit of the infant :—Held : the father was not entitled as of right to the fund, but the ct. must be satisfied by evidence that the fund was to be applied for the benefit of the infant & in what manner. —DHARAMAL v. HOLM PATRICK (LORD), [1935] I. R. 760.—IR.

r ii. —— Divorce proceedings commenced in Alberta—Removal of children by father to another Province.]—Where the husband is domiciled in Alberta at the time an action for divorce is begun, the Supreme Ct. of Alberta has jurisdiction in such action to make an order awarding the custody of the children to the mother even though they have been removed by the father to a foreign State & are residing therein at the time of the application for the order.—GOFORTH v. GOFORTH (Alta.), [1929] 1 D. Compare No. 1117 i., post.

s i. —— Decree by Serbian court—Whether Scottish court will enforce.]—Decree of divorce & for the custody of the child of the marriage had been obtained in the Serbian cts. by a Serbian, resident in Belgrade, against his wife, who was a Scotswoman. The child, a girl of 8 years of age, was resident with her mother in Scotland. In a petition to the ct. in Scotland by the father for custody of the child, the mother averred that it would be prejudicial to the health, welfare, & interests of the child that the petition should be granted :—Held : while petitioner's right to custody of the child had already been settled by a competent ct., the Scottish ct. was entitled, before ordering delivery of the child, to be informed of petitioner's arrangements for the conveyance of the child to Belgrade, & for her reception there.—RADOYEVITCH v. RADOYEVITCH, [1930] S. C. 619.—SCOT.

PART XIII. SECT. 3.

t i. —— —— Court of husband's domicil.]—In a petition brought by the wife of a domiciled Scotsman for custody of the only child of the marriage, or otherwise for access, the husband maintained that the Scottish ct., even if it had jurisdiction, could not pronounce any effective order. The husband, when the question of jurisdiction was raised, was residing in New York, where he held a professional appointment; petitioner was living in London, & the child, under the care of her paternal grandmother, was in France :—Held : the Ct. of Session, as the ct. of the husband's domicil, had jurisdiction to determine the questions of custody & access; the mere fact that the parties were outwith Scotland did not render ineffectual any decree which it might pronounce since such decree being a decision as to status, was a judgment in rem universally binding.—PONDER v. PONDER, [1932] S. 1054 xv. —— ——.]—Deft., who was resident & domiciled in Ontario, was served there with a writ of summons by which an action for the price of goods sold & delivered was commenced against him in the Superior Ct. of Quebec. The cause of action arose partly at least in Ontario. He did not appear & judgment was entered against him by default. In an action upon that judgment brought in Ontario by same pltf. against same deft., the latter pleaded that the Quebec judgment was of no effect in Ontario :—Held : the provisions of Judicature Act, R. S. O., 1927, ss. 51, 52, enacted by an Act of the Province of Canada, 1860, must be confined to actions upon judgments obtained in Quebec which, according to the principles of international law are entitled to extra-territorial recognition, i.e. to those cases in which the writ was served within Quebec upon a person domiciled & resident therein & who owed allegiance to the laws of Quebec.—LUNG v. LEE, [1929] 1 D. Before she was ready to leave, L. brought an action against the master in the Turkish ct. on the ground that the ship was about to be removed without security having been given. By order of the Turkish ct. the ship was arrested, &, as the master had no evidence of what had been done in London & L. took an oath that security had not been given, the Turkish ct. awarded L. £23,890. Foreign Judgments (Reciprocal Enforcement) Act, 1933 (c. 13), s. 1—Canadian judgment—No order relating to Canada—Right to bring action on judgment.]—Deft. brought an action against pltf. co. in the Supreme Ct. of Ontario. The action was dismissed with costs, & an appeal to the Ct. of Appeal in Ontario was also dismissed with costs. The costs were duly taxed & a part of them paid or satisfied by money paid in by deft. Deft. gave notice of appeal to the Privy Council &, as required by the rules of ct. of the Ct. of Appeal of Ontario, he gave security for the costs of that appeal. Pltf. co. sought to recover in England the balance of the costs payable in respect of the earlier proceedings. Deft. contended that pltf. co. could not sue upon the Ontario judgment, having regard to (i) the Administration of Justice Act, 1920 (c. 81), s. 9 (1); (ii) Foreign Judgments (Reciprocal Enforcement) Act, 1933 (c. 13), ss. 1, 6, 7, & Reciprocal Enforcement of Judgments (General Application to His Majesty's Dominions, etc.) Order, 1933; & (iii) the fact that deft. had given notice of appeal to the Privy Council & had given security for the costs of that appeal:—Held: (1) there was nothing in the Act of 1920 forbidding the bringing of an action in England on a colonial judgment; (2) as no order in council under sect. 1 of the Act of 1933 had been made specifying that the Act should extend to Ontario & the Supreme Ct. of Ontario should be deemed to be a superior ct. for the purposes of the Act, pltf. co. was not entitled to register its judgment under sect. 2 of the 1933 Act & its action was therefore not barred by sect. 6 of the same Act; (3) as deft. had not given security, as required by the Revised Statutes of Ontario, 1927, c. 86, s. 3 (d) for payment of the sums claimed if the appeal to the Privy Council were dismissed, there could be no stay of pltf. co.'s right to recover the sums claimed.—YUKON CONSOLIDATED GOLD CORPN., LTD. v. CLARK, [1937] 2 All E. On an application to have the judgment for costs of the High Ct. registered in the Supreme Ct., so that it might be enforced in New Zealand:—Held: (1) co-respondent did not voluntarily appear or otherwise submit or agree to submit to the jurisdiction of that ct.; (2) even if such entry of appearance did amount to submitting to the High Ct.'s jurisdiction, it would not be just & convenient for the judgment to be enforced in New Zealand.—REDHEAD v. REDHEAD & CROTHERS, [1926] N. sn. Reciprocal Enforcement of Judgments Act, 1925—Scope of Act.]—Reciprocal Enforcement of Judgments Act, 1925, does not permit the registration of a judgment obtained in a province or territory of the Dominion of Canada to which the Act applies unless the judgment is one which could be enforced by action thereon in Alberta. The Act does not make the judgments to which it applies any less "foreign" judgments or any more directly enforceable than before the Act was passed, & does not alter the rules of private international law as to the recognition to be given to foreign judgments. Therefore a judgment obtained in another province, under the rules thereof permitting service ex juris, against a deft. who was not resident or present in that province & did not submit to the jurisdiction of the ct. by contract or appearance is not one which is registrable under the Act. that of "ship's creditors." The ship was subsequently arrested in England at the suit of other necessaries men & sold by order of the English ct. Further claims were brought against her by a mtgee. & other necessaries men, & these, as well as the German firm, in due course obtained judgment, in default of appearance, against the proceeds of the sale of the ship. On a motion to determine priorities it was argued for the German suppliers of bunkers that the law applicable was the German Commercial Code, by which "ship's creditors" were given priority not only over other necessaries men but also over a mtgee., & also were given the equivalent of a maritime lien, which entitled them to follow the ship or her proceeds into the hands of subsequent owners: — Held: any rights possessed by the claimants under German law were of no value unless & until they were enforced by the arrest of the vessel in the German cts.; the question of priorities must be determined by the lex fori, under which the claimants as necessaries men had no maritime lien or special rights over the heads of a mtgee. or other necessaries men.—THE ZIGURDS (No. 1), [1932] P. 113; 101 L. 1325a. —— Plaintiff in England defendant abroad.]—A Greek vessel & an Argentine vessel came into collision in the River Parana; the Argentine vessel sank, &, it was alleged, became a total loss.

On Sept. 30, 1936, proceedings were instituted in the Argentine by the owners of the sunken ship, an Argentine corpn.; the owner of the Greek ship put in a counter-claim, but on Oct. 27 withdrew it. Meanwhile, on Sept. 30, he had issued the writ in the present proceedings in this country, & served it by leaving a copy at the London office of the Argentine Corpn. which had been established for the purpose of the transfer & registration of shares. The Argentine Corpn. moved to set aside the writ, or alternatively to stay the proceedings, on the grounds, amongst others, (a) that the corpn. only carried on business within the jurisdiction so far as claims connected with the share register were concerned; (b) that the proceedings were vexatious & oppressive as there was an action pending in Argentina, where all the corpn.'s witnesses as well as the chief witnesses for the Greek ship resided; & further that pltf. had no effective remedy, inasmuch as Argentine law must be applied in this country, under which, if a vessel was a total loss, liability being limited to the property available, her owners were under no liability at all. By Cos. Act, 1929 (c. 23), s. 352, the expression "place of business" includes a share transfer office:

(1) as the corpn. had a place of business within the jurisdiction it was amenable to the jurisdiction for all purposes & not merely to the limited jurisdiction suggested; (2) pltf.'s action could not be stayed merely because he was deft. elsewhere; it could not be said, as in Dawkins v. Prince Edward of Saxe Weimar (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 499; 38 Digest 79, 566, that on the facts of the declaration no cause of action was shown; & the question whether pltf.'s claim was groundless depended on facts which he was entitled to have tried, & accordingly the motion failed.—THE MADRID, [1937] P. 40; [1937] 1 All E. Before the action in America had been brought to trial pltfs. issued a fresh writ in rem in England, & on Feb. 27, 1926, re-arrested the ship in the Thames. On Mar. 4 defts. served notice of motion to set aside the writ & all subsequent proceedings in the English action. 1383a. — — —— ——.]—On June 13, 1922, a British steamer & a Finnish steamer were in collision in the river Maas, Holland. After the collision the Finnish owners threatened arrest in a Dutch port. The owners of the British steamer who were anxious that the litigation should take place in England, reluctantly instructed their agents in Holland to provide bail, & although no proceedings were begun, documents in identical terms in the nature of bank guarantees to provide bail if proceedings were commenced within three months were exchanged on July 29 between the owners. On Sept. 6 the Finnish vessel came within the jurisdiction of the English cts., & an action was commenced, & the ship arrested & bail given under protest at the suit of the owners of the British ship. At that time no proceedings had been begun in Holland, but on Sept. 14 an action was commenced in Holland by the Finnish owners. The Finnish owners moved that the writ & all proceedings in the action by the British owners should be stayed, on the ground that their action was oppressive because it required the Finnish owners to give bail in two cts., & was inequitable as a breach of faith of the agreement in Holland :—Held : no legal proceedings having been commenced when the writ was issued in England, & there being no arrest & no bail given prior to the writ now sought to be set aside, there was nothing to debar the British owners from carrying on proceedings in England.—THE JUNO (1922), 128 L. 7a. —— In foreign parts.]—There is no legal duty on the Crown to afford by its military forces protection to British subjects in foreign parts. If, in the exercise of its discretion, the Crown decides to afford such protection, it may lawfully stipulate that it will do so only on the condition that the cost shall be borne by those asking for it.

Pltfs., an English shipping co. trading in the China seas, requested the Crown to provide armed guards to be placed on board their ships as a protection against internal piracy, which was a serious menace at the material time. Armed guards having been provided on the terms that they should be paid for by the pltfs., the latter claimed a declaration that as British subjects they were entitled to protection without payment:—Held: there was no duty on the Crown to afford military protection to pltfs. in foreign parts, & if it did afford protection it was entitled to do so on such terms as it thought fit.—CHINA NAVIGATION CO., LTD. v. A.-G., [1932] 2 K. 58a. Crown cannot seize subject's property without compensation—What amounts to seizure.]—Assuming that the Crown has no right at common law to take a subject's property for reasons of State without paying compensation, that rule can only apply, if it does apply, to a case where property is actually taken possession of or used by the Govt., or where, by the order of a competent authority, it is placed at the disposal of the Govt., & a mere negative prohibition, though it involves interference with an owner's enjoyment of property, does not, merely because it is obeyed, carry with it at common law any right to compensation.—FRANCE FENWICK & CO. v. R., [1927] 1 K. Classification Rules, 1920–24, made under sect. 96B (2) of Govt. of India Act, 1919 (c. 101), was not followed at the official inquiry which preceded the dismissal. Applt.'s employment, however, was not of a limited & special kind during pleasure with an added contractual term that the procedure prescribed by the Rules must be observed; it was by the express terms of sect. 96B held "during His Majesty's pleasure," & no right of action as claimed by the applt. existed. The terms of sect. 96B assure that the tenure of office, though at pleasure, will not be subject to capricious or arbitrary action, but will be regulated by the rules, which are manifold in number, most minute in particularity & all capable of change, but there was no right in applt., enforceable by action, to hold his office in accordance with with those rules, & he could therefore be dismissed notwithstanding the failure to observe the procedure prescribed by them. Sect. 96B & the rules make provision for the redress of grievances by administrative process.—VENKATA RAO v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA, [1937] A. C. 248; 106 L. J. P. C. 53; 156 L. T. 261, P. 83 iv. —— —— ——.]—Apart from some special statutory provision, no action will lie against the Crown for the wrongful dismissal of a servant of Govt. This rule of law is based upon public policy & the prerogative right of the Sovereign. In Government of India Act, 1919, s. 96B, the words "subject to the provisions of this Act & of rules made thereunder every person in the Civil Service of the Crown in India holds office during His Majesty's pleasure," read together with r. 14 of the rules regarding the Civil Services in India made by the Secretary of State providing for—proper departmental inquiry, indicate that certain formalities must be observed before a civil servant can be dismissed. In so far as these formalities are alleged not to have been followed, pltf. has a cause of action.—BARONI v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA (1929), I. L. R. 8 Ran. 215.—IND.

83 v. —— —— ——.]—At common law, where the Crown is the employer, & the office is not an ancient office with special incidents, the employment, whether it be permanent or temporary, is during pleasure only, & the Crown servant may be dismissed at any time without notice. This right in the Crown exists, notwithstanding any provision in the contract of employment to the contrary unless, in a particular case, it is excluded by Statute. Such exclusion may be implied where a Statute prescribes special conditions for dismissal as the case may be. Where there is a suspension of an officer, this may operate not to vacate the office, but to relieve the officer from the performance of his duties whilst leaving him absolutely or conditionally entitled to his salary; or it may operate as a temporary suspension of the whole contract of employment.—BROWNE v. RAILWAYS COMR. On July 31, 1931, his occupancy of the position was terminated by sect. 26 of Unemployment Amendment Act, 1931. F. claimed damages for the wrongful termination of his employment:—Held: (1) the office of membership of the Unemployment Board as constituted by Unemployment Act, 1930, was abolished by sect. 26 of the Amendment Act, 1931; (2) even if the office had not been abolished, the Crown's absolute power of dismissal of a servant of the Crown at any time without incurring liability for damages or compensation was not restricted by Unemployment Act, 1930, or by the Unemployment Act, 1931; (3) there was no contractual relationship between the Crown & the suppliant as appointee to the office—he was simply gazetted as appointed to the Unemployment Board of 1930; he could resign at any time, & there was no provision for his remuneration; &, since there was no animus contrahendi, a valid claim could not be established against the Crown.—FINN v. R., [1933] N. Misapplication of powers delegated by Provincial Legislature.]—The delegate of a provincial Legislature can no more usurp indirectly the functions of the Parliament of Canada than can the Legislature itself, & it is the duty of the cts. to interfere to protect the subject from such an illegitimate exercise of powers founded upon oblique motives. On appeal from the dismissal of an action for an injunction restraining the defts. from taking further proceedings under Security Frauds Prevention Act, 1930, in alleged pursuance of "delegated authority" under sect. 10 of said Act :—Held : deft. A.-G. by & through his delegated representative had unconstitutionally misapplied the powers delegated to him, in that the purpose of his proceedings was to aid a criminal prosecution, something which was not contemplated by the Act, with the result that the federal field had been just as much invaded, even if indirectly, as if the primary invasion had been accomplished directly by the passing of an Act which in its terms was a violation of the B. 240a. Claim that right of administration of premises vested in Crown—Crown must be represented.]—Government House, Sydney, was built upon Crown land about 1845 as a residence for the Governor of New South Wales, &, with the stables of a former residence, was continuously so used until 1900. From 1900 to 1912, by an arrangement between the Governments of the Commonwealth & of the State, the premises were occupied by the Governor-General, & another residence was provided for the Governor of the State. In 1912, this arrangement having come to an end, the State Government threw the grounds attached to the house open to the public & took steps to convert the stables into a school of music. By the New South Wales Constitution Act, 1855 (c. 54), s. 2, all "waste lands" in the then colony were placed under the control of the local Legislature. The A.-G. for New South Wales, at the relation of residents in the State, filed an information praying for declarations that the house & grounds were vested in His Majesty, dedicated to the public purpose of a residence for the Sovereign's representative in New South Wales, & that neither the Governor of New South Wales nor the Governor in Council had power to interfere with or alter that purpose,

317 i. Addition of Attorney-General—Action affecting rights of Crown—Petition of right not applicable.]—This was an appeal by the A.-G. for Manitoba from an order by which he was added as a deft. to an action brought against the University of Manitoba to enforce agreements under which pltfs. had agreed to donate certain land as a site for the University on the condition that the University expended a certain amount of money on the grounds & in the erection of buildings. Pltfs. had transferred to the University all of the land originally contemplated except 25 acres which, under an agreement with the provincial Govt., they transferred to the province as a site for a school for the deaf. The agreements with the University were confirmed by an order-in-council which also authorised the execution of the agreement made with the Crown. Pltfs. alleged that these agreements were interdependent, & that there was in reality a tri-partite bargain whereby the Govt. entered into the arrangement previously made by the Governors of the University, furnishing $500,000 for a school for the deaf as part of the general scheme for the erection of educational buildings. This contention the A.-G. denied. Pltfs. asked for specific performance & for an injunction restraining the University from doing anything at variance with its contract with pltfs., & from accepting any money from the Crown for the erection or maintenance of university buildings elsewhere than on said site. No relief was asked for against the Crown; all that was sought with respect to it was a declaratory judgment that the contracts & order-in-council were not ultra vires :—Held : the appeal should be dismissed, for the reasons : (a) the A.-G. should be a party to this action to represent

348a. —— In proceedings under Patents & Designs Acts.]—Appcts. applied by originating summons under Patents & Designs Act, 1907 (c. 29), s. 29, as amended by Patents & Designs Act, 1919 (c. 80), s. 8, for an inquiry as to the remuneration proper to be paid to them for the user by a Govt. department of the patented invention of which they were the registered owners. In the course of the proceedings, preliminary to hearing of the motion, orders were made in which the litigation was treated, with the acquiescence of both litigants, as subject to the ordinary rule as to costs, & on two occasions orders were made requiring appcts. to give security for costs. After the hearing had proceeded for some time appcts. withdrew their claim in view of a prior trial of the invention found to have been made on behalf of the Govt. which, by virtue of the proviso to Patents & Designs Act, 1919, s. 8, entitled the Govt. to make use of it thereafter without payment. On the question how the costs ought to be borne:—Held: (1) under that part of Patents & Designs Act, 1919, which authorised proceedings against a Govt. department, there was no express mention of costs, & the authority to deal with them was derived from the general jurisdiction of the ct., & the ct. had, therefore, no authority to depart from the common law rule that the Crown neither paid nor received costs, unless the special circumstances of the particular case justified it in so doing; (2) having regard to the orders that had been made before the hearing of the motion, & particularly to the two orders for security for costs, the ct. would infer an agreement between the parties that each of them should be treated as ordinary litigants as regarded liability for costs.—Re LETTERS PATENT NO. 139,207, Re CARBONIT AKT., [1924] 2 Ch. 53; 93 L. 387a. —— —— ——]—The Bank of Ethiopia was formed under the law of Ethiopia in 1931. It was a bank of issue & was the only bank in the Ethiopian Empire. In the autumn of 1935 hostilities began between Italy & the Ethiopian govt. & on May 1, 1936, the Emperor left the country. On May 5, 1936, the Italian army entered the capital & thereafter the affairs of the bank were carried on under the supervision of the representative of the Italian authorities. In Dec. 1936, the British govt. recognised the Italian govt. as being the de facto govt. of the area then under Italian control. On June 20, 1936, a govt. decree, valid according to the law as recognised & administered by the de facto govt., had placed the bank in liquidation & appointed a liquidator :—Held : (1) it was the duty of the ct. to treat the acts of the de facto govt. with all the respect due to the acts of a duly recognised foreign sovereign state, & this was not affected by the fact that the British govt. in addition to recognising a de facto govt., recognised the Emperor as a de jure monarch ; (2) the Bank of Ethiopia had been dissolved under or by virtue of the laws of the country under which it was incorporated, & had accordingly ceased to exist, except in so far as might be necessary for the liquidation of its affairs ; (3) no action could be brought in the name of the Bank of Ethiopia otherwise than by or under the authority of the duly constituted liquidator of the bank.—BANK OF ETHIOPIA v. NATIONAL BANK OF EGYPT & LIGUORI, [1937] Ch. 513 ; [1937] 3 All E. In 1918 a section of Russian revolutionaries took & retained possession of movables in Russia belonging to pltf. against her will. The act of those revolutionaries was subsequently adopted by the Soviet Govt. as the de jure Govt. of Russia. In 1928 the movables in question were sold in Russia by the Soviet Republic to defts., who brought them to England. In an action by pltf. to recover those movables or damages for their detention or conversion :—Held : the action failed, as the ct. could not inquire into the validity of the acts of a foreign sovereign Power which had been recognised by the Govt. of this country.—PALEY (PRINCESS OLGA) v. WEISZ, [1929] 1 K. Deft. in an action in the K. B. Div. for arrears of rent took out a summons to set aside the writ, on the ground that he was a member of the staff of the German Embassy, & filed two affidavits in support of his application. Pltf. applied for leave to cross-examine deft. upon his affidavits. The judge ordered deft. to attend for cross-examination. On appeal the A.-G. attended at the request of the Foreign Office, & on the invitation of the ct. informed them that deft. had been appointed a member of the staff of the German Ambassador under the style of consular secretary, & had been received in that capacity by the British Govt. :—Held : (1) the statement of the A.-G. was binding on the ct., & deft. was entitled to diplomatic privilege; (2) (LORD DUNEDIN) apart from that statement, the order for the cross-examination of deft. would have been justified.—ENGELKE v. MUSMANN, [1928] A. Pltf. brought an action for personal injuries against deft., & the latter served on the insurance co. a third-party notice claiming an indemnity. An appearance without protest was entered in the action on behalf of deft., &, as the Peruvian Minister forbade deft. to raise the plea of diplomatic immunity, no such plea was inserted in the defence. The jury found a verdict for pltf. for damages, & the insurance co. repudiated liability on the ground that deft. had broken the conditions of the policy by insisting that the plea of diplomatic immunity should not be raised :—Held : the privilege of diplomatic immunity was waived by the entry of appearance without protest.—DICKINSON v. DEL SOLAR, [1930] 1 K. sg. Calling out militia—Liability for expenses—Whether on Dominion or Province.]—The question referred to this ct. was whether the province of Nova Scotia was liable, or not, to pay to the Dominion of Canada all expenses & costs incurred by the latter by reason of part of the active militia of Canada being called out & serving in aid of the civil power in the county of Cape Breton in 1925, in a case of riot, upon a requisition, made by the A.-G. of Nova Scotia in the form prescribed by s. 85 of the Militia Act, which included an undertaking by him that these expenses & costs would be paid to the Dominion Govt. by the province :—Held : the question should be answered in the negative. Sects. 80 to 90 of the Militia Act repose certain powers in the person occupying the position of A.-G. in the province for the time being, but the exercise of these powers does not in any way depend upon the consent of the Lieutenant-Governor or of the provincial legislature. The Militia Act envisages the A.-G., not in his capacity as A.-G. to His Majesty as the Sovereign Head of the province, but as a person in whom certain powers are vested & on whom certain duties are laid by the statute. These sects. apply to every province & go into operation independently of the scope of the A.-G.'s authority to bind the province in respect of the expenditure of moneys for such purpose. Therefore these enactments do not contemplate a duty to pay, proceeding from a contract between the province & the Dominion. The revenues of the province are vested in His Majesty as the supreme head of the province, & the right of appropriation of all such revenues belongs to the legislature of the province exclusively. Semble : the A.-G., whose duties, in so far as now material, include the supervision of the administration of justice within the province, has no statutory authority to undertake the payment now demanded by the Dominion : the subject matters comprised within the supervision of the administration of justice would not embrace authority to enter into such an undertaking.—Re TROOPS IN CAPE BRETON, REFERENCE, [1930] S. Under Indemnity Act, 1920 (c. 48)—"Direct loss or damage"—What is.]—Claimants carried on business as motor garage proprietors in Dublin, where they owned & occupied extensive premises peculiarly well suited to their purposes. These premises were taken by the Govt. under powers conferred by statute for the defence of the realm. Claimants, having tried & failed to acquire premises temporarily, took the only reasonable course ; they bought other premises, fitted them for use as a garage, & transferred to them all the appliances of their business which they thus continued to carry on as well as they could. When the Govt. retired from possession of the original premises claimants sold the substituted premises. They alleged that the difference between the amount they had expended in acquiring the substituted premises & fitting them for use as a garage on the one hand, & the sum they received on the sale of the substituted premises on the other hand amounted to £3,429. They claimed this sum as an item of "direct loss or damage incurred or sustained by reason of interference with" their "property or business" within sect. 2 (1) (b) of the above Act :—Held : "direct loss or damage" may include consequential damage, & the item claimed could not be entirely excluded as indirect loss, but the amount to which claimants might be entitled in respect thereof must be assessed by the War Compensation Ct.—A. & B. 526a. Power to impose payment for licence to sell ship to foreigner—Recovery of money paid—Indemnity Act, 1920 (c. 48), s. 1 (1).]—The Shipping Controller, purporting to act in pursuance of his powers under Defence of the Realm Regulations, imposed upon suppliants as a condition of granting them a licence to sell a steamship to a foreigner the payment to him by suppliants of £30,800. By their petition of right suppliants alleged that the Shipping Controller had no lawful authority to impose a condition or to exact the payment, which suppliants had paid under protest, & that the Shipping Controller thereby became liable to repay the money to suppliants as money had & received to their use. The petition of right was not brought within one year from the termination of the war or within one year from the exaction of the money. The Crown demurred to the petition, on the ground that the case if founded on the alleged tort of the Shipping Controller was barred by the above sub-sect., & if based on an alleged breach of contract, the proceedings not having been brought within the prescribed time failed under proviso (b) of that sub-sect. A further ground of demurrer was that a petition of right would not lie against the Crown for tort, for the King could do no wrong. Suppliants contended that they were entitled to waive the tort & to sue for money had & received by the Shipping Controller & now in the hands of the Crown, & that their claim so grounded was not a proceeding for or in respect or on account of any act of the Shipping Controller, & therefore was not within the terms of the Act :—Held : the allegation that suppliants' money had been extorted from them by the wrongful act of the Shipping Controller was an essential part of suppliants' case, from which the claim for money had & received arose ; & as such act was one to which the above sub-sect. applied, the petition of right was barred by that sub-sect.—BRISTOL CHANNEL STEAMERS, LTD. v. R. 526b. —— —— ——.]—The Shipping Controller, purporting to act under the authority of Defence of the Realm Regulations, required as a condition of a licence to suppliants to sell one of their ships to a foreign firm that they should pay a percentage of the purchase money to the Ministry of Shipping, & suppliants paid the percentage. On a petition of right to recover back the money so paid :—Held : (1) the imposition of the condition was illegal, & the payment was not a voluntary payment ; (2) the petition of right was barred by the above sub-sect. ; it was not open to suppliants, by waiving the tort of the illegal exaction & suing for money had & received, to bring the case within par. (b) of the proviso to the sub-sect., for the case fell within the exception to the proviso as being one in which a claim for compensation could have been brought under sect. 2 (1) (b) ; (3) (BANKES & SARGANT, L.JJ.) suppliants failed to bring the case within the proviso upon the further ground that the contracts referred to in paragraph (b) are limited to express contracts, & do not include the fictitious contract to repay money improperly extorted, the implication of which arises upon a waiver of the tort.—BROCKLEBANK, LTD. v. R., [1925] 1 K. 526d. —— —— —— Transfer of liabilities incurred by Shipping Controller to Board of Trade—Whether action maintainable against Board of Trade.]—(1) Pltfs. in 1922 brought an action against the Board of Trade for money had & received. The money which it was sought to recover was alleged to have been wrongfully extorted from pltfs. in 1919 by the Shipping Controller under colour of his office, & it was alleged that, on pltfs. electing to waive the tort, he would have been personally liable to refund the money as having been received to their use. By Ministry of Shipping (Cessation) Order, 1921, it was provided that the office of Shipping Controller should cease to exist, & that "All . . . liabilities . . . incurred by the Shipping Controller . . . shall be transferred to the Board of Trade." The "Board of Trade" is the name given by statute to an unincorporated committee of the Privy Council. On an application to strike out the writ on the ground that the Board of Trade, as a department of the Crown, could not be sued :—Held : the intention of the Order was to transfer to the Board of Trade as a Govt. department the personal liabilities, if any such there were, of the Shipping Controller for any wrongful acts committed by him in his office, & the Board was liable to 534a. —— —— —— ——.]—A British ship lying in a neutral port & laden with a cargo of timber belonging to neutrals of another country was requisitioned during the war by the British Govt. & brought home with her cargo to England without the consent & against the protest of the cargo owners. The timber was then requisitioned by the Controller of Timber Supplies on behalf of the Board of Trade avowedly under Defence of the Realm Regulations, 2B & 2JJ. The owners of the cargo made a claim in the War Compensation Ct. for compensation & contended that it should be assessed under Indemnity Act, 1920 (c. 48), s. 2 (2) (iii.) (a), on the ground that in the circumstances they would but for the Act have had a legal right to compensation :—Held : (1) the regulations did not apply to a seizure of goods of a neutral brought into England against his will ; (2) the requisition of the timber was justifiable as an exercise of the royal prerogative right of angary & was, therefore, made " in exercise of " a " prerogative right to His Majesty " within s. 2 (1) (b) of the Act, & inasmuch as that right involved the obligation to pay full compensation to the owner of the property seized, claimants " would have had apart from " the Act a valid claim for compensation by petition of right, &, the Crown admitting that such a claim constituted " a legal right to compensation," compensation was to be assessed according to the principle laid down in s. 2 (2) (iii.) 558a. Restriction on right of action.]—Reg. 2A (2) of Defence of the Realm Regulations, which provides that " no person shall, without the consent of the Minister of Munition, take . . . any proceedings for the purpose of obtaining an order or decree for the recovery of possession of, or for the ejectment of a tenant of, any dwelling-house " in which a munition worker is living, & which is situate in an area declared by order of the Minister of Munitions to be a " special area," is not authorised by Defence of the Realm Consolidation Act, 1914 (c. 8), s. 1 (1), & is, therefore, invalid.

The only question for decision is whether this portion of the regulation is ultra vires the statute under which it purports to be made, that is to say, Defence of the Realm Consolidation Act, 1914. This depends upon whether it can be said, on any reasonable construction of the statute, to be a regulation for securing the public safety & the defence of the realm, &, particularly under sect. 1 (1) (e), whether it can be said to be a regulation to prevent the successful prosecution of the war being endangered (AVORY, J.).

It is true that the power to make a regulation to prevent the successful prosecution of the war being endangered is of a wide & sweeping character, but I decline to hold that Parliament intended by these general words to give to the executive the right to close any of the King's cts. against his subjects unless they obtained the sanction of a minister to resort thereto (SANKEY, J.).—CHESTER v. BATESON, [1920] 1 K. "Customs & usages" are words of tenure & not indicative of the manner in which the Indians are to use the land; moreover, there was no evidence that fishing with a seine was one of the customs of the Indians in 1793. By virtue of Assessionable Manors Act, 1844 (c. 105), s. 54, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, as Duke of Cornwall, was absolutely entitled to the mines & minerals within certain manors including that of C. Sect. 55 of the Act empowered the Duke, his agents & lessees, to enter upon all lands within the said manors, & all mines belonging to the Duke, & to open & work the same, & to erect all such buildings, machinery, etc., & do all such acts as should be " necessary or convenient for working the same mines," on making compensation to the surface owners. By sect. 69 it was provided that it should be lawful for the Duke, his agents & lessees, to pull down & remove all buildings, machinery, etc., no longer used for the purposes aforesaid, or to allow the same to remain, & no buildings should, by non-user or otherwise, be deemed to be abandoned, so as to vest any right or title therein in the owner of the land. Deft. was the owner by purchase of garden land adjoining two cottages at W. E. in the manor of C., & was also in possession of a house & garden at W. Z., the site of which she had purchased in 1902. This house was subsequently enlarged from one of six rooms into one of eleven rooms, with an additional wing. These alterations & some improvements to the garden cost £500, & were known to the mineral agent of the Duchy, who remained passive. The Duchy claimed that under the provisions of sects. 55 & 69 of the Act the two cottages & land at W. E. & the house & land at W. Z. had been originally erected, entered —— —— Legal effect expressly excluded.]—By successive arrangements made before 1913 between an American firm & an English co. the American firm were constituted sole agents for the sale in the United States & Canada of tissues for carbonising paper supplied by the English co. The greater part of these tissues was manufactured for this English co. by another English co. By an arrangement made between the American firm & both English cos. in 1913 the English cos. expressed their willingness that the existing arrangements with the American firm, which were then for one year only, should be continued on the same lines for three years & so on for further periods of three years, subject to six months' notice. This document, after setting out the understanding between the parties, including several modifications of the previous arrangements, proceeded as follows : " This arrangement is not entered into, nor is this memorandum written, as a formal or legal agreement, & shall not be subject to legal jurisdiction in the law cts. either of the United States or England, but it is only a definite expression & record of the purpose & intention of the three parties concerned, to which they each honourably pledge themselves, with the fullest confidence—based on past business with each other—that it will be carried through by each of the three parties with mutual loyalty & friendly co-operation. This is hereinafter referred to as the ' honourable pledge ' clause." Disputes having arisen between the parties, the English cos. determined this arrangement without notice. Before the relations between the parties were broken off the American firm had given & the first-mentioned English co. had accepted certain orders for goods. In an action by the American firm for breach of contract & for non-delivery of goods :—Held : (1) the arrangement of 1913 was not a legally binding contract ; (2) at the date of the arrangement of 1913 all previous agreements were determined by mutual consent ; (3) the orders given & accepted constituted enforceable contracts of sale.—ROSE & FRANK CO. v. CROMPTON (J. —— ——.]—Certain builders requested a firm of publishers to publish a builders' guide in connection with their estate, & by the terms of documents signed by both parties it was agreed that the publishers should prepare & publish the guide free of charge to the builders. It was further agreed that the publishers should be freed from the obligation of publishing the guide should in their opinion insufficient advertisement be obtained to justify publication. The publishers proceeded to carry out the terms of the documents thereby incurring expense. The builders then passed a resolution for a voluntary winding up, & the liquidators informed the publishers that they did not wish them to proceed with the guide. The publishers sought to be admitted as creditors in the winding up, alleging breach of the contract embodied in the above-mentioned documents, & they claimed damages in respect of the expenses incurred & loss of profits. The liquidators contended that the discretion given to the publishers by the terms of the document was so wide & of such a nature that no real obligation rested upon them, & that there was no binding contract between the parties :—Held : it must be implied in the documents that the publishers should only be freed from their obligations if in their reasonable & honest opinion insufficient advertisements were obtained & the obligations under the documents could not under this clause be arbitrarily determined by them. There was therefore a binding contract & the publishers were entitled to be admitted as creditors in the winding up.—Re BRAND ESTATES, LTD., [1936] 3 All E. R. 374.

B. died without making any payment, & the college claimed against his estate:—Held : the subscription was not binding. The only basis for sustaining it as a binding promise could be as a contract supported by a good & sufficient consideration; & such a consideration could not be found in the subscription paper itself, or in the circumstances as disclosed by the evidence. The words "in consideration of the subscription of others" in the subscription were insufficient to support the promise if, in point of law, the subscriptions of others could not provide a valid consideration therefor; & the fact that others had signed separate subscription papers for the same common object or were expected to do so did not of itself constitute a legal consideration.—DALHOUSIE COLLEGE v. BOUTILIER ESTATE, [1934] S. He accordingly claimed to be indemnified for this loss, which he estimated at £6,000, or, alternatively, to be recompensed in so far as the estate had benefited from his services. The ct. dismissed the action as irrelevant, holding that pursuer's averments did not import a legal claim enforceable against the deceased's executry, in respect (a) that nothing more was disclosed than a mere expression of intention on the part of the deceased to make the pursuer his heir; (b) that, even on the assumption that a definite promise of heirship was averred, such a promise could have been proved only by the writ of the deceased, & here admittedly no writ existed; (c) that no primâ facie case for indemnification on ground of equity was disclosed, the loss averred by the pursuer as a result of the deceased's representations being based solely on hypothetical calculations & not on actual outlay.—GRAY v. JOHNSTON, [1928] S. 403 ii. —— —— Whether motive for informing material.]—A reward was publicly offered by the Govt. of Western Australia "for such information as shall lead to the arrest & conviction of the person or persons who committed the murders" of two police officers. C. who knew of the offer, gave information that led to the arrest of one person, & the conviction of that person & another for the murder of one of those officers. By petition of right under Crown Suits Act, 1898, C. claimed payment of the reward:—Held: unless petitioner had performed the condition of the offer acting on the faith of or in reliance upon the offer, there was no acceptance of the offer, &, therefore, no contract between the parties.—R. v. CLARKE (1927), 40 C. offer to take the above premises on a 7, 14 or 21 years' lease at a rent of £350 per annum for the first 14 years, rising to £375 for the last 7 years. . . . We have instructed Mr. B.'s solrs. to put the draft lease in hand immediately to forward to your solrs. . . ." The draft lease was forwarded on the same day, & after negotiations as to its terms deft.'s solrs. wrote on Dec. 29. 1930, to pltf.'s solrs. : " We have now received our client's instructions on the draft lease, & he is prepared to accept your client's alterations. We are, therefore, having the lease engrossed, & will forward you a counterpart for execution by your client in due course." This was done, but deft. then refused to execute the lease, & on Jan. 24, 1931, granted a lease of the premises to some one else. On Feb. 3, 1931, pltf. commenced proceedings for specific performance, or, alternatively, damages :—Held : there was no binding contract to grant a lease, as the expression " subject to the terms of a lease " in the letter of Dec. 9, 1930, meant " subject to the terms to be contained in a lease executed by the lessor." It followed that even if deft.'s solrs. were the agents of deft. to communicate by their letter of Dec. 29, 1930, the fact that deft. had himself agreed to the terms of the lease, so that this letter was a sufficient memorandum of the agreement signed by deft.'s duly authorised agents within Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 40, there was no binding contract, because the result of the letter of Dec. 9, 1930, was that there could be no concluded agreement until the lease had been executed.—RAINGOLD v. BROMLEY, [1931] 2 Ch. 307 ; 100 L. 420a. —— —— ——.]—LORD CAIRNS indeed seems to have considered that, if the phrase [" subject to the title being approved by our solrs."] meant what the Ct. of Appeal thought it meant, it would follow that the purchaser was at liberty through the medium of his solr. to decline the title from mere caprice ; but none of the judges accepted this extreme view. It is reasonable, they thought, to imply good faith as a necessary ingredient. On the other hand, it seems to be putting an undue strain on the words to construe them, when used by a layman, as connoting not the approval of his own solr., which is their plain, ordinary meaning. but the decision of a ct. of justice after an unknown delay & at an unascertainable cost (MAUGHAM, J.).—CURTIS MOFFAT, LTD. v. WHEELER, [1929] 2 Ch. 224 ; 98 L. 430a. ——.]—By the arts. of assocn. of the T. Co., a private co., any member desiring to sell any of his shares must notify the Board of the number of shares. the price, & the name of the proposed transferee. & the Board must offer to the other shareholders the number of the shares offered at the price, & if the offer is accepted the shares shall be transferred to the acceptors. It is provided that " if the shares or any of them are not so accepted the holder may sell or transfer them or any of them at the same or any higher price . . . to third parties approved by the Board." The capital of the T. Co. was £600,000 in 600,000 shares of £1 each, which shares were held in equal parts by the O. Co., & the P. Co. The P. Co. gave notice to the Board that they were desirous of selling 135,000 of their shares to third parties at the price of £2 per share. The Board offered the 135,000 shares to the O. Co., & the O. Co. desired to exercise their option as regards 5,000 shares only at the proposed price. The P. Co. contended that the whole of the 135,000 shares must be accepted, & that the acceptance of 5,000 shares was not good :—Held : the proposed acceptance was not good & the P. Co. were entitled to sell the whole 135,000 shares to third parties ; the offer was of the whole 135,000 shares at a certain price per share, & not of 135,000 separate shares at that price ; the price to be paid for the whole number of shares might well be less than that payable for a lesser number ; & an offer must be accepted according to its terms.—OCEAN COAL CO., LTD. v. POWELL DUFFRYN STEAM

80. Variation in covering letter to offeror's agent.]—T., who was desirous of floating a gold mining co. in England, sent, through his broker F., a letter to D., a Dublin stockbroker, offering him a specified fee in consideration of the co. going to allotment, & D. allowing his name to be used as stockbroker, D. signed a letter of acceptance, which had also been forwarded to him by T., through F., & sent the acceptance to F. in a covering letter addressed to F., in which D. mentioned that he signed the acceptance on the distinct understanding that Messrs. H. (an English firm of stockbrokers) also joined. The co.'s prospectus was issued, but instead of the Messrs. H., G. & Co., stockbrokers of equally high standing, appeared as the English stockbrokers of the intended co. D., who was only interested in not being associated with what were commonly known as mining brokers, under no objection to the substitution, did not withdraw his name, & acted as Dublin broker until the co. went to allotment. In an action for the fee :—Held : (1) the complete contract in T.'s letter & D.'s acceptance could not be varied by the covering letter addressed to F. as T.'s agent ; (2) the covering letter was not intended to make the contract conditional upon H. being the English brokers ; (3) even if such a condition were imported into the contract, it could be waived by D., being one for his benefit solely.—MACONCHY v. TROWER, [1894] 2 I. 633a. —— —— —— Daughter married.]—There is no rule of law that the marriage of a daughter, coupled with her departure from the parental home, necessarily puts an end to the domination of her parents. Whether or not the parental dominion has completely ceased is a question of fact depending on the particular circumstances of each case.

A daughter married at the age of eighteen & thereupon left her parental home & lived with her husband. Her mother was very extravagant & frequently borrowed money from moneylenders. When the daughter came of age she, at her mother's request, raised £2,000 on her reversionary interest under her grandfather's will in order to pay off her mother's debts to moneylenders. The mother continued to borrow money from moneylenders, & a year later the mother asked the daughter to sign a document so that she (the mother) might be able to borrow some more money. The mother & daughter signed a joint & several promissory note for £775 at 85 per cent. interest. Of the £775 £200 was a fresh loan to the mother & £575 was acknowledged by the mother & daughter to be then due & owing to the moneylenders. In reality £410 was money which had actually been advanced to the mother, £90 was for interest, & £75 supposed interest or bonus because the loans were renewed before they were due. The daughter also gave a second charge on her vested interest in remainder without which the moneylenders would not lend the money. The daughter, who did not understand the transaction, signed the document at the request of her mother. The only advice which the daughter received was that of a solr. who also acted for the mother & the moneylenders, & who prepared the documents. In an action by the moneylenders on the promissory note against both the mother & daughter the judge held that the daughter was emancipated by reason of her marriage & was not under the influence of her mother, but he held the transaction was harsh & unconscionable & re-opened all the transactions & gave judgment against both mother & daughter for the sums actually lent with interest at a reduced rate. On appeal by the daughter :—Held : the daughter was under the influence of her mother when she entered into the transaction in question, & also that she had no independent advice, & that as the moneylenders had notice of the facts which constituted undue influence on the part of the mother they were in no better position than the mother, & therefore the transaction must be set aside so far as the daughter was concerned.—LANCASHIRE LOANS, LTD. v. BLACK, [1934] 1 K. 664a. General rule.]—An agreement of May 6, 1929, between B. & L., who were betrothed, provided that L. should deposit at a bank, in her own name & B.'s, the sum of £4,000, to be re-deposited upon the marriage in a current account in their joint names, & to be used in paying off a mtge. on B.'s premises & in buying him a practice. The amount of the mtge. was stated to be about £1,200. The agreement had been drawn up on the instructions of L.'s brother, who had provided the £400 as her dowry. Despite the terms of the agreement, sums were withdrawn before the marriage, which took place on June 16. On May 15 B. & L. withdrew £1,000, with which the practice was bought, & on June 5 they withdrew £2,350. They also withdrew other sums at later dates. B. had the money, & L. signed documents authorising the withdrawals. The marriage was unhappy, & the parties separated on Sept. 27. There was then only the sum of £150 in the joint account, B. having had £3,850. At the date of the agreement he owed £2,000 to his bank secured by charge on his premises, a fact which he had not told L.'s brother. In an action by L. & her brother to recover the money from B., & asking that the agreement of May 6, 1929, should be set aside or rectified, on the ground that L. was induced by B.'s undue influence to sign the documents authorising the withdrawals :—Held : the agreement must stand, but the doctrine of Huguenin v. Baseley, No. 611, applies to the relation between persons engaged to be married; it had not been established that the sum of £2,000, part of the £2,350, withdrawn from the joint account, was a proper gift to deft.; & pltfs. were entitled to judgment for £1,000, half of the £2,000.—Re LLOYDS BANK, LTD., BOMZE & LEDERMAN v. BOMZE, [1931] 1 Ch. 289; 100 L. The co. did not construct the road within a reasonable time, or at all, & the purchaser brought an action claiming damages for breach of contract :—Held : a promise to construct a road, apart from any conveyance of the land over which it was intended to run, was not a "contract for the sale or other disposition of land or any interest in land," & consequently an action would lie upon it, although it was oral, without infringing Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 40 (1).—JAMESON v. KINMELL BAY LAND CO., LTD. 845a. —— Parol warranty to let for certain purposes.]—Pltf., in an action for damages for breach of warranty in connection with the letting to him of certain premises, alleged that as a basis of negotiations which culminated in an agreement in writing whereby defts. agreed to let & pltf. agreed to take the premises in question, defts. verbally warranted to let the premises for dancing purposes. Defts. had no power to let the premises for such purposes without the consent of the superior landlord, & such consent was never in fact obtained. Pltf. took possession under the agreement & expended considerable sums in alterations, & now claimed to recover the amount of such expenses less the sums received by him during his possession of the premises. There was no fraudulent misrepresentation:—Held: pltf. had failed to establish the alleged parol agreement, & even if the evidence had established that before the contract was entered into pltf. had asked whether the premises could be let for dancing & had been answered in the affirmative, it would only have been evidence as to the subject-matter of the contract & could not control, vary, or add to the terms of the written contract.—CRAWFORD v. WHITE CITY RINK (NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE), LTD. 859a. —— What amounts to—Reconstitution of action.]—Defts. on Jan. 9, 1924, agreed to sell a quantity of wood to a partnership firm. The firm, being in financial difficulties, formed a limited co., & duly notified defts. On July 9 it was orally agreed that the new co. should give defts. a cheque & three bills in respect of the indebtedness of the old firm, & that defts. should supply to the new co. the goods sold under the contract of Jan. 9, & accept the new co. as buyers of the goods. The new co. subsequently gave to defts. the cheque & three bills, but defts. did not deliver the goods under the contract of Jan. 9 to the new co. The two partners in the old firm then brought an action against defts. for breach of the contract of Jan. 9. To that action defts. put in a defence signed by counsel in which they pleaded, in par. 3, that it had been agreed by the contract of July 9 that the new co. should give defts. on the following Monday a cheque & three drafts, & that defts. would supply to the new co. instead of to the old firm the goods sold under the contract of Jan. 9, & accept that co. as buyers of the goods. The pleadings were then amended & the action was reconstituted, the partners in the old firm being struck out & the new co. substituted as pltfs., & the cause of action was stated to be a breach of the agreement of July 9. Defts. then amended their defence & relied upon Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 4, as a defence to that amended action:—Held: (1) par. 3 of the original unamended defence which was signed by counsel constituted a sufficient note or memorandum in writing of the contract signed by an agent of the party to be charged to satisfy the above sect., inasmuch as (2) the new departure with regard to the parties & the cause of action when the action was reconstituted must be treated as the commencement of the action within the rule in Lucas v. Dixon, No. 859, ante.—FARR, SMITH & CO. v. MESSERS, LTD., [1928] 1 K. Pltfs. subsequently indorsed the bills, writing their name underneath that of deft. Pltfs. sued deft. as indorser:—Held: although the verbal contract found to have been made between deft. & pltfs. was in one sense a contract of guarantee, the Statute of Frauds could not be set up as an answer to a claim under the bills.—MCCALL BROS., LTD. v. HARGREAVES, [1932] 2 K. This other agreement had been previously made on the same day, but it was not signed till the following day, & it was to remain in force for ten years unless certain payments were sooner made. On Oct. 20, deft. wrote to the agents : "I will return contract, as I find you have worded contract 'opening of navigation 1915.' I will not accept contract on these terms unless they will pay for the goods when packed" :—Held : if the terms of the contract had not sufficiently appeared by the telegrams & the bought note, the letter of Oct. 20 would have supplied a sufficient memorandum to satisfy Stat. 1178a. —— —— ——.]—In cases under Stat. Frauds the general principle has been, not that the legislature has avoided contracts which are not made in accordance with the forms prescribed in the Act, but merely that those contracts shall only be proved in that particular way. In every single case under Stat. Frauds, except in the case of contracts relating to an interest in land, it has been held authoritatively that part performance of a contract which is within the terms of the Act is not sufficient to preclude the party who has made the part performance, or who has received a part performance, from taking advantage of the Act (ATKIN, L.J.).—Re A BANKRUPTCY NOTICE, [1924] 2 Ch. 76 ; 93 L. 1354a. Communication of confidential information.]—Patentees of a system of mechanical fittings for the bodies of motor-cars applied in May, 1928, for provisional protection in England in respect of certain particulars of the system. In July, 1928, the patentees approached certain manufacturers in this country & gave them certain information verbal & documentary with a view to development of the system & its application to the manufacturers' cars to the advantage of both parties. The information was given in confidence & for the purposes of a future agreement that the patentees should give & the manufacturers should accept a licence to use the patent rights of the patentees. In an action tried before a judge & jury the jury found that the two following agreements had been entered into between the patentees & the manufacturers: (a) that the manufacturers should accept a licence from the patentees, & (b) that the manufacturers should use the information disclosed only for the purposes of the licence. They also found that the manufacturers had committed breaches of both the agreements, & they awarded heavy damages in respect of both breaches. The manufacturers appealed. The Ct. of Appeal held that the first agreement was not proved, & that the second had been proved, but that the damages for the breach were only nominal. The patentees appealed to this House to establish the first agreement or to restore the verdict of the jury as to the damages for breach of the second agreement. There was a cross-appeal by the manufacturers to reverse the decision of the Ct. of Appeal upholding the second agreement & the breach thereof :—Held : the first agreement was not proved; the second agreement was proved, for that there was ample evidence to support the findings of a contract & the breach thereof, the giving of the information for a particular purpose being, on the analogy of a contract of bailment, good consideration for a promise not to use it for any other purpose, & its use for another purpose being a breach. sk. Agreement to make another contract.]—There may be a contract the consideration for which is the making of some other contract. "If you will make such & such a contract I will give you one hundred pounds" is in every sense of the word a complete legal contract. It is collateral to the main contract, but each has an independent existence, & they do not differ in respect of their possessing to the full the character & status of a contract. But such collateral contracts must from their very nature be rare &, since their sole effect is to vary or add to the terms of the principal contract, they are viewed with suspicion by the law. They must be proved strictly. Not only the terms of such contracts but the existence of an animus contrahendi on the part of all the parties to them must be clearly shown.—LYSNAR v. NATIONAL BANK OF NEW ZEALAND, LTD., [1935] 1 W. 1459a. ——.]—S., a customer of bkpt., a stock-broker, became indebted to him in respect of Stock Exchange transactions in a sum for which bkpt., on Dec. 18, 1923, recovered judgment. Later, S. became similarly indebted to bkpt. in a further sum. On Jan. 15, 1924, bkpt. assigned both debts to W. to secure £500, & covenanted with him that, in the event of his refraining from giving notice of the assignment to S., he, bkpt., would, on payment of the debts or any part thereof, hand the cheque or other form of payment to W. In Mar. 1924, J., who acted as solr. for both bkpt. & W. in the matter of the assignment, on the instructions of both & without disclosing same, made an agreement with S. for the liquidation of the two debts, whereby S. undertook to pay the aggregate amount thereof by monthly instalments, the first instalments being allocated to the payment of the later of the two debts & the subsequent ones to the payment of the judgment debt; & S. further agreed to deliver promissory notes payable to bkpt. or order to cover the instalments allocated to the later debt. J. received the notes from S. &, as agent of W., collected the amounts as they fell due on the notes & paid part thereof to W. & retained the balance. The secretary of a charity fraudulently represented to P. that he or the charity was in a position to undertake that P. would receive a knighthood if P. made a large donation to the funds of the charity, & undertook that the title would be conferred if the donation was made. P., relying upon those representations & in the belief that the secretary was authorised by the charity to give the undertaking, made a large donation to the funds of the charity. As P. did not receive the knighthood he brought an action against the charity & its secretary to recover back the money he had paid as money had & received or as damages for deceit or breach of contract :—Held : a contract for the purchase of a title, however the money is to be expended, is an improper & illegal contract, as being against public policy, & as P. knew that he was entering into an improper & illegal contract he could not recover back the money he had paid from the charity as money had & received, nor recover damages from the 2877a. ——.]—Deft. was the chairman of the S. Co. which at the end of 1921 was seeking to issue £15,000 First Lien Debentures to rank pari passu with a previous issue of first lien debentures of the same amount; & deft. having interested pltf. in the matter, sent him a letter of indemnity dated Feb. 17, 1922, in these terms: "Regarding the issue of £15,000 First Lein Debentures of the S. Co. at the price of £80 per £100 . . . I understand you are subscribing for £3,000 of the same at a cost to you of £2,400. In consideration of your giving me one-fourth of any profit you may receive on such investment, I hereby indemnify you against any loss thereon. The expression 'any profit' only refers to the redemption price of £100 per £80 which, when received, will show a profit of £20 per bond & the bonus out of the proceeds of any royalties on oil sales from the co.'s properties during the currency of the debentures. . . . The interest you will be entitled to receive from the co. is excluded from the consideration of profits." The debentures were redeemable on July 1, 1925, but they were secured by two debenture trust deeds which gave power to extend the due date, & in Apr. 1925, steps were taken which resulted in its extension to July 1, 1930. In May & June, 1925, a correspondence took place between pltf. & deft. in which pltf. announced his intention of selling the debentures, & deft. protested against this, claiming that they must be kept till their due date. On July 16, 1925, pltf. put the debentures up for sale, & in the absence of other bidders sold them to his son for £25. He then commenced proceedings to recover the amount of his loss, but the House of Lords decided that nothing was payable under the indemnity until the due date arrived. On July 18, 1928, the co. went into liquidation & pltf. having repurchased the debentures from his son, brought these proceedings to recover his loss:—Held: in selling the debentures pltf. had committed a breach of an implied term of the contract & having failed to maintain the position essential to enable deft. to receive the consideration for the indemnity, he had committed a breach of a term going to the root of the contract. Deft. had elected by his pleadings in the previous action to treat the contract as at an end & pltf. could not therefore maintain the present action.—GUY-PELL v. FOSTER, [1930] 2 Ch. 169; 99 L. J. 2885a. —— Necessity for licence to operate vessel—Election to operate another vessel.]—Resps. were owners & applts. were charterers of a steam trawler which was fitted with, & could operate as a trawler only with, an otter trawl. By the charterparty the vessel could be used only in the fishing industry. The charterparty was renewed for a year from Oct. 25, 1932. At that date both parties knew that a Canadian statute, which was applicable, made it an offence to leave a Canadian port with intent to fish with a vessel using an otter trawl, except under licence from the Minister. In Mar. 1933, applts. applied to the Minister for licences for five trawlers which they were operating. The Minister intimated that only three licences would be granted, & requested applts. to name the three trawlers in respect of which the three licences should be granted. Applts. named three trawlers, excluding the trawler now in question, & accordingly licences were granted for those three only. Applts. thereupon claimed that they were no longer bound by the charterparty, & to an action claiming the charter hire pleaded that the charterparty had become impossible of performance & their obligations under it ended:—Held: there had been no frustration of the charterparty, as the absence of a licence was due to the election of applts., who remained liable for the hire.—MARITIME NATIONAL FISH, LTD. v. OCEAN TRAWLERS, LTD., [1935] A. The jury found for pltf. on the claim; & on the counterclaim they awarded deft. 20*s.*, finding that pltf. was guilty of negligence or breach of duty in not entering in a book the occasions when the patient was confined to a bedroom with the door locked, such entries being required by rr. 13 & 16 of the rules made by the Comrs. in Lunacy under Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 338:—Held: as deft. had received a substantial part of the consideration, pltf.'s breach of duty did not go to the root of the contract so as to be a defence to pltf.'s entire claim, & judgment must be entered in accordance with the verdict.

Pltf. at that time anticipated the completion of a contract which would enable him to dispose of this cement, but the contract never materialised. The contract was then allowed to sleep till 1931 when, after correspondence, the contract was revived or a new contract entered into upon the old terms as to about 24,000 tons of cement. Some deliveries were made, but in 1933 there was such a slump in the trade that it was not profitable for the pltf. to take the cement at 28*s.* He did by arrangement take several deliveries at a lower figure. In 1935 pltf., upon prices improving, again attempted to revive the contract. Defts. at no time gave pltf. notice to take delivery or determine the contract :—Held : (1) the acceptance of deliveries at a figure below the contract price in 1933 was an election on the part of pltf. to treat the contract as at an end ; (2) the contract had been abandoned.—FISHER, LTD. v. EASTWOODS, LTD., [1936] 1 All E. sf. Rights of parties—Indemnification if party misled from obligations of contract.]—Where rescission of a contract is ordered the ct. has full power to make a just allowance & to do what is practically just, although it may not be able to restore the parties precisely to the state they were in prior to the contract. The right of the party misled to be put into the position in which he was before the contract, includes the right to be indemnified from the consequences & obligations which are the result of the contract set aside.—LEWIS & LEWIS v. HOWSON, [1928] 4 D. Testator, who was also the settlor, died in 1913, & V. afterwards married a Dutch subject, & for the remainder of her life resided in Holland. In 1927 the trustees of the will offered to redeem both annuities, & after some negotiations were informed by V.'s solrs. that they would advise her to accept £6,000 for redemption, the annuities to be paid in full up to the date of redemption. The trustees sent the solrs. a draft release for their approval. V. having informed her solrs. that she would accept the offer of £6,000, they sent her the release engrossed for her execution, & she executed it on Jan. 12, 1928. On Jan. 17 she died, but no notification of her death was received by her solrs. in London until Jan. 31. In the meantime the trustees having been informed by V.'s solrs. on Jan. 24 that she had accepted the £6,000, on Jan. 30 paid the money to them, being in ignorance of V.'s death :—Held : (1) there was no concluded contract for the sale & purchase of the annuities, as the purchasers could not have intended their offer to be accepted by the vendor merely executing a document ; (2) even assuming there was a concluded contract, there was a total failure of consideration, owing to the death of the annuitant before completion, & the trustees were entitled to recover back the £6,000.—KENNEDY v. THOMASSEN, [1929] 1 Ch. 426 ; 98 L. chasers about one thousand boxes of Smyrna sultanas at 60s. a cwt. c.i.f. London, to be shipped from Smyrna by steamer to London during Sept. 1922. Smyrna at the date of the contract was in the occupation of the Greeks. On Sept. 9, 1922, it was taken by Turkish forces & shipment became impossible, with the result that the sellers did not ship any of the goods. The buyers claimed damages, & the dispute went before arbitrators, who stated a case for the opinion of the ct. under Arbn. Act, 1889 (c. 49), s. 7. The sellers said that they were excused from performance on the grounds (1) that the contract became illegal when the port of shipment came under Turkish control, as a state of war at that time existed between England & Turkey; & (2) that a state of circumstances had arisen which made the contract impossible of performance & that differed totally from the conditions with reference to which the contract was made:—Held: mere impossibility of performance did not discharge a party where performance was not naturally impossible, unless such a state of affairs had arisen as displaced the fundamental basis of the contract: in the absence of any strike, war or force majeure clause, the buyers were entitled to damages for failure of the sellers to deliver.—SARGANT (W. 3099a. —— ——.]—The lessees of a hotel entered into two contracts with a firm of advertising agents, under the terms of which the latter were entitled to erect & exhibit, for a term of years, upon the roof of the hotel, electrically illuminated advertisements. An electric sign was duly erected. Before the expiration of the term the local authority, in exercise of its statutory powers, served the lessees with a notice to treat for the purchase of their estate & interest in the hotel, &, ultimately, having acquired the reversion to the lessees' term, took possession, closed the hotel, & began to demolish it. The electric sign was removed by arrangement with the advertising agents, who subsequently commenced an action against the lessees to recover damages for breach of the two contracts:—Held: the local authority had acquired defts.' interest in the premises by compulsion; the two contracts did not confer upon pltfs. any proprietary interest or estate in the hotel; &, as it could not be said that both parties to those contracts had made their bargain upon the footing that if the local authority exercised their powers & took the hotel the contracts were to be discharged, there must be a declaration that defts. were liable to pltfs. for damages for breach of those contracts.—WALTON HARVEY, LTD.

sd. Earthquake.]—On July 14, 1927, pltf. & deft. entered into a written contract for the supply of electrical energy by the former to the latter. The agreement was to be for a period of five years from the date of commencement of supply (Nov. 1, 1927), & "therefore shall be continued subject to its being determinable by either party giving to the other six months' notice in writing from the first day of any month." The agreement contained clauses providing that deft. agreed to pay the minimum amount of £1,000 per annum, during the currency of the agreement, whether the deft. took electrical energy to such value or not from pltf.; that if, as the result of action by constituted authority, deft. was prevented from operating or passing over the contract, the contract was to determine; & providing also as to failure of supply due to accidents to mains & suchlike, & for rebate in price of current for interruptions. There was no exemption provided for in the event of fire in deft.'s works. On the contrary, deft. agreed to indemnify pltf. from injury or destruction by fire or otherwise of pltf.'s meters or apparatus on deft.'s premises; & express provision was inserted in respect of certain specified untoward interruptions so far as pltf. was concerned. The earthquake on Feb. 3, 1931, extensively damaged deft.'s meat-freezing works, & it would have involved some nine or ten months' work & the expenditure of £33,000 to have reinstated the premises ready for use as a meat-freezing works. Deft. did not reinstate, & from Feb. 3 (except for a trifling immaterial supply) took no power from pltf. Deft.'s contentions in pltf.'s action claiming moneys alleged to be due under contract were, inter alia, that the contract was for five years only, & that frustration by the damage caused by the earthquake had excused performance on deft.'s part:—Held: (1) the earliest time within which the contract could be determined by notice was five years & six months; (2) the defence of frustration by the Napier earthquake had not been established, & the contract had not been discharged by reason of the damage to deft.'s freezing works by that earthquake, on the following grounds: earthquakes occur frequently in New Zealand, & most business men in charge of large business premises either insure or consider whether the risk shall be taken by the business itself. The clauses referred to above, the fact that no exemption was provided for in the event of fire in deft.'s premises, & the circumstances of the case, made it impossible to apply the test propounded by LORD LOREBURN in Tamplin S.S. Co., Ltd. v. Anglo-American Petroleum Products Co., Ltd., [1916] 2 A. 3100a. Abolition of office.]—In pursuance of an Order in Council applt. was appointed by letters patent to be a member of a Board established by a statute of Canada which specified the period of the appointment & the salary attaching to it. During the currency of the appointment, as extended by subsequent Orders in Council, the Parliament of Canada abolished the office by repealing the provision which established the Board; no compensation to the member was provided. By a petition of right applt. claimed damages for breach of contract :—Held : the claim failed, because so far as applt.'s rights were contractual further performance of the contract had become impossible by statute; as any right under the appointment was subject to determination in that manner, the Interpretation Act, R.S.C., 1927, s. 19 (c), which preserves rights acquired under a repealed enactment, did not assist applt., & the repealing statute did not interfere with any civil right in the Province.—REILLY v. The shipment of the sugar had been prevented by the requisitioning of ships by the British Govt. :—Held : Civil Law Ordinance No. III (Str. Sett. No. VIII. of 1909), s. 5 (1), which provides that in all questions which arise for decision in the Colony "with respect to mercantile law generally, the law to be administered shall be the same as would be administered in England in the like case, at the corresponding period, unless in any case other provision is, or shall be made, by statute," made Defence of the Realm Amendment Act No. 2, 1915 (c. 37), & Courts (Emergency Powers) Act, 1917 (c. 26), applicable to the case, & the latter Act gave a good defence to the counterclaim whether the requisitioning was under Defence of the Realm Act, 1914 (c. 29), or under the prerogative power. —SENG DJIT HIN v. The ship was requisitioned by the Govt. before Mar. 1, 1917, & was not released until Feb. 1919. Applts. then refused to take delivery of her:—Held: there had been in 1917 a frustration of the charterparty which forthwith brought to an end the whole contract.

(2) The legal effect of the frustration of a contract does not depend upon the intention of the parties, or their opinions or even knowledge, as to the event which has brought about the frustration, but upon its occurrence in such circumstances as to show it to be inconsistent with the further prosecution of the adventure.—HIRJI MULJI v. CHEONG YUE S.S. 3178b. ——.]—A time charter was entered into on Mar. 24, 1926, whereby it was agreed that deft.'s ship, during twelve months from a date to be fixed between May 20 & June 20, 1926, should be employed in carrying successive cargoes of coal for pltfs. from one of the South Wales ports to one of certain specified Mediterranean ports. There were various exceptions relating to strikes & stoppages of labour, &, by an additional clause, the ship was not to be ordered to any loading port at which there was a strike in force, & she was to be free to interpose a substantially similar voyage if the charterers were unable forthwith to order her to another loading port stipulated in the charter free of strike. On May 1, 1926, the general coal strike began, & no coal could be exported from any of the named ports until towards the end of Dec. 1926. Meanwhile, the ship performed two voyages with the assent of pltfs. & one to which they did not assent. At the end of December pltfs. ordered the ship to go to Mumbles Road for orders. Deft. refused to comply with the order on the ground that the strike had frustrated the commercial object of the adventure. Pltfs. claimed damages for breach of contract:—Held: the strike provisions in the charter contemplated an interruption of work due to a local withdrawal of labour & not the total impossibility of any export of coal for upwards of eight months; that the change of circumstances prevented performance of the charter according to its true intent, & that the action failed.—THE PENELOPE, [1928] P. 180; 97 L. 3183a. —— —— Ship ordered to leave port—Subsequent permission to return & load.]—A charterparty of an Italian ship provided that 216 running hours, Sundays & holidays excepted, weather permitting, should be allowed the charterers for loading & discharging, & that the lay days should commence from the time the steamer was ready to receive or discharge her cargo, the captain giving six hours' notice to the charterers' agents, berth or no berth. The exceptions clause excepted "restraint of princes, rulers & people." The ship arrived at Batoum, & notice of readiness to load was given, & the lay days began to run. Owing, however, to a dispute between the Russian & Italian Govts. the ship was ordered by the port authorities to leave Batoum & also Russian waters, & accordingly the ship went to Constantinople. Subsequently permission was obtained to load the ship at Batoum, & she returned after being absent from the port a little over a fortnight. The owners subsequently claimed demurrage from the charterers, on the basis that the lay days continued to run during the period the ship was absent from Batoum:—Held: interference by the Russian Govt. did not amount to such an illegality as to excuse the performance of the contract.—CANTIERE NAPHTHA EXPORT, [1925] 2 K. able consideration, not being the actual performance of the obligation itself. The accord is the agreement by which the obligation is discharged, & the satisfaction is the consideration which makes the agreement operative. It is not necessary that the consideration should be executed; the consideration on each side may be an executory promise, the two mutual promises making an agreement enforceable at law.

T., who owned a paper, formed a co. with a capital of £500 in £1 shares, & transferred his paper to the co. in consideration of the allotment to him of the 500 shares. T. gave Miss P., who was the editor of the paper, 475 shares, retaining 25 shares himself. T. & Miss P. were the directors of, & the only shareholders in the co. Defts. published in one of their papers two articles which T. considered to be a libel upon himself & the co. to which he had transferred his paper. T. & the co. commenced actions for libel against defts. There was a meeting between T. & H., a representative of defts., with the object of settling the litigation, & eventually terms of settlement were arranged on Oct. 10, 1932, & initialled by T. & H. The terms, which were headed with the names of the two actions, provided: "I accept the sum of 1,000 guineas on account of costs & expenses incurred in full discharge & settlement of my claims against" defts. "& the claims of the" co. "& the officers of that co., arising out of the articles published in the Daily Mail . . . & I will forthwith instruct my solrs. to serve notice of discontinuance, or to take such other steps or to agree to such other steps being taken to end the proceedings now pending." Provision was also made for a letter in the terms of an agreed draft to be written to T. by H. Pltf. co. & Miss P. did not agree to the proposed settlement, although defts. were ready & willing to carry out the settlement, & the actions proceeded to trial. Defts. counterclaimed against T. for breach of warranty of authority. The jury returned a verdict for both T. & pltf. co., & judgment was entered for each of pltfs. with costs. The Ct. of Appeal, however, held that the alleged libel was not a libel on pltf. co., & set aside the judgment in favour of pltf. co. The judge at the trial held that T. represented & warranted that he had authority to settle the action on behalf of pltf. co. whereas in fact he had no such authority, & defts. were entitled to an inquiry as to the damages they had thereby sustained. Defts. appealed (inter alia) by leave of the trial judge, on the question of costs in both actions. Pltf. T. appealed against the judgment against him for damages for breach of warranty of authority on the ground that he had never represented that he had authority to settle the action on behalf of pltf. co., & because the transaction relied on in the counterclaim was only an executory accord giving rise to no rights:—Held: the document initialled by T. & H. on Oct. 10, 1932, was an agreement in which the consideration on each side was an executory promise by the other side, & further, a third party was included in the promise. The agreement was therefore enforceable in law, at any rate, by counterclaim.—BRITISH RUSSIAN GAZETTE & TRADE OUTLOOK, LTD. v. ASSOCIATED NEWSPAPERS, LTD., TALBOT v. ASSOCIATED NEWSPAPERS, LTD., [1933] 2 K. In an action by pltf. to restrain defts. from disposing of the furniture comprised in the second bill of sale, pltf. relied on Bills of Sale (1878) Amendment Act, 1882 (c. 43), s. 8, & she contended that the real consideration was the payment off of the moneylender & the release of her furniture from the first bill of sale :—Held : the consideration for the second bill of sale was the loan of £1,000, & as a cheque was a good payment until dishonoured there was no need to state in the second bill of sale that the payment was by cheque, & therefore, as the consideration was correctly stated in the second bill of sale, the action failed.—D'USEZ v. TRAFFICS & DISCOVERIES, LTD. Pltf., being indebted to defts., an agreement was made between him & defts.' solrs. that, if he would pay the amount of the debt into a bank in the country for the credit of defts.' solrs. in London, that payment would satisfy all sums which he owed to defts. & a bkpcy. notice which they had issued in respect of part of the debt would not be served on him. Pltf. alleged that he carried out his part of the agreement, but that, in breach thereof, defts., by a clerk of their solrs., served him with the bkpcy. notice. In an action for damages for breach of the agreement it was held, that, as pltf. by the agreement was not to pay his debt to his creditors, but was to pay the money to the account of defts.' solrs., which he was not under any obligation to do, there was sufficient consideration to prevent the agreement being nudum pactum & pltf. was entitled to maintain an action for breach of the agreement. On appeal :—Held : on the evidence the concession made by defts. as to time & place of payment of the debt was entirely to oblige pltf. & that no benefit thereby accrued to defts. ; &, that being so, the agreement was a mere nudum pactum & gave no cause of action for breach of contract.—VANBERGEN v. ST. During the period from Sept. 18, 1935, to Mar. 17, 1936, further sums became due for similar services, &, during the same period, certain payments were made by resp. to applt. corpn. Resp. did not specifically appropriate any of these payments to any particular charges. Applt. corpn. purported to appropriate the payments in satisfaction of the arrears of earliest date, &, on Mar. 17, 1936, sought to recover the balance alleged to be due. The justices thought that resp. believed that he was making payments towards current dues, & decided that the appropriation by applt. corpn. was not, & could not be properly made, & they held that applt. corpn. could not recover a sum larger than the difference between the money due in respect of the period from Sept. 18, 1935, to Mar. 17, 1936, & the amount paid by resp. during that period. Applt. corpn. appealed, contending that, in the absence of specific appropriation by resp., applt. corpn. was entitled to appropriate the payments, to satisfy any arrears, even though the arrears might be irrecoverable at law :—Held : the justices had not found that there has been any appropriation by resp.—STEPNEY CORPN. v. OSOFSKY, [1937] 3 All E. 3949a. —— —— ——.]—Where a creditor appropriates his debtor's payments in his books without communicating the appropriation to the debtor, the creditor is not bound by the appropriation.—LONDON & WESTMINSTER BANK v. BUTTON (1907), 51 Sol. Jo. 466.

3950a. ——.]—An appropriation of a payment cannot be inferred from an intention in the mind of the debtor uncommunicated to the creditor. It can only be inferred from circumstances known to both parties.

A husband & wife separated under an oral agreement by which the husband agreed to pay his wife £3 a week for the maintenance of herself & their child, B. Later the parties entered into a written agreement by which the husband agreed to pay the wife £300 by weekly instalments of £2 a week in respect of certain premises which belonged to them jointly. The agreement provided that on the failure of the husband to pay any instalment he became liable to pay forthwith the balance of the £300 then due. The husband afterwards sent to his wife £5 each week under the two agreements. The wife subsequently obtained a decree nisi for the dissolution of her marriage, & the husband after the lapse of a week, on the advice of his counsel in the Divorce Ct., sent each week to the wife £3 only. The wife sued the husband to recover £92 as being due under the written agreement in respect of the purchase of the house. The husband alleged that he had appropriated the £3 which he sent each week as to £2 in respect of the weekly instalments due under the written agreement, & as to £1 for the maintenance of the child B., & he alleged that he sent a slip to his wife with the first payment of £3 containing the words : " This is for the house & B." The wife, however denied having received the slip. No notice to produce it was given. The county ct. judge, however, admitted secondary evidence of its contents, & held that, even if the slip was not sent, the husband had appropriated the payments to the weekly instalments due in respect of the house. On appeal by the wife it was admitted that secondary evidence as to the contents of the slip was inadmissible :—Held : there must be something more than an intention of the debtor uncommunicated to the creditor to amount to an appropriation by the debtor ; there must be a notice, express or implied, to the creditor to inform him of the appropriation. There was no evidence upon which the county ct. judge could find that there had been an appropriation by the debtor.—LEESON v. LEESON, [1936] 2 K. B. 156 ; [1936] 2 All E. R. 133 ; 105 L. J. K. The agreement was set out in a minute of a board meeting & accounts drawn up by the accountants to give effect to that minute were signed by the managing director & his co-director. On the assets side of the account there was a statement with respect to general profit & loss account "Net loss. £1,612 6*s.* 8*d.* less T.S. loan fund £1,612 6*s.* 8*d.*," & nothing was carried into the assets column in respect of the debit balance of the profit & loss account. instructions accordingly sent by the Warsaw bank to pltfs. were lost in transmission & were never received. On discovering the facts pltfs. were willing to credit defts. with the above-mentioned £1,000 & brought an action to recover £1,000, the balance of the £2,000, as money paid under a mistake of fact:—Held: (1) there was no such mistake of fact as entitled pltfs. to maintain that the amount claimed was money paid to their use, & the action failed; (2) pltfs. had been negligent as between themselves & defts.—BARCLAY & CO., LTD. v. MALCOLM & CO. 4358a. Payment of rates on tithe rentcharge by occupier—Demand after Tithe Act, 1891 (c. 8).]—At the date of the passing of the above Act rates upon a tithe rentcharge were due & in arrears, owing to the omission of the overseers to demand payment thereof from the occupiers of the land out of which the tithe rentcharge issued. The tithe rentcharge for the period in respect of which the rates in arrear were due had been paid to the tithe-owner in full. After the passing of the Act, the overseers, purporting to act under Tithe Act of 1837 (c. 69), s. 8, demanded payment of the arrears of rates from the occupiers of the land, who paid them, & were allowed the amount thereof by their landlord, the owner of the land, out of the half-year's rent next becoming due. Subsequently thereto a half-year's tithe rentcharge became payable by the landowner. The landowner claimed to deduct therefrom the amount which he had allowed to the occupiers out of their rent in respect of the arrears of rates paid by them:—Held: having regard to the Act of 1891, s. 6, the payment of the arrears of rates by the occupiers was a voluntary payment, & they were not entitled to deduct the amount so paid from their rent consequently the landowner was not entitled to deduct the amount which he had allowed to the occupiers from the tithe rentcharge due by him.—Re TITHE ACT, 1891, ROBERTS v. POTTS, JONES v. COOKE, [1894] 1 Q. 4440a. Unenforceable promissory note to moneylender paid by surety—Promise by debtor to repay surety.]—In 1930, at the request of C., who wished to borrow £120 from certain moneylenders, S. signed with C. a promissory note by which he & C. promised jointly & severally to repay to the moneylenders £156 by 5 equal consecutive monthly instalments of £6, the first payment to be made on Nov. 24, 1930, & the balance of £126 to become due & payable on Apr. 24, 1931. In the event of default in payment of any instalment so much of the balance as represented principal became payable forthwith. The note or memorandum of the contract signed by C. & S. did not comply with Moneylenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 6. C. duly paid the first instalment but made default in respect of the second. S. was in communication with the moneylenders in Jan.

1931, &, without referring to C., he discharged the whole liability on the promissory note for £138. When C. heard that S. had discharged the whole liability he wrote to S offering to pay interest on the £138 so that S. should suffer no loss. No payment, however, was ever made by C. to S. An administration action was brought after C.'s death against his exors. & in that action S. applied to rank as a creditor for £138, basing his claim on a request by C. implied by law that S. should pay the moneylenders & an implied promise by C. to repay S., supported by C.'s letter ratifying what S. had done. The application was opposed on the grounds that: (i) as the note was not enforceable, the request ought not to be implied, & (ii) in the circumstances in which S. made the payment, it ought not to be decided that the payment was made in pursuance of any implied request by C., but for the purposes of protecting S.'s own interests:—Held: (1) in the circumstances of the case a request to discharge the liability ought to be implied; (2) although S. was discharging a liability of his own, he ought to be presumed to be acting, so far as the person accommodated, C., was concerned, in pursuance of the request which the law implied.—Re CHETWYND'S ESTATE, DUNN TRUST, LTD. v. BROWN, [1937] 3 All E. 4534a. —— ——.]—By certain military regulations officers in the Royal Air Force were on demobilisation entitled to a gratuity varying in amount according to circumstances. If their names were on a certain list, called the Emergency List, they were only entitled to a gratuity at a lower rate than if they were not on that list. Deft. was a demobilised officer of the Royal Air Force. Pltfs., who acted as Govt.'s agents for the payment (inter alia) of gratuities to demobilised officers of that force, in ignorance of the fact that deft. was on the Emergency List, but also in forgetfulness of the regulation which provided that the gratuities of officers on the Emergency List should be paid at the lower rate, & not appreciating the materiality of an officer being on that list, paid deft. his gratuity at the higher rate to which he would have been entitled if he had not been on that list. More than a year afterwards, & before notice of the mistake, deft. spent the money. In an action to recover back the excess payment as money paid under a mistake of fact; —Held: pltfs. could not recover on the grounds that plfts.' mistake was not a mistake of fact causing the payment; & that as deft. had been led by plfts.' conduct to believe that he might treat the money as his own, & in that belief had altered his position by spending it, pltfs. were estopped from alleging that it was paid under a mistake.—HOLT v. MARKHAM, [1923] 1 K. This was in accordance with an established practice, by which the councillors superintended the laying out of moneys in their respective divisions. Deft. granted several orders on the treasurer to different persons as for "work done," which were paid, & it appeared that such work, though contracted for, had not been performed. There was no evidence, however, of any fraud or collusion on deft.'s part, or of any gain to himself, except the usual charge to the corpn. of the commission on such moneys as were expended:—Held: there could be no recovery on the common counts, for deft. had received no money.—CHATHAM TOWNSHIP CORPN. v. HOUSTON (1868), 27 U. On Dec. 30 bkpcy. proceedings were commenced against the purchasers in New York & a receiver was appointed, & on the same day the purchasers cabled to pltfs. not to pay the francs to defts., as they, the purchasers, were unable to complete their contract. Before that cable arrived pltfs. had already paid the francs to defts., & defts. had paid them to the C. Bank. Pltfs. then requested the C. Bank to return them, & the C. In these circumstances defts. claimed that, the money having been returned to them, they were entitled to hold it on behalf of their principals, & refused to pay it over to pltfs., who brought an action to recover the francs as being money had & received by defts. to their use:—Held: (1) as at the time pltfs. paid the francs to defts. the purchasers had already repudiated their contract, although pltfs. did not know that fact & consequently had not accepted the repudiation, pltfs. were under no legal obligation to pay, &, having paid under a mistaken belief of legal liability, they would have been entitled to recover the money back if they had discovered their mistake before defts. had paid it to the C. Bank was to restore pltfs. to the same position as that which they occupied before defts paid it away, & that position was unaffected by the fact that before redemand of the money by pltfs. the trustee in bkpcy. of the purchasers had directed defts. not to part with it, & defts. in compliance with that direction had credited the purchasers with it in their books; (3) defts. were bound to repay it to pltfs.—BRITISH AMERICAN CONTINENTAL BANK v. BRITISH BANK FOR FOREIGN TRADE, [1926] 1 K. 4766a. ——.]—An account stated may take the form only of a mere acknowledgment of a debt; in that case though it amounts to a promise from which the existence of a debt may be inferred that inference may be rebutted, & then there is no consideration & no binding promise. But there is another form in which the account stated includes items on both sides, & the parties have agreed that there shall be a set-off & that only the balance shall be paid; in that case there is a promise for good consideration to pay the balance even though some of the debts were barred by limitation. The account stated in the present case being in the latter form, it was unnecessary to decide whether the implied promise was "a promise made in writing" so as to be, by sect. 25 (3) of Indian Contract Act, 1872 (which applied locally), an effective agreement to pay statute barred debts although it was made without consideration. —SIQUEIRA v. NORONHA, [1934] A. 4824a. Debt owing by directors—Account stated in balance-sheet signed by directors.]—Defts., who were directors of & were indebted to pltf. co., agreed to terms of settlement by which (inter alia) the first deft. should resign his office as governing director, that the co. should appoint independent persons as permanent directors, that the two defts. with three others, should be ordinary directors, that the co.'s articles should be altered so as to provide that the defts. should have no control over, & have no right to vote in respect of, their debts, that an accountant should certify the amount of defts.' liability, that the dividends payable to defts. should be retained by the co. on account of those debts, which, however, were not to be called in for twenty years, & that these terms should be embodied in an agreement under seal & sanctioned by special resolutions of the co. Special resolutions embodying that agreement were thereafter passed which provided also that all the ordinary directors should have no right at directors' meetings to vote in respect of the co.'s financial affairs, & that with regard to other business they were to have only such rights of voting & control over the management as might be conferred upon them by the permanent directors. An accountant prepared a balance-sheet which showed the amount due to the co. by each of the two defts., & that balance-sheet, which was signed thus: "Peter Shaw, John Shaw, Directors," was adopted at a general meeting of the co. at which defts. were present. The agreement under seal containing the above terms of settlement was sealed by the co., but defts. having declined to execute it, as they objected to certain of its terms, the permanent directors, at a meeting to which none of the ordinary directors was summoned, resolved that instructions be given for writs to be issued against defts. for the recovery of the debts owing by them, & although by a resolution passed subsequently by the shareholders at an extraordinary meeting of the co. the chairman was directed to discontinue proceedings, a writ was issued against each deft. claiming the amount as "found & admitted by deft. to be due to pltfs. as shown by pltfs.' balance-sheet." To these actions defts. pleaded that they had been brought without proper authority, & they denied that the alleged or any account was stated between pltfs. & them:—Held: as to the cause of action relied upon, the balance-sheet was not an account stated involving a fresh promise by defts. to pay the amounts debited to them therein, inasmuch as it was signed by them not animo contrahendi but in performance of their duties as directors.—SHAW (JOHN) & SONS (SALFORD), LTD. v. SHAW, [1935] 2 K. 4853a. ——.]—The H. Co. entered into an agreement for reinsuring marine risks with the L. Co. Later, it was voluntarily wound up, & B., the liquidator, agreed the L. Co.'s claim for a large sum, & paid dividends in respect of the claim. Following the practice of the co. B., notwithstanding the provisions of Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), & Marine Insurance Act, 1903 (c. 41), treated the agreement & the claim under it as valid. After the dissolution of the H. Co. he was advised that he should have disallowed the claim, & the dissolution was annulled, but an action to recover the money was dismissed, as no mistake of fact by B. was proved. On a misfeasance summons by a creditor of the co.: —Held: where an agreement is wholly void, items alleged to be due in respect of it are not a proper basis for an action on an account stated, & that a proof based on an account stated in such circumstances must be rejected. —Re HOME & COLONIAL INSURANCE CO., LTD., [1930] 1 Ch. 102; *sub nom. 4908a. ——.]—The element of personal confidence which renders a contract unassignable is not confined to cases where the purchaser relies on the personal skill of the vendor or manufacturer, or where the manufacturer relies on the personal idiosyncrasies of the buyer with regard to his requirements or with regard to his performance to the covenants other than his obligation to pay. Where the ability of the buyer to pay is the subject-matter of personal confidence, the contract is just as much taken out of assignability as where the manufacturing skill of the seller is the subject-matter of the buyer's personal confidence.

Defts. entered into a contract with H. to supply him with 10,000 tons of coal, the delivery of which was to be extended over two years. H. had been carrying on the business of a coal merchant for some years, the business consisting of carting coals from defts.' depots round the streets of a certain district & there selling it to the working classes by weight in relatively small quantities, it being a regular practice to give short credit. H. assigned the contract to pltf., who up to the time of the assignment had no experience of the coal trade :—Held : there was that degree of difference between H.'s & pltf.'s knowledge of the business, which, having regard to the nature of the business, constituted an element of personal confidence in the matter personal to H. which made the contract unassignable.—COOPER v. MICKLEFIELD COAL & LIME CO., LTD., COOPER v. RAYNER (1912), 107 L. The latter co. thereafter assigned all its insurance business including the benefit of all pending contracts to pltf. co., which had been incorporated for the purpose of taking over all said insurance business. 5122a. Actor.]—Applts., theatrical producers, agreed to engage resp., an American actor, to play one of the three leading comedy parts in a musical play about to be produced at the London Hippodrome for six weeks certain at a salary of £55 per week, & the contract contained a provision prohibiting resp. during the continuance of his engagement from acting elsewhere without the consent of the applts. Resp. objected that the part assigned to him was not one of the three leading comedy parts &, on the refusal of applts. to recast him, declined to appear in the play & sued applts. for damages for breach of contract. At the trial of the action before a judge & jury the jury found for resp. for £1,000 damages for loss of publicity & for three weeks' salary, & judgment was entered accordingly. The Ct. of Appeal affirmed the verdict & judgment except as to the salary :—Held : (1) upon the construction of the contract, it bound applts. to give resp. an opportunity of appearing in public in a part answering the stipulated description; (2) it was competent to the jury, having regard to the character of the contract, to give damages to resp. for loss of publicity.—HERBERT CLAYTON & JACK WALLER, LTD. v. OLIVER, [1930] A. No delivery of oil from the concession in question was made by defts. to pltfs., &, in answer to an inquiry by pltfs. as to when delivery was to begin, defts. replied that they were not in a position to make delivery as they could not enforce it against the other members of the third co. without making a payment to them & that they were under no obligation to make such payment. In an action for breach of contract defts. admitted that if they gave consideration there would be no impossible barrier to their getting the oil :—Held : as defts. could not use their preponderating vote in the third co. to dispose of a product of the third co. in order to satisfy an obligation of their own to the detriment of the interests of the minority shareholders, & as the word "rights" in the agreement did not mean that defts. were bound to exercise their right of spending money to procure the oil, the action failed.—GENERAL ASPHALT CO. v. ANGLO-SAXON PETROLEUM CO., LTD. By means of an elaborate fraud defts. were induced by an unauthorised person to print from the plates a large quantity of notes & to deliver the notes to him, & the result was that these notes were put into circulation. In consequence of the fraud pltfs. honoured a large number of the spurious notes, & on learning the facts they found it necessary to withdraw all the genuine notes of the same issue from circulation as they had, at that time, no means of distinguishing the genuine from the spurious notes. In an action for breach of contract, negligence, or conversion :—Held : it was an implied term of the contract that there was to be no use of the plates for any purpose not authorised by pltfs., & there was an absolute duty on defts. not to print or deliver notes of pltf. bank without the authority of the bank, &, even if defts. were bound only to take reasonable care to avoid such acts, defts. had, on the facts, fallen short of the standard of care required by the special nature of the business, & pltfs. were entitled to recover.—BANCO DE PORTUGAL v. WATERLOW & SONS, LTD. Held: (2) even if an action of detinue would lie, yet, upon the true construction of Limitation Act, 1623, s. 3, the words "goods & chattels" were mentioned only in reference to actions of replevin, & that as the action was an action of detinue & the cause of action, namely, the assertion by deft. of an adverse title by advertising the rolls for sale, arose more than six years before the commencement of the action, the action was barred by the statute.—BEAUMONT v. JEFFERY, [1925] Ch. 1; 93 L. 1533a. —— Remainder to his heir-at-law—Rule in Shelley's Case applies.]—By his will testator, among other devises of freeholds & copyholds, devised his two copyhold houses, gardens, & premises situate in the parish of B., & also a piece of copyhold land adjoining, to his nephew G. for life without impeachment of waste, & after his death he devised the same premises to the "heir-at-law" of the said G. There was no special custom of descent in the manor of B. affecting these copyholds:—Held: the use of the expression "heir-at-law" did not exclude the operation of the rule in Shelley's Case, which accordingly applied, & G. was entitled in customary fee simple for an estate to him & his heirs according to the custom of the manor.—Re HACK, BEADMAN v. BEADMAN, [1925] Ch. 633; 94 L. 1533b. Devise to "right heirs"—Common law & not customary heir entitled.]—Testatrix by her will dated Mar. 31, 1873, in exercise of a general testamentary power of appointment, devised her copyhold lands upon trusts in favour of certain relatives & their respective issue in tail, all which trusts determined by their deaths without issue, with an ultimate trust for "my own right heirs (other than & except my nephew Robert John Smith & his issue)." On Oct. 2, 1875, by an award of the Copyhold Comrs., the copyhold lands so devised were enfranchised. R. S., who would have been testatrix's heir at common law had he survived her, died on May 12, 1879. Testatrix died on Sept. 11, 1883, leaving J. S., the eldest son of the said R. S., her heir at common law, a nephew A. S., her heir at common law if R. S. & his issue were excluded, & a brother G. S., her heir according to the custom of the manor, which was borough-English:—Held: the words "my own right heirs" must be construed to mean her heirs at common law & not her customary heirs: the limitation was ineffectual, & accordingly the lands so devised were unappointed.—Re SMITH, BULL v. SMITH, [1933] Ch. 847; 102 L. 2032b. Equitable joint tenancy in copyholds—Subject to rentcharge—Vesting of legal estate.]—On July 5, 1802, Bryan Abbs & another trustee who predeceased him were admitted to certain copyhold plots A., B. & C. upon trust out of the rents & profits to raise & pay an annual rent of £7 10*s.* to Harrison & his heirs & subject thereto in trust for Wilson & his heirs. Many years after Bryan Abbs' death his customary heir H. C. Abbs, since deceased, was admitted to A. & C., but no one was admitted to B.; so that on Dec. 31, 1925, the best right to admittance was in the customary heirs of H. C. Abbs & Bryan Abbs. On the same date the equitable title to the land stood vested in Thompson & Collins as joint tenants in fee, subject to the equitable rentcharge then vested in Aylmer, subject to proof of his title.

On Jan. 1, 1926, the Law of Property Acts came into operation & the copyhold plots were enfranchised. The ct. being asked to determine in whom the legal estates in the land & the rentcharge vested :—Held : (1) under the 1922 Act, Sched. XII., para. 8 (b), the freehold estate in the land vested in the first instance in the personal representative of H. C. Abbs & the customary heir of Bryan Abbs as trustees, Bryan Abbs having no known personal representative ; (2) either under the 1922 Act, Sched. XII., para. 8 (d), or under the 1925 Act, Sched. I., Part II., paras. 4, 6 (d), the rentcharge vested as a legal rentcharge in Aylmer or other the persons entitled thereto ; (3) on the rentcharge becoming a legal rentcharge the trustees became bare trustees with no longer any active duties to perform ; (4) under the 1925 Act, Sched. I., Part II., paras. 3, 6 (d), the initial vesting in the trustees was divested, & the legal estate subject to the legal rentcharge vested in Thompson & Collins as joint tenants in fee simple ; (5) sect. 36 of the 1925 Act did not come into operation until after the vesting provisions had done their work. It then merely attached a trust for sale to the joint legal estate in Thompson & Collins. It did not previously attach a trust for sale to the initial estate in the trustees so as to put the divesting provisions of the 1925 Act, Sched. I., Part II., out of operation. Still less did it bring in the undivided share provisions of the 1925 Act, Sched. I., Part IV. —Re KING'S THEATRE, SUNDERLAND, DENMAN PICTURE HOUSES v. THOMPSON & COLLINS ENTERPRISES, [1929] 1 Ch. 483 ; 98 L. J. Ch. 109 ; 140 L. T. 463.

16a. Dramatic work—No "first publication" within 1911 Act, s. 1 (3)—Owner entitled to substituted copyright under 1911 Act, sched. 1.] —Under Dramatic Copyright Act, 1833 (c. 15), a foreign author dwelling outside British territory was entitled to secure dramatic copyright within the British Empire of the first performance of his play given in this country. By an agreement in writing dated June 30, 1898, G., the author & sole proprietor of the right to perform a certain play, granted to pltf. the sole & exclusive right to perform, or have performed, the play in Great Britain & Ireland. On Sept. 22, 1898, G.'s agent wrote to pltf. stating that the play had been first performed in Great Britain on a certain date & at a certain place:—Held: a copy of the letter of Sept. 22, 1898, the original having been lost, was admissible as evidence in a copyright action between pltf. & third parties who claimed a right to produce cinematograph films of the play under an agreement for value with G., dated Sept. 6, 1919, to prove that the first performance of the play took place in this country as stated in the letter since, (1) being written by G.'s agent, it constituted an admission by G., a person who, although not named on the record, had a substantial interest in the result, & (2) it constituted an admission by defts.' predecessors in title.

(3) An entry in the register of first performances of dramatic productions at Stationers' Hall is admissible in evidence as a public register. If such an entry is incorrect, the party producing a certified copy of it may be precluded from relying on it as primâ facie proof of a right to produce or reproduce the play to which it relates, but it can be regarded by the ct. as corroboration of other evidence of title.

(4) 1911 Act, s. 1 (1) (a) & s. 1 (3), which provide that copyright shall subsist in every dramatic work if it has been first published in His Majesty's dominions, but that the performance in public shall not be deemed to be publication, prescribe conditions for the future, but do not inflict them on past events so as to destroy existing rights.

(5) Where the owner of dramatic copyright possessed [by assignment] the sole right to perform, or permit the performance of, a certain play before 1911 Act came into operation he acquired, by sect. 2 (1) (b), coupled with sects. 24 & 35 of the Act, & sched. 1 to the Act, the right to the cinematograph & film rights of that play also.

An American corpn. made a film & sent a negative & two positives of it to an English co., who made further copies of the film & handed them to another English co., who let them to a British exhibitor. The American corpn. & the two British cos. were interworking organisations linked together by complex agreements, & they all three shared in part of the receipts from the exhibition of the film by the exhibitor. The exhibitor in exhibiting the film, infringed pltf.'s copyright:—Held: (6) the American corpn. & the two British cos. had actively directed, counselled or aided the infringement by the exhibitor, & had infringed pltf.'s rights within 1911 Act, s. 2 (1), the operative effect of which sub-sect. is extended & not limited by sect. 2 (2) & (3).

He claimed to have the copyright in a slogan in connection with those advertisements. The phrase was, "Beauty is a social necessity, not a luxury." Sometimes there were variations in the words used. Sometimes the words "youthfulness," or "good looks," or "youthful appearance" were substituted for "beauty." In May 1926 deft. inserted an advertisement containing the phrase "A youthful appearance is a social necessity." Some years before 1925 an advertiser had used a similar phrase, "Beauty is a modern necessity":—Held: (1) the only originality, if any, in pltf.'s phrase consisted in the substitution of the word "social" for the word "modern," & pltf.'s phrase was not an original composition; (2) although copyright might subsist in an advertisement, to quote a piece of a sentence from a literary work was too small a matter to afford ground for an action for infringement of copyright; (3) the doctrine de minimis non lex curat applied, & the matter in which copyright was claimed was too small for the ct. to attach any importance to it.—SINANIDE v. LA MAISON KOSMEO (1928), 139 L. was given to pltf. for the erection of the shop-front. The shop-front was, however, erected for defts. by a firm which worked on a tracing of pltf.'s plan & elevation. Pltf. brought an action against defts. for infringement of his copyright by authorising the reproduction of the plan. Defts. contended that a plan could not be reproduced by a shop-front:—Held: (1) the shop-front was a reproduction of the plan, & as the plan was an original literary work within 1911 Act, defts., by authorising the reproduction, had infringed pltf.'s copyright in the plan; (2) the plan was not a design within 1911 Act, s. 22.—CHABOT v. DAVIES, [1936] 3 All E. 77a. —— —— For type—Protected.]—Pltf. co., which carried on the business of supplying cutter-crush machines & type & other materials used therewith, issued a catalogue consisting for the most part of a number of words which illustrated the products of the several sizes & shapes of type supplied by the co. & customers ordered a particular class of type by referring to such words. Nearly all the words were selected by the managing director of the co. In 1922 defts., who were carrying on a similar business, circulated price lists which were practically copies of the price lists of pltf. co., the words used in pltf. co.'s catalogue & price lists to indicate the style of type being copied in defts.' price lists without alteration. Pltf. co. commenced proceedings for an injunction to restrain infringement of copyright in their catalogue & passing off of goods which were not their goods as being their goods. On the question of copyright defts. contended (inter alia) that pltfs.' catalogue was a design or collection of designs capable of registration under Patents & Designs Acts, 1907 (c. 29), & 1919 (c. 80), & not the subject of protection under 1911 Act:—Held: on the question of copyright the contentions put forward by defts. failed, & an injunction restraining infringement of the copyright of pltfs. in their catalogue was granted.—MASSON SEELEY & CO., LTD. v. EMBOSOTYPE MANUFACTURING CO. 85a. Programmes.]—Pltfs. were a limited co. formed to acquire the Postmaster-General's licence for the establishment & working of broadcasting stations, & to carry on any other business ancillary, incidental, or conducive thereto. Under the terms of their licence & a supplementary agreement pltfs. were required to transmit efficiently every day a programme of broadcast matter to the reasonable satisfaction of the Postmaster-General. They were not allowed to alter their memorandum as to objects without his written consent. He might revoke their licence if they failed to transmit satisfactory programmes, & within one month from their ceasing to hold the licence they were bound to pass a special resolution for voluntary winding up. Their profits from all sources beyond a 7½ per cent. cumulative dividend on their paid-up capital belonged to the Postmaster-General. Nine months after the licence, with the approval of the Postmaster-General pltfs. began publishing the Radio Times every Friday, including therein the advance daily programmes for the ensuing week Sunday to Saturday. These programmes gave the day & hour of each performance, the artist's name, appropriate headings for items or groups of items, & translations of unfamiliar foreign titles of songs or music. The preparation, arrangement, & editing of the actual programmes involved considerable time, skill, labour &

77 i. Illustrated catalogue—Collection of designs—Not protected.]—Copyright Act, 1912, Sched., s. 22 (1), read in conjunction with sect. 9 (c) of the Act, provides as follows: "This Act shall not apply to designs capable of being registered under Designs Act, 1906, except designs which, though capable of being so registered, are not used or intended to be used as models or patterns to be multiplied by any industrial process":—Held: (1) the term "multiplied by any industrial process" in that sub-sect. is not limited to the multiplication of the design as a design, but extends to & includes the multiplication by any industrial process of that design in any material form whatsoever; (2) consequently, a manufacturer of articles of metal who had published a catalogue containing illustrations of designs of those articles, with appropriate letterpress, & was registered under Copyright Act as the owner of the copyright in such catalogue, was not entitled to copyright in respect of such of the designs as had been or could be registered under Designs Act, 1906–1912.—BUTLER & CO., LTD. v. DUTCH (1929), 30 S. Park Races on Sat., June 6, 1931." Prior to each meeting the co. published a similar list of acceptances & caused itself to be registered as the owner of the copyright therein. In the compilation of those lists, in order to arrive at a final result, various preliminary processes were gone through in which pltfs., the handicapper & secretary of the co. respectively, had a part. Deft. without the permission of pltf. co. published in his newspaper the information contained in the list of acceptances of June 6, 1931, & claimed the right to publish similar lists of acceptances:—Held: copyright in the list of acceptances for June 6, 1931, was vested in pltfs. or some one or more of them & that such copyright had been infringed.—CANNING PARK RACE COURSE CO., LTD. v. HOPKINS (1932), 49 N. expense, although the preliminary work of fixing the days & hours, engaging the artists, & choosing the items had all been done some time beforehand. Defts. having selected & copied numerous items from a set of advance programmes so published, pltfs. sued for infringement of copyright:—Held: (1) whether there was or was not copyright in an individual programme, there was undoubtedly copyright in the compilation of the seven advance programmes; (2) although the programmes were subject to the approval or veto of the Postmaster-General, who had power to revoke the licence if they included improper matter, they were not a work "prepared or published by or under" his "direction or control" within 1911 Act, s. 18, & so long as pltfs. were allowed to trade & publish them, the copyright belonged to pltfs. & not to the Crown. The fact that the claims of such an advertisement amount to no more than that certain standards to which every manufacturer of dental plates may work had been reached is no defence to an action for an injunction for infringement of copyright when the presentation of those claims is novel & reached by a combination of skill, labour, & expenditure contributed by its author & owner.—COTTON v. FROST, [1936] N. 100 l. Sketch—Radio sketch.]—Deft. co. employed pltf., a dramatic author & producer, to prepare a radio sketch for use in advertising deft.'s business, deft. suggesting the general outline of the work. Pltf. prepared & procured production of the sketch through deft. G. Pltf. & deft. co. entered into a written agreement covering production of the sketch, the agreement containing (inter alia) the following clause: "The feature is only to be used as arranged through Fred W. Kantel." Subsequently deft. co. purported to cancel the agreement & continued to broadcast the sketch under the deft. G.'s direction. Later deft. G. broadcasted the sketch on his own account, for a short time, without pltf.'s consent. In an action for infringement of copyright & for damages:—Held: (1) pltf. was the sole author of the sketch, he having given it form & expression although certain ideas had been suggested by the deft.; (2) the sketch was a dramatic work within the meaning of copyright law which does not require that the expression must be in an original or novel form, but that the work must not be copied from another work. Nor did it matter that the original manuscript was departed from in each broadcast as, in the presentation of a dramatic work in whatever form, it is open to the performer to depart from the literal text of the work; (3) there was infringement of pltf.'s copyright since deft. co. for several months caused to be performed or broadcasted through deft. not to sell a frock of the same design to any customer other than the particular customer for whom it was designed. Defts., without the consent of pltfs. or either of them, made a frock which was precisely the same as pltf.' co.'s frock & made & offered for sale & sold frocks which were substantially reproductions of the frock made by pltf. co. & threatened to continue so to do:—Held: (1) the frock made by defts. whether spread out or held up to view, was not a reproduction of B.'s sketch within 1911 Act, s. 1 (2), & consequently, B.'s copyright in the sketch was not infringed; (2) the frock copied by pltf. co. from the sketch was not an original "work of artistic craftsmanship" within the definition of "artistic work" in sect. 35 of 1911 Act, as pltf. co. were not the originators of the artistic element in the work.

111a. —— Wolf-cub head for Boy Scouts' pole—1911 Act, s. 22.]—Apart from 1911 Act, s. 22. a model of a wolf-cub's head produced from a mould in papier mache & intended to be displayed as their totem on the tops of poles by the Boy Scouts Assocn., is an artistic work in which copyright would subsist under that Act. But, as the model consisted of "features of shape, configuration, pattern, or ornament applied to any article" of manufacture or artificial substance by an industrial process, & was therefore a design within Patents & Designs Act, 1907 (c. 29), s. 93, as amended by Patents & Designs Act, 1919 (c. 80), s. 19, & consequently was capable of being registered under the Act of 1907 &, further, was not a design which was "not used or intended to be used as a model or pattern to be multiplied by any industrial process," it was by Copyright Act, 1911 (c. 46), s. 22, excluded from the operation of that Act & not the subject of copyright thereunder.

In an action by pltfs. for infringement of copyright which they claimed in the model, against the defts. who admittedly had copied & reproduced the model:—Held: for the reasons stated above, pltfs. had no copyright in the model under 1911 Act, & the design not having been registered as a design under the Patents & Designs Act, 1907 (c. 29), the action failed.

Semble: if pltfs. had had copyright in the model, the defts. could not successfully plead, under 1911 Act, s. 8, that they had no reasonable ground for suspecting the subsistence of copyright in the model owing to the absence of registration marks under Patents & Designs Act, 1907 (c. 29), under which they alleged that in their view of the law the model was capable of [illegible] since, relying upon that view, they abstained from making any inquiries whether copyright in the model was claimed.—PYTRAM, LTD. v. MODELS (LEICESTER), LTD., [1930] 1 Ch. 639; 99 L. Pltf. composed music for an opera which was an adaptation of an old play. Defts. prepared an orchestral score from the same source, records of which they offered to the trade. 229a. Sketches for advertisement show cards—Ordered by & made for advertiser for valuable consideration—Design not registered under Patents & Designs Act, 1907 (c. 29).]—Pltfs. claimed to be the assignees from the author of two sketches for cut-out advertisement show cards representing a pierrot & pierrette respectively with large faces & diminutive bodies. These sketches were shown by the author to defts. with defts.' name upon them with the view of being used by them for advertisement purposes. At the suggestion of defts. the colour of the costumes of the figures was changed from mauve to green & yellow; the colour of the lettering of defts.' name was also changed from red to green & yellow. Defts. ordered a number of the sketches so altered at a price which gave the author a very considerable profit. Subsequently defts. obtained a number of the sketches from sources other than pltfs.' Neither pltfs. nor the author had registered the sketches as designs under the above Act. 275a. Bequest of private papers—Manuscripts of unpublished work.]—(1) An author's incorporeal copyright in an unpublished work does not necessarily pass with the corporeal paper on which it is written. Therefore, a bequest to A.B. of "all my private papers" in a will (which also contains a bequest of "manuscripts of my published works" & a direction to sell "copyright") operates to pass the property in an unpublished manuscript to A.B. but not the copyright in the work recorded in the manuscript.

(2) Copyright Act, 1911 (c. 46), applies to a bequest of manuscript & copyright in a will although the testator died before the Act came into force.

(3) By sect. 17 (2) of the Act it is provided that ownership acquired under a testamentary disposition of an author of an unpublished manuscript of that author is primâ facie proof of the copyright being with the owner of the manuscript. By this agreement, made between the composer (the applt.) & the authors of the opera (thereinafter called "the licencors") of the one part & the proprietor of the theatre (thereinafter called "the licencee") of the other part, after reciting that the licencors had delivered the play to the licencee, with the score of the music, with a view to its production in London & elsewhere "on the terms hereinafter mentioned," the licencors granted the licencee the sole & exclusive right of representing the play in the U.K., America, & the British Colonies & Dominions. The agreement further provided that the copyright in the music of the play should remain the property of applt. ; that on the failure of the licencee to produce the play in London within a certain time all rights of representation as aforesaid should revert to & become again the absolute property of the licencors ; that the licencee should pay to the licencors as royalties certain percentages of the gross profits ; that the licencee should keep proper books showing the gross receipts of the theatres at which the play should be represented, & that the licencors should be entitled to inspect the books, so as to enable them to verify the amount of the percentage payable to them. 389a. Irish Free State.]—(1) As by 1911 Act, s. 25 (1), that Act extended throughout His Majesty's dominions, except to a self-governing dominion which did not adopt it, & s. 35 (1) restricted the meaning of "self-governing dominion" to the dominions which are therein specifically named, Ireland not being included, the Act was in force in the Irish Free State when the constitution came into operation, & consequently by art. 73 thereof continued of full force & effect until it was repealed by the Industrial & Commercial Property (Protection) Act, 1927, of the Irish Free State. Sect. 174 (1) of that Act which provides that rights acquired under the Act of 1911 before Dec. 6, 1921, shall not be affected by the repeal, preserves rights the inception of which was before that date although they have been assigned after it.

The Judicial Committee, although of opinion that the judgment of the Supreme Court was wrong in holding that the appellants were not entitled to any remedy in respect of an infringement in 1926 of their rights under 1911 Act, advised that the judgment should be discharged only so far as it dealt with costs, as the Copyright (Preservation) Act, 1929, passed by the Irish Free State legislature after the grant of special leave to appeal, while enacting that rights under 1911 Act were to be deemed always to have subsisted in the Irish Free State, provided by sect. 4 that no remedy or relief should be granted in respect of any infringement which had there taken place before the passing of the Act.

(2) A local authority commits an infringement under 1911 Act, s. 2 (1), if a band which it has engaged to perform in public plays, without consent, copyrighted musical works which are included in a programme approved by the local authority, & the performance is for the "private profit" of the local authority, within sect. 2 (3), although any profit resulting will be applied to the relief of ratepayers.—PERFORMING RIGHT SOCIETY, LTD. v. BRAY URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1930] A. h 1. —— —— Effect of Canadian Copyright Act on rights of British subject].—In the case of a British subject, whether resident in Canada or not, the protection which he is given under sect. 4 (1) of Copyright Act, R. S. C., 1927, is not dependent upon or qualified by the provisions of the Revised Convention of Berne of 1908, to which, & the protocol thereto of 1914, Canada gave its adherence in 1923. Therefore there is infringement when a newspaper article, of the class which is the subject of copyright, written by a British subject & first published in His Majesty's Dominions is reproduced in a Canadian newspaper, without the consent of the author or the assignee, if any, of his rights, even though it cannot be protected under the Berne Convention because no notice expressly forbidding its reproduction has been given.—GRIBBLE v. MANITOBA FREE PRESS CO., LTD., [1931] 3 W. Applt. did nothing beyond acknowledging the receipt of the information :—Held : no inference should be drawn that applt. The orchestra, which was paid by the syndicate, played the pieces in question. Defts., who were the occupiers of a dancing hall, engaged on the terms of a written agreement a band to provide music therein. The agreement provided that the band should not, in the music played, infringe any copyright, & should be liable for damages & costs caused by any infringement. There was also a notice posted in the hall that "only such music as may be played without fee or licence is allowed to be played in this hall." On one occasion the band played certain music, the copyright of which belonged to pltfs., without pltfs.' licence; but defts. did not know, & had no reasonable ground for suspecting, that this infringement would take place. In an action by pltfs. for damages & an injunction:—Held: on its true construction, the agreement between defts. & the band constituted the latter the servant of defts., & not independent contractors; the band on the occasion in question were acting in the course of their employment; defts. were liable under 1911 Act, s. 2, for the infringement of copyright; & pltfs. were entitled to damages & an injunction.—PERFORMING RIGHT SOCIETY, LTD. v. MITCHELL & BOOKER (PALAIS DE DANSE), LTD., [1924] 1 K. 489d. Reproduction in news film—"Fair dealing."]—The owners of the copyright in a musical composition sued two cos. for infringement. Defts. denied that this was an infringement:—Held: there had been an actionable infringement of pltfs.' copyright, as there had been a reproduction of a "substantial part" of the musical composition within 1911 Act, s. 1 (2), the acts of defts. did not constitute a "fair dealing" with the work within 1911 Act, s. 2 (1) (i.), & damage had been proved.—HAWKES & SON (LONDON), LTD. v. PARAMOUNT FILM SERVICE, LTD., [1934] Ch. 593; 103 L. performance took place sixty-two members were present; but, apart from the five performers, there were no guests, it having been made a condition of the performance that no guests should be present:—Held: the performance was a performance "in public" within sect. 1 (2) of 1911 Act, & therefore it constituted an infringement of pltf.'s copyright. 513a. —— —— ——.]—Pltfs. were the publishers of a magazine, published in America at frequent intervals, called "Adventure." Defts. proposed to publish a monthly magazine called "Hutchinson's Adventure Story Magazine." In an action by pltfs. to restrain such publication:—Held: where any one adopted a descriptive word, as pltfs. had done, they must not object if other persons made use of it, as descriptive of similar articles; pltfs. had no monopoly of the word "Adventure," & on the evidence no real confusion existed between pltfs.' & defts.' periodicals.—RIDGWAY CO. v. HUTCHINSON (1923), 40 R. P. C. 335.

523a. —— Title of film.]—(1) Pltfs. who were the trustees of the will of the late S. H., the author of a play called "The Younger Generation," brought this action to restrain defts., Film Booking Offices, Ltd. & Universal Pictures, Ltd., from selling, letting for hire or exhibiting in public a cinematograph film under the title "The Younger Generation" in such a way as to represent to the trade or public that such cinematograph film was a film version of the play by S. H. The play was first performed in Manchester in 1910, & in 1912 it was produced in London & subsequently was performed at intervals by touring companies up to the commencement of the action. The play was published in 1910 & the demand for copies was still active. There was a continuing demand for the play in respect of amateur performances. Three films having nothing in common with the subject-matter of, & from their nature unlikely to be confused with, the pltfs.' play had been shown in this country under the title "The Younger Generation" in the years 1913, 1915, & 1926. Defts.' film was released for exhibition to the public in Sept. 1929:—Held: the evidence fell short of establishing the fact that the title "The Younger Generation" used in connection with a film meant in the mind of the film-going public a film based on the play of that name by S. H.

(2) Defts., Universal Pictures, Ltd., by their defence denied all liability to pltfs., & at the same time paid five guineas into ct. in satisfaction of any claim for damages & offered to submit to an injunction or to give an undertaking in the terms claimed by pltfs. Upon the undertaking being drawn up these defts. refused to pay pltfs. the costs of a motion for an interlocutory injunction which they contended should be apportioned between defts. Accordingly the action was continued against these defts. No order was made on the motion except costs to be costs in the action. The action against both defts. was dismissed with costs.—HOUGHTON v. FILM BOOKING OFFICES, LTD. (1931), 48 R. P. C. 329.

523b. —— ——.]—Pltf., whose professional name was L. W., wrote a sketch which was first produced under the title "Washing a Car." He sent it to G. C., a comedian, who thought he could improve it, & only left in eight passages of pltf.'s, the dramatis personæ & the mise-en-scène. The sketch so altered was produced, & after a time was called "The New Car." In 1928 it was acted for six months by G. C., & in 1930 was acted by him at a Command Performance. Afterwards a paragraph appeared in a newspaper: "The King's Enjoyment. . . . It was George Clarke in Laurie Wylie's capital sketch 'The New Car' who first set the fun going." Pltf. had received payment for the scenic rights of the sketch. Defts. then made a film which in fact did not follow the lines of "The New Car," but in May, 1930, they sent a notice to the newspapers: "The man who made the Queen laugh, George Clarke, in 'His First Car.' Come & see the talking version. A P. D. C. Picture." The writ was then issued by pltf. for damages for passing off & for an injunction; defts. paid £5 into ct. in satisfaction of all claims. On a motion in the action defts. undertook not to repeat the advertisements until trial. Defts. shortly after giving the undertaking, made an announcement at a trade performance that their film "His First Car" had no connection with a sketch by Laurie Wylie entitled "Washing a Car" or "The New Car." Pltf. had parted with the performing rights of his sketch for five years from 1928. The judge held that pltf. was the owner of the copyright in the sketch "The New Car," & entitled to prevent defts. from passing off their film as a film version of that sketch. The injunction was not granted owing to what was said by the directors of deft. co. at the trial preventing its necessity, but an inquiry was ordered as to damages:—Held: in substance the sketch renamed "The New Car" was the production of pltf., who was entitled to the copyright in it; there had been an attempt to pass off & the action was rightly made a passing off action, &, though by what had taken place at the trial an injunction had become unnecessary, pltf. was entitled to go to trial. The inquiry as to damages was not necessary, however, as the £5 paid into ct. was sufficient, having regard to the fact that pltf. had parted with his film rights for five years & that there had appeared shortly after the advertisements an account in the newspapers of the interlocutory proceedings, & having regard to the announcement made at the trade show. Decision affirmed, with the exception that the order for an inquiry as to damages was held to be unnecessary.—SAMUELSON v. PRODUCERS DISTRIBUTING CO., LTD., [1932] 1 Ch. 201; 101 L. J. 523c. —— ——.]—Pltf. was part author & composer of a play entitled Irish & Proud of It, & the owner of the copyright in the words & music of it. The play was first produced in 1914 & continued to be produced until 1924. It had never been published in book form. In 1936 defts. produced a film which was given the name of Irish & Proud of It. It was admitted that the film had nothing to do with pltf.'s play, & it was found as a fact that no ordinary member of the public would think that the film was an adaptation of the play. Pltf. contended that his copyright gave him the exclusive right to present a film representation of his play, that in doing so he would naturally use the title of the play, that the production of a film under the same title by defts. was an interference with his rights, & that unless his rights were protected he might suffer damage by reason of defts. using that title:—Held: as there was no immediate prospect of any film version of the pltf.'s play being produced in public, he was not entitled to an injunction restraining defts. from continuing to produce their film under the title Irish & Proud of It.—O'GORMAN v. PARAMOUNT FILM SERVICE, LTD., [1937] 2 All E. 559a. —— For conversion—Issue of infringing copies.]—Copyright Act, 1911, gives the owner of the copyright in a literary work the sole right of reproducing the work or any substantial part thereof, & the sole right of authorising such reproduction. Those rights are separate & distinct, & the infringement of each is a distinct & separate tort.

Pltf., the author of a book, sued & obtained judgment against D. for infringement of his copyright therein. Subsequently pltf. sued the publishers of the infringing work claiming damages for infringement under sect. 6 & for conversion under sect. 7 of 1911 Act. He also sued the printers claiming damages in respect of the printing of the infringing copies:—Held: (1) the judgment in the previous action against D. for infringement was, by reason of the rule in Brinsmead v. Harrison (1872), L. R. 7 C. P. 547, a bar to the present action against the publishers, who were joint tortfeasors with D. in the publication of the infringing work; (2) the publishers were liable in damages for conversion under sect. 7 of 1911 Act, in respect of the issue to the public in Aug. 1933, of copies of the offending work; (3) the printers were liable in damages for infringement in respect of the separate tort of printing the work.—ASH v. HUTCHINSON & CO. No offence is committed against 1911 Act, s. 2 (2), unless the infringement is deliberate, in the sense of deliberately continuing to use or exhibit the work when the exhibitor knows that it infringes copyright. Another pltf. was the assignor of those rights, but there was no evidence that he was the legal owner of the remaining part of the copyright:—Held: the assocn., as the legal owner of the performing rights, could maintain the suit.—AUSTRALIAN PERFORMING RIGHT ASSOCN. & J. illustrations for men's clothes. In 1935, deft., a tailor, cause to be exhibited in his shop, show-cards displaying a man in morning-dress. He also put up posters at railway stations displaying a man in evening-dress. On Oct. 16 pltf. wrote to deft. complaining that the posters & show-cards infringed copyright. On Oct. 18 pltf. supplied deft.'s solr. with copies of the work said to be infringed. Deft. at once removed the show-cards from his premises, & took steps to find out whether or not he was infringing pltf.'s copyright. On Oct. 23 he wrote to pltf. saying that although he did not admit any infringement of pltf.'s copyright, he thought it best to remove any cause of complaint by discontinuing the exhibition. On the same day pltf. issued a writ claiming from deft. damages for infringement of copyright. The judge found on the facts that there had been no unreasonable delay on deft.'s part in investigating pltf.'s complaint:—Held: no "knowledge" within the sub-sect. could be imputed to deft. until he had had a reasonable time & opportunity to find out whether he was exhibiting by way of trade any work which infringed copyright. On the evidence, the time when deft. acquired that knowledge was Oct. 23. Therefore, at the time the writ was issued, there was no exhibition by way of trade or any work which, to deft.'s knowledge, infringed pltf.'s copyright. The writ was issued prematurely & the action failed.—VAN DUSEN v. KRITZ, [1936] 2 K. B. 176; 105 L. J. K. B. 498; 155 L. T. 258; 80 Sol. Jo. 226.

Part XIV.—Remedies.

564a. Action by publisher—Presumption of ownership—Effect of Copyright Act, 1911 (c. 46), s. 6 (3).]—In 1896, there was published a new edition of a handbook entitled "The Perfect Ceremonies of Craft Masonry" which, for the purposes of Copyright Act, 1842 (c. 45), was a new work, but the name of its author was unknown. That edition & all the subsequent editions, which were mere reprints of the 1896 edition & contained no new or original work, bore on their flyleaves the imprint: "Privately printed for A. Lewis." From about the year 1906 to the date of his death on Aug. 2, 1909, one John Hogg carried on the business of publishing masonic rituals at 13 Paternoster Row, London, under the name of A. Lewis. Thereafter Godfrey Hogg down to the date of his death in 1922 & thenceforth his widow, pltf. Charlotte Hogg, carried on the same business under the name of A. Lewis. In an action by Charlotte Hogg, who claimed to be the owner of the copyright in the work entitled "The Perfect Ceremonies of Craft Masonry," for infringement thereof the defts. put in issue the existence of any copyright in the work & the title of pltf. to copyright, if any, therein; &, in the absence of proof of her derivative title to copyright, pltf. relied on Copyright Act, 1911 (c. 46), s. 6 (3) (b), & claimed that she, as publisher, whose name was imprinted on the flyleaves of her editions of the work, must be presumed to be the owner of the copyright in the work:—Held: the presumption referred to in sect. 6 (3) (b) of the Copyright Act, 1911 (c. 46), s. 6 (3) (b), that the person whose name is indicated on an anonymous work as the publisher thereof is the owner of the copyright therein, is based on the hypothesis that the publisher whose name is so indicated is not the real owner of the copyright therein & is raised merely for the purpose of giving such a publisher a locus standi in proceedings for infringement taken by him under that sect. on behalf of the real owner of the copyright, & accordingly, & in view of the fact that the reprint of the 1896 edition issued by pltf. could not be the subject of copyright, the presumption did not enure to the benefit of pltf. further than as aforesaid in the absence of proof of her derivative title to an antecedent copyright.—HOGG v. TOYE & CO., LTD., [1935] Ch. 497; 104 L. 575a. For infringement & conversion—Cumulative remedies in respect of different torts.]—In an action for an alleged infringement of pltfs.' copyright in a certain publication, pltfs. claimed (inter alia) an inquiry as to (i) damages suffered by reason of the infringement, & (ii) damages for conversion. Defts. admitted the infringement, but contended that the remedies given by 1911 Act, ss. 6, 7 were alternative & not cumulative & that pltfs. must elect their remedy:—Held: (1) the remedies were cumulative & not alternative & pltfs. could recover damages under both sects. Each claim was in respect of a different wrong, the former for a wrong done to an incorporeal right, the copyright; & the latter for conversion of particular chattels, the infringing copies, which by sect. 7 are deemed to be the property of pltf.; (2) in assessing damages under the two heads, the tribunal making the assessment must avoid any overlap; but, in general, the damages for conversion will be

575c. —— Limitation of action.]—C. having published a book which incorporated part of a book already published by S., S. brought an action against C. for damages both for infringement of copyright & for conversion. C. admitted both infringement & conversion & offered to pay damages for either infringement or conversion, but not for both. The Ct. of Appeal decided on a point of law that the damages were cumulative & not alternative, & the action came on for assessment of damages & a decision whether or not damages for conversion came under the limitation of the time for commencement of an action in respect of infringement of copyright to three years next after the infringement, imposed by Copyright Act, 1911 (c. 46), s. 10 :—Held : (1) as the expression "an action in respect of infringement of copyright" was wide enough to cover the claim for damages for conversion, the limitation by sect. 10 applied to the conversion; (2) the time ran from the infringement & the infringement was the printing of the infringing copies, & the claim for damages for conversion was limited to copies printed within three years before the issue of the writ; (3) the conversion at the date of which the value of the infringing copies must be assessed was the order by C. to the binders to bind the unbound sheets containing the infringing copies into the bound copies of C.'s book.—SUTHERLAND PUBLISHING CO., LTD. v. CAXTON PUBLISHING CO., LTD. The deft. objected that if that was the pltf.'s case it ought to have been plainly so stated in the pleadings & the deft. was thereby embarrassed :—Held : the pleading was sufficient in law but was undesirable in such a case. (2) The deft. in her defence, while denying liability, offered an undertaking not to repeat the reproduction of copyright matter, referring particularly to one passage, to deliver up all copies & to pay costs & to submit to an order in these terms :—Held : the pltf. could disregard such offer & proceed with the action in a case where liability was denied & extensive infringement had been proved.—OLIVER v. DICKIN, [1936] 2 All E. Defts. afterwards published & sold two drawings, which were made by alterations of pltf.'s original drawings, but which had titles different from the titles of pltf.'s drawings. Defts. did not in any way expressly represent that the drawings made by such alterations were pltf.'s. Pltf. brought against defts. a passing-off action in which she alleged that her work had a distinctive character & could be recognised without bearing her name, & she claimed an injunction & penalties under sect. 7 of the above Act:—Held: to satisfy the sect. there must be a selling or publishing in conditions under which, to the knowledge of the seller or publisher, there was either expressly or by necessary impli a representation that the author was the author of the work in the form in which it was sold or published, & since, although there was in many of pltf.'s productions a measure of distinctiveness, the mere seeing of defts.' productions did not necessarily suggest the inference that they were the unaltered work of pltf., the action failed.—PRESTON v. RAPHAEL TUCK & SONS, [1926] Ch. 667; 95 L. 152a. Summoning "regular jurymen" — Improper.]—(1) Semble : for a coroner before an inquest is held to take a person who is subsequently to serve on the jury & privately investigate with him any of the facts of the case, whether or not it can be shown that there was anything in the nature of discussion between them, is contrary to public policy, "misconduct" at common law, & ground for quashing the inquisition under Coroners Act, 1887 (c. 71), s. 6 (1).

(2) Semble : the fact that at a view, by a coroner's jury, of the scene of a collision where two vehicles had collided, a police constable, who had already been sworn & given evidence at the inquest, was allowed to point out to the jury where had been the marks in the roadway of the two vehicles which were said to have met, & where one of the vehicles had come to rest, the distance between which points the jury measured, ground for quashing an inquisition under sect. 6, sub-sect. (1), of the Coroners Act, 1887 (c. 71), s. 6 (1).

The ct. expressed the following opinions :—

(3) The practice of summoning eleven jurors to serve on a coroner's jury from a list or panel of only sixteen or seventeen persons in a large city so that some of the same persons are summoned time after time, is very objectionable, & is contrary to the principle of the jury system. The practice of calling a small panel of "regular jurymen," whether or not it is illegal, is improper.

(4) Probably, as a general rule, it is better that a coroner should not accompany his jury upon a view of the scene of a collision between vehicles or upon a view of the vehicles. (5) But if he does so accompany the jury he should carefully abstain from any discussion of the case with the jury at such view.

(6) A coroner is not bound to allow others, such as those concerned or their representatives, to be present on such a view by the coroner. It is a matter for his discretion.

Her body had been subjected to a post-mortem examination by the Govt. medical officer, & buried soon afterwards, without having been viewed by resp. At the inquiry, resp. was asked by counsel, on behalf of a subpœnaed witness, whether he had received a request in writing, but refused to give any such information. Upon application by the witness in question for a prohibition directed to resp., & restraining him from proceeding further with the inquiry:—Held: it was immaterial whether he had received a written request to hold such inquest, since his jurisdiction arose independently of it; notwithstanding the abolition of the coroner's jury by Inquests of Death Act, 1866, s. 5, he had no jurisdiction to hold the inquiry except super visum corporis; & appct. was entitled to prohibition.—R. v. STAINES, Ex p. O'CONNOR (1930), S. Objection was taken by counsel for the accused to the jurisdiction of the coroner to hold an inquiry save super visum corporis, but the objection was overruled. A rule nisi for a prohibition was therefore obtained to restrain the coroner from proceeding:—Held: inasmuch as an arm was not sufficient to constitute a body & the coroner had no jurisdiction in the absence of a view of the body, the rule should be made absolute.—Re ORAM, Ex p. BRADY (1935), 52 N. 417a. —— No duty to hold inquest—Death from natural causes.]—Three applts. who were husband, wife & daughter, were convicted of obstructing a coroner in the execution of his duty. Evidence was given that a male child had been born to the daughter on Nov. 3, 1932; that on several occasions during the months of Jan. & Feb. 1933, the family had been seen with this child, & that on all those occasions the child appeared to be suffering from a bad cough; & that on Feb. 16 the dead body of the child was found concealed in a hedge. Subsequently the husband & wife made statements in which they admitted having put the body in the hedge, & the daughter stated that she had seen her parents take the body away & return without it. A medical witness, who had made a post-mortem examination, said that death was due to natural causes:—Held: the foundation of a charge of this kind was that the case should be one in which there was a duty on the part of a coroner to hold an inquest; the evidence in the present case had not established that there was any such duty; &, further, even if that had been established, there was no evidence that applts., or any of them, intended to obstruct the coroner. The convictions must, accordingly, be quashed.—R. v. PURCY (1933), 149 L. T. 432; 97 J. P. 153; 24 Cr. App. Rep. 70; 29 Cox, C. C. 657, C. C. A.

861a. Validity—Proxy by annual subscriber—What amounts to payment.]—By the rules of an infirmary, which is a voluntary assocn. supported by voluntary contributions, for the purpose of providing medical advice & assistance gratis, the medical officers are to be elected by the governors. Any person subscribing one guinea or more annually is a governor during the continuance of his subscription; on the occasion of the election of a candidate to the office of surgeon, all ladies, who are governors, subscribers of one guinea per annum, whose subscriptions are not more than one year in arrear, are allowed to vote by proxy, other governors voting in person; & all annual subscriptions become due on Aug. 1, in each year. Pltf. was a candidate with two others at an election on Dec. 29, of a medical officer; a governor tendered proxies for him which were refused by the chairman, on the ground that they appeared by their dates to have been signed before the persons signing them had become subscribers. The proxies were signed by persons who each, about the time of signing, paid over one guinea as a first subscription to the infirmary, to the governor who tendered the proxies. Just before the meeting this governor gave the treasurer of the infirmary his cheque for the whole amount, the treasurer giving him a separate receipt for each guinea in the name of each person subscribing. The chairman declared one of the other two candidates elected, although pltf. would have the majority of votes, if his proxies had been received. The governor who tendered the proxies that same day stopped the payment of his cheque, but three days afterwards he paid the amount to the treasurer. Pltf. subsequently entered the infirmary, & claimed the right to do the duties of medical officer. Defts., who were the chairman & honorary secretary of the governors, resisted his claim & used force sufficient to turn him out, for which pltf. brought an action for assault at a county ct. The judge found a verdict for defts., on the ground that the subscriptions of those persons, whose proxies were rejected, had not been paid before the election, but reserved the question for the ct. on appeal:—Held: these facts constituted payment before the election by the persons whose proxies were rejected, but the validity of the proxies might depend upon the intention of those persons to be annual subscribers; also pltf., not having been in fact elected medical officer, could not question the validity of the election in this action.—WORTHINGTON v. HARGOOD (1873), 27 L. In 1888 the corpn. entered into two agreements with the firm of H. L. & Sons. By the Ouse agreement the corpn. covenanted to allow the firm, their successors & assigns, the right to carry cargoes on the Ouse in consideration of the annual payment of £600 in place of the authorised dues & charges, with a proviso that there should each year be refunded to the firm, their successors & assigns, the difference between the £600 & the amount ordinarily charged on the traffic actually carried. By the Foss agreement the firm covenanted to pay the corpn. £200 per annum for twenty years as a composition for the ordinary tolls, & the corpn. covenanted to allow the firm, their successors & assigns, the free use of the Foss navigation, on payment of £200 per annum in lieu of tolls, for such further term or terms as the firm, their successors or assigns, might from time to time desire. Defts. were the successors of H. L. & Sons:—Held: the agreements were ultra vires, because during their currency, which depended on the wishes of defts., the corpn., no matter what emergency might arise, had disabled itself from exercising its statutory powers to increase the tolls so far as might be necessary; &, being ultra vires at the date of their execution, the agreements did not become intra vires by reason of estoppel, lapse of time, ratification, acquiescence or delay.—YORK CORPN. v. LEETHAM (HENRY) & SONS, LTD., [1924] 1 Ch. 557; 94 L. 986a. Expenses of running omnibuses—Power to run omnibuses on authorised routes—Omnibuses run to connect up authorised routes.]—The corpn. of L., a municipal corpn., had by virtue of their special Act power to maintain & run a service of omnibuses within the city or outside the city boundaries. In the latter case, their special powers only extended to the running of omnibuses along the route of any tramways which the corpn. should be authorised to construct. There were in fact two such authorised tramway routes. The expenditure in connection with the running of these authorised tramways could, under the corpn.'s statutory powers, be borne out of the city fund. The corpn. began an omnibus service in pursuance of their statutory powers, but it appeared that for a very small portion of the omnibus route, namely, for a distance of forty yards, the service of omnibuses ran outside the boundaries of the city, joining up with the tramway routes slightly further on, & that the expenses in connection therewith were borne by the city fund. An action was commenced by a ratepayer for a declaration (inter alia) that the running of these omnibuses over this particular stretch, & payment of the expenses in connection therewith out of the city fund, was ultra vires the statutory powers of the corpn., & ought to be prohibited. The question at issue was whether, so far as the forty yards stretch was concerned, the corpn. were entitled to spend moneys out of the city fund in connecting an authorised route of omnibuses outside the city with a route of omnibuses within the city boundaries. Under their statutory powers the corpn.'s service of omnibuses along the route of a tramway outside the city which they were authorised to construct was a part of their tramways undertaking, & they were also authorised to apply the city fund in discharging the expenses in connection with the tramways undertaking:—Held: the expense of running omnibuses over the forty yards so as to connect the two routes was an expense fairly incidental to the tramways undertaking, & that it was not

Purchase of land for street widening & pleasure garden—Subsequent use of pleasure garden for street widening.]—A local authority bought land in 1896 for the purposes of: (a) street widening ; (b) making new streets ; (c) providing public walks & pleasure gardens. The land was conveyed to the local authority for the purposes authorised by the Public Health Acts. A plan & specifications were submitted to the Local Government Board, & subsequently the scheme was carried out in accordance with the plan & specifications. The pleasure gardens were surrounded by railings, & were not dedicated or open to the public. In 1927 the local authority resolved to utilise one of the pleasure grounds for the purpose of street widening & providing a parking place for motor cars. Objections were raised by some of the occupiers of adjoining premises, & an action was brought to restrain the local authority from carrying out their resolution :—Held : as one of the purposes for which the land was acquired was street widening, the local authority was not acting ultra vires in using part of the pleasure gardens for that purpose.—A.-G. v. SUNDERLAND CORPN., [1929] 2 Ch. 436 ; 45 T. 997b. Power to supply gas, water & transport—Payments out of reserve funds for benefit of unemployed.]—Defts. were authorised by the Oldham Corpn. Act, 1925, to supply gas, water & transport services, & their duties as regards the revenue from & expenses incurred in connection with these services are set out in sects. 310, 311 of that Act. Defts., with the object of providing work for the unemployed, transferred from each of the reserve funds of the gas, water & transport undertakings £5,000 to the general rate fund. An action was brought at the relation of neighbouring councils, in whose areas defts. were authorised to supply the above services, for (i) a declaration that the transfer was contrary to Oldham Corpn. Act, 1925, s. 311, & ultra vires, (ii) an order that defts. transfer the sums back to the respective reserve funds, & (iii) for an injunction restraining defts. from transferring any sums from any of those reserve funds to their general rate fund. Defts. contended that the spending of the money was not ultra vires. Alternatively they counterclaimed for a declaration that the sums of £5,000 might have been charged against revenue :—Held : (1) the language of Oldham Corpn. Act, 1925, s. 311 (1) (g) was imperative, & the transfer of the sums of £5,000, not being one of the purposes mentioned in that paragraph, was ultra vires ; (2) it would have been ultra vires the defts. to have spent money upon the relief works in question out of the revenues of the three undertakings & the declaration asked for in the counterclaim could not be made.—A.-G. v. OLDHAM CORPN., [1936] 2 All E. 1235a. ——.]—By a local Act a canal was vested in applts., who were required by the Act to keep the navigation & locks, & all works to be thereafter executed for the improvement thereof, in an efficient state for the traffic thereon. Applts. raised the coping on both sides of one of their locks & the banks behind it to prevent the lock from being flooded. Resps., adjacent landowners, objected that the effect of the works was to pen back the water in the part of the canal above the lock & to occasion the flooding of their lands, & applts. removed the coping without prejudice to their rights, but they did not reduce the height of the banks :—Held : there being no evidence of negligence, applts., in constructing works in the exercise of their statutory powers for the protection of their navigation, were not liable for the flooding of resps.' lands.—LAGAN NAVIGATION CO. v. LAMBEG BLEACHING, DYEING & FINISHING CO., [1927] A. The committee sued deft. for the unpaid balance of the price of the contract :—Held : notwithstanding the imperative provisions of Punjab Municipal Act, 1911, s. 47, if deft. had received benefit from the contract at the expense of the committee, he must pay for what he had actually received & enjoyed, as if there was an implied contract between the parties ; & the absence of a contract under the seal of the corpn. was therefore no answer to the action brought by the committee. — GUJRANWALA MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE v. FAZAL DUN (1929), I. 1536a. Agent primarily carrying on own business.]—Pltfs., the owners of a vessel damaged in collision with a vessel owned by defts., a foreign corpn., served a writ upon a member of an English firm, E. M. & Co., who acted as defts.' agents. The writ was served at E. M. & Co.'s London offices. Defts. moved to set aside the writ & service on the ground that they were not resident within the jurisdiction. It appeared that E. M & Co. were one of defts.' agents in this country for the booking of freight, issue of passenger tickets, & the ordinary purposes for which ship's brokers are employed. The only remuneration received by them was the customary agents' commission, & they had no concern with the management of deft. corpn. The only name appearing on the door of E. M. & Co.'s offices was their own name, but upon the window of the ground floor their name was exhibited as agents for the deft. corpn. together with the names of other foreign shipping cos. for whom E. M. & Co. acted :—Held : E. M. & Co. were a firm who "sold" & did not "make" contracts on behalf of defts., & defts. did their business in this country "through" E. Some years ago the co. had established a branch of their business in London under the management of A., who had, in obedience to Cos. (Consolidation) Act, 1908 (c. 69), s. 274, on behalf of the co. registered himself as a person resident in the United Kingdom authorised to accept service of process, & the evidence showed that, although at the date of the service of the writ upon A. the co. had long ceased to carry on trade in London, yet certain administrative activities, e.g., the remittance of dividends to shareholders, were then being carried out there, & at no other place, on behalf of the co. :—Held : (1) upon the evidence, deft. co., at the date of the service of the writ upon A., had a place of business within the United Kingdom, within sect. 274 of the above Act, & service upon A. was effective service upon the co.; (2) even if the co. had not at the date aforesaid a place of business within the United Kingdom, such service was effective service upon the co.—SABATIER v. TRADING Co., [1927] 1 Ch. 495; 96 L. 1603a. On equity of redemption—Companies Act, 1929 (c. 23), s. 296.]—In 1899 a limited co. mortgaged to the trustees of a will certain leasehold properties by way of absolute assignment subject to the equity of redemption. In 1910 the co. went into liquidation, & in 1913, the trustees having called in the mtge., the co. made default & the trustees appointed a receiver. In 1916 the co. was dissolved, the income of the property being at that time insufficient to meet the mtge. interest, & nothing was done in respect of the equity of redemption as the liquidator considered it to be of no value. The value of the property having since largely increased, the surviving trustee claimed to be entitled

71a. Question of repairs—Under Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920 (c. 17).]—Deft. was the tenant of a tied public-house with living accommodation, of which pltfs. were the landlords. In 1910, the house was let to deft. at a rent of £75 per annum for three years. At all material times the ratable value was £68. After certain intermediate tenancies at rents less than two-thirds of the ratable value, deft. in Dec. 1920, took from pltfs. a new lease : " To hold the said premises with the appurtenances unto the tenant from Mar. 25, 1920, for the term of seven years . . . at the yearly rent of £120." The reason for the increased rent was a trade revival which had caused a great improvement in the licensed trade of the house. The conditions of the new lease as to repairs were more onerous for the tenant than those of the old. In an action by the landlords for rent, the tenant contended that the repairing clause amounted to a prohibited increase :—Held : the question as to repairs could only be decided by the county ct., & the High Ct. had no jurisdiction on this point.—BRAKSPEAR (W. 138a. Guarantee—Payment by instalments.]—A person, who resided in Shadwell, entered into a contract in writing for the purchase of a bicycle from appcts., on the terms that a certain amount of money should be deposited, & the balance of the price should be paid by instalments, & that, in the event of default in payment of the instalments, the whole balance should become due. Arising out of the said contract, a contract of guarantee was entered into by the purchaser's father, whereby he agreed that, in the event of default in payment of the said instalments, he would pay the sum which thereby became due to the appcts. in London. Default having been made, appcts. desired to sue the guarantor, not in the ct. for the district in which deft. resided or carried on business, but under the provisions of the County Ct. Rules, 1936, Ord. 2, r. 1, which provides that an action may be commenced in the ct. of the district in which the cause of action wholly or in part arose, unless the action is founded on a contract for the sale or hire of goods & payment is to be made by instalments. Appcts. contended that, as the proposed action against the guarantor arose out of a contract in writing by the guarantor providing for payment in London, the cause of action partly arose at the office of appcts. in London :—Held : as the action on the guarantee was in substance founded on a contract for the sale of goods where payment was to be made by instalments it came within the exception to the above rule & should be commenced in the ct. for the district where the guarantor resided.—R. v. SHOREDITCH COUNTY COURT REGISTRAR, Ex p. SAXON FINANCE CORPN., LTD., [1937] 4 All E. 139a. —— —— Issue of summons before leave obtained—Irregularity.]—On Jan. 30, 1924, a tenant of a dwelling-house within the Rent Restrictions Acts lodged two plaints in the West London county ct., the one under sect. 12 (3) of the Act of 1920 for apportionment of rent, & the other under sect. 14 (1) of the same Act for certain sums paid by him in respect of rent which, as he alleged, was irrecoverable by his landlord. These sums were, by sect. 8 (2) of the Act of 1923, recoverable on or before Jan. 31, 1924, but not afterwards. The claim for apportionment could regularly be brought in the West London ct., but the claim for repayment could not be brought in that ct. without the leave of the judge or registrar on an application supported by an affidavit. No affidavit was sworn until Feb. 5, 1924. Notwithstanding this the plaint was entered, a plaint note under the seal of the ct. was given to pltf., & a summons was issued, all bearing the date Jan. 30, 1924. By Ord. 7, r. 2, a summons to appear to a plaint shall be dated of the day on which the plaint was entered, & the date thereof shall be the commencement of the action :—Held : (1) the irregular entry of the plaint & issue of the summons before the necessary leave had been obtained did not deprive the county ct. of jurisdiction to hear the action, but the irregularity could be waived by deft. ; (2) as deft. had appeared to the summons & raised a defence in no way challenging the jurisdiction of the ct., he had waived the irregularity ; the action must therefore be taken to have commenced on Jan. 30, & pltf. was entitled to recover.—PRINGLE v. HALES, [1925] 1 K. In exercising the discretion given him as to the period for the coming into operation of the order, the judge must fix a period reasonably adjusted to the circumstances of the case, including the nature & term of the tenancy. The county ct. judge in two cases of weekly tenants whose tenancies had been validly terminated by notice to quit, refused to make any order in one case, & in the other, while making an order, postponed its operation for twelve months :—Held : this was not a judicial exercise of his discretion, in either case.—SHEFFIELD CORPN. v. LUXFORD, SAME v. MORRELL, [1929] 2 K. No other claim appeared in the plaint or the summons or the particulars of claim :—Held : the county ct. had no jurisdiction to entertain the claim, (1) on the above ground, & (2) on the further ground that the claim was for partial specific performance of an agreement for the sale of property within 1888 Act, s. 67, where the purchase-money exceeded £500, the amount limited by that sect.—DE VRIES v. SMALLRIDGE, [1928] 1 K. Deft. alleged in defence that the sum claimed had been paid to him as wages; &, further, that the county ct. had no jurisdiction, the question between the parties being a dispute concerning wages within above sect. which could only be dealt with by a superintendent thereunder. At the trial it was found as a fact that the sum claimed had been lent to deft., & that there was no real dispute concerning wages: —Held: the county ct. had jurisdiction to entertain the action notwithstanding the sect., inasmuch as that ct. had all along had jurisdiction to entertain an action for money lent & the sect. did not either expressly or by implication exclude that jurisdiction; &, further, the jurisdiction of the superintendent under the sect. did not arise until a party to the dispute called him to decide it, & here no party had called upon him to do so.—STURLEY v. POWELL, [1930] 1 K. 373a. On jurisdiction of county court—Reduction of claim for damages—Alternative claim for injunction.]—Where an action, commenced in the High Ct., has been transferred to a county ct. under 1919 Act, s. 1, the effect of sect. 4 of that Act is to give the county ct. jurisdiction to deal with the matter equal to or the same as that of the High Ct.

Pltf. & deft. entered into an agreement, which provided that in the event of any breach thereof by deft. he should pay to pltf. in respect of each such breach a sum of £150 by way of agreed & liquidated damages. Pltf. alleged that deft. had broken the agreement, & he brought an action in the High Ct. claiming the sum of £150 & an injunction. Pltf. afterwards applied, under 1919 Act, s. 1, to have the action remitted to a county ct., reducing the money claim to £90, & claiming an injunction in the alternative. The master made an order for remittal. Pltf. then delivered particulars of claim, asking for £90 damages or in the alternative an injunction. He admitted, however, that the real object of the action was to obtain an injunction. On the action coming on for trial the county ct. judge declined jurisdiction on the ground that in substance the action was for an injunction alone. On appeal to a Div. Ct., that ct. held that the county ct. judge had jurisdiction to entertain the action, & sent it back to him for trial :—Held : the decision of the Div. 497a. —— Application under Administration of Justice Act, 1920 (c. 81), s. 3—Discretion of judge to order trial without jury.]—On May 10, 1923, pltf. commenced proceedings claiming from defts. damages for personal injuries caused by the alleged negligence of defts.' servants. Defts. filed a defence denying negligence & afterwards gave pltf. notice of an application to dispense with a jury. The application for trial without a jury was made under the above sect. The county ct. judge, without giving any reasons for his decision, ordered the trial of the action without a jury, & pltf. appealed against that order & alleged that the learned judge had not properly exercised his discretion :—Held : the above sect. did not give the county ct. judge an absolute power to order the trial of an action without a jury; the sect. gave him a discretion which must be exercised judicially; in this case there were no proper materials on which the learned judge could exercise his discretion judicially; it would not be a proper exercise of the learned judge's judicial discretion to dispense with a jury merely because it was inconvenient; on the other hand it is not necessary for the judge to give his reasons for dispensing with a jury, but there must be some grounds for so exercising his discretion.—WINN v. LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL (1923), 130 L. The judge allowed two amendments of the particulars of the claim, the first, a statement that the damages claimed were £25; & the second, an allegation that neither the value nor the reserved rent of the servient tenement exceeded the value of £100 by the year: Held: the county ct. judge had power under the above sect. to make the second amendment, & the first amendment also.—UPTON v. FARMER (1930), 142 L. 648a. —— Sum deposited by claimant to goods less than value of goods—More than judgment debt & costs.]—Goods which had been taken in execution under a county ct. judgment were claimed by a claimant. The execution creditor did not admit the claim & claimant deposited with the bailiff under 1888 Act, s. 156, the sum of £26 which was considerably less than the value of the goods claimed, but was more than sufficient to cover the judgment debt & costs of the execution. The money was paid into ct. by the bailiff, who remained in possession of the goods, & an interpleader summons was issued. Before the return day of the interpleader summons the execution creditor gave notice that he admitted the title of claimant to the goods, & the bailiff withdrew from possession. Upon the taxation of the costs the bailiff claimed possession fees up to the date when the execution creditor admitted claimant's title, upon the ground that under sect. 156 he was bound to remain in possession until the amount of the value of the goods was deposited with him:—Held: as the £26 was deposited with & taken by the bailiff under sect. 156 of the Act, he must be deemed to have taken it upon the assumption that it represented the amount of the value of the goods, & therefore he had no right to remain in possession or to possession fees after the date of the deposit.—NEWSUM, SONS & CO., LTD. v. JAMES, [1909] 2 K. 653a. Debt deposited with bailiff by third party—Pending new instalment order.]—Pltf. obtained judgment against defts. for the sum of £53 8*s*. payable in instalments of £2 monthly. One of these instalments being in arrear pltf. levied execution for the whole amount then owing & seized certain property. A friend of defts. then paid the bailiff the whole amount outstanding & costs of the execution, & was given a receipt stating that the sum was paid as a deposit pending an application to the ct. It was intended that upon an application to the ct. deft. should pay the one instalment & the costs of execution & that a new order for payment for instalments should be made. The order made by the ct. followed these terms, but went on to add that if deft. did not pay the costs of execution, the so-called deposit should remain in ct. until further order:—Held: this course was quite irregular as it did not appear whether the friend paid the money as agent of defts. or otherwise. If he paid as such agent the debt was discharged & the execution was at an end, & no further order could be made with regard to it. If, in fact, he was not an agent of defts. no order could be made in respect of the said sum paid as a deposit as the person paying it was not a party to the action.—DOMINE v. COHEN & Co., [1936] 1 All E. 783a. Order for payment of possession fees of high bailiff—Under Ord. 27, r. 1 (2).]—(1) A Div. Ct. has jurisdiction to hear an appeal from the decision of a county ct. judge who, under the above sub-rule has, on the application of the high bailiff, made an order against the execution creditors, who have directed the high bailiff to withdraw, for the payment of his fees.

On May 15, 1924, the high bailiff of a county ct. under a warrant of execution purported to levy upon the goods of judgment debtors at their premises, & put a man in possession. The sheriff was then in possession of the goods under process of an earlier date, but not to the knowledge of the high bailiff, as the county ct. judge found. The high bailiff on taking possession received from judgment debtors a document which stated that in consideration of his withdrawing from possession they authorised him at any time to re-enter & undertook not to remove any of the goods. On June 12, 1924, the high bailiff on the instruction of the judgment creditors withdrew from possession. The execution was ineffective, except in so far as it brought the parties into negotiation with a view to a settlement. The high bailiff made an application to the county ct. judge under the above rule, for an order for payment by the judgment creditors of his fees for keeping possession from May 15 to June 12. The county ct. judge found that the high bailiff did not withdraw from possession, but was in actual possession & not in mere walking possession of the goods, & made an order for payment of the fees claimed:—Held: (2) the possession of the sheriff did not in the circumstances prevent the high bailiff from taking & keeping such possession as would entitle him to claim fees; (3) there was evidence to support the finding of the county ct. judge that the high bailiff did not withdraw from possession, but kept actual as distinct from walking possession; & therefore the order of the county ct. was right.—A. anything, a fortiori: it is the only appropriate tribunal of fact that can decide the issue whether or not a right of way is established, because that issue depends on whether the tribunal is satisfied that there has been, in fact, a dedication, which can only be found if the necessary intention has been made out. —WILLIAMS-ELLIS v. COBB, [1935] 1 K. 847a. Necessity for.]—Pltf. in an action in the county ct. claimed £1 5*s.* 4*d.* damages for breach of contract, & judgment was given in his favour for that amount. Defts. applied to the county ct. judge for leave to appeal, which was refused. Defts. thereupon applied to the Ct. of Appeal for leave to appeal, offering to pay pltfs. costs in any event. The attention of the Ct. of Appeal was not drawn to the County Cts. Act, 1888 (c. 43), s. 120, & per incuriam the ct. gave leave to defts. to appeal against the county ct. judge's judgment. At the hearing of the appeal pltf. raised the preliminary objection that the Ct. of Appeal had no jurisdiction to hear an appeal from the judgment of a county ct. judge in an action for breach of contract where the claim was for less than £20, when the county ct. judge had not given leave to appeal:—Held: upon a consideration of the County Cts. 241 v. ———.]—Accused, who was charged with murder, gave evidence at his trial stating that he remembered nothing from some time shortly before the commission of the crime, when he had a conversation with his wife, until some hours afterwards, when he was charged with the crime in the police station. The defence was that during that period the accused's mind was blank, that he acted unconsciously & automatically, that his mind was so dissociated from his actions that he could not know the nature & quality of his act, or that it was wrong, & that his mind was inactive as a result of mental disease, to which he was predisposed & the onset of which was attributable to his physical & nervous constitution & the happening of certain events. The jury found him guilty & he was sentenced to death. On appeal to the Ct. of Criminal Appeal the trial Judge's charge to the jury was challenged on the ground (inter alia) that the Judge did not direct the jury to the question of "irresistible impulse," which, it was contended, was of itself a good defence in law, that was to say, that even if the accused knew the nature & quality of his act & knew it was wrong, he had a complete defence in law if he nevertheless perpetrated the crime in obedience to an uncontrollable or irresistible impulse to do the act :—Held : by the Ct. of Criminal Appeal, there was no evidence to sustain this contention ; it was inconsistent with the case made at the trial, & the accused's appeal must be dismissed.—A.-G. v. O'BRIEN, [1936] I. 245 iii. ——— ———.]—The driver of a motor car was charged with causing the death of a pedestrian by his reckless driving. It was not disputed that the pedestrian's death had been caused by the excessive speed & dangerous manœuvring of the car :—Held : if accused was otherwise in a condition which justified his driving a car, & if, through no fault of his own & for some cause outwith his control & which he was not bound to foresee, he became either gradually or suddenly not master of his action, through some mental defect, & was in that state at the time of the accident, the jury were entitled to return a verdict of not guilty.—H.M. 297 iv. ———.]—Evidence of drunkenness falling short of a proved incapacity in accused to form the intent necessary to constitute the crime, & merely establishing that his mind was affected by drink so that he more readily gave way to some violent passion, does not rebut the presumption that a man intends the natural consequences of his acts.—SHERU & GAMA v. R. (1923), I. L. R. 7 Lah. 50.—IND.

303 viii. ——— ———.]—The accused appealed from his conviction for murder. It had been contended in his defence that at the time of his act his condition from drink was such that the act could not be murder ; & he alleged misdirection by the trial judge to the jury on this question, which involved the law as to what state of incapacity resulting from drink will reduce a crime from murder to manslaughter :—Held : in the circumstances of the case, an essential question for the jury was : given the existence of some degree of capacity in the accused, & assuming the facts deposed to by Crown witnesses, if credited, in describing the accused's act in striking the fatal blow & his conduct & expressions before & after that act, whether or not he was so affected by drink as to be incapable of having the intent to kill or of having the intent, in reckless disregard of the consequences, to cause some bodily injury, "known" to him to be "likely to cause death." That question was one upon which the jury must pass in order to enable them to determine the existence or non-existence of the intent in fact. As the trial judge, while properly directing the jury's attention to the defence as put forward by accused's counsel, that accused was in such a state that his mind was not functioning, that his "mind was gone," that he was incapable of a degree of "thought" enabling him to be aware of the nature of his physical acts, did not direct them to the question above defined, there should be a new trial.—MACASKILL v. R., [1931] S. 303 ix. ——— ———.]—Prisoner was indicted for the murder of a police officer. That is your test. If upon the whole evidence you feel honestly that this man was drunk to the extent that he did not know what he was doing was dangerous & likely to cause serious injury, then the offence ought to be reduced to manslaughter, but that is for you" :—Held : a misdirection.—R. v. KOVACH, [1931] 1 D. Two letters were written by the accused to a man who had advertised for a situation & were sent to him by post. The letters, which were couched in obscene & lecherous terms, purported to be written by a woman, & invited the recipient to come to the place where the accused lived, & to have immoral relations. The recipient, on reading them, believed they were written by a woman. He did not go to the place where the accused lived, & no meeting between them took place. The accused was charged with attempting to procure the commission of an act of gross indecency by the recipient of the letters with himself. At the trial the jury were asked to say only (i) whether the accused was the writer of the letters, & (ii) if so, whether the letters amounted to an attempt to procure the commission of the offence charged. The jury received no direction in regard to what was necessary in law to constitute an attempt, as distinguished from mere intention, to commit an offence. The jury convicted the accused:—Held: the accused's acts were only remotely, & not immediately, connected with the commission of the offence, & the jury should have been directed that such acts did not in law constitute an attempt to procure the commission of the offence charged. He was not informed of his right to trial by a jury on appearing before the ct., before the charge was gone into, but he was so informed afterwards, when all the evidence had been heard, but before the ct. had announced their decision. Deft. protested twice by his solr. that he could not at that stage be put to this election, but on being informed by the chairman that if he did not elect, the case would be sent for trial, he stated by his solr. that he would be dealt with summarily. Deft. was then convicted & fined :—Held : the proceedings were a nullity as the giving of that information to the person charged on his appearing before the ct., "before the charge is gone into," in accordance with Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), s. 17, is a condition precedent to the validity of the subsequent proceedings. —— —— —— —— ——.]—A person on board one of His Majesty's ships, which was then in commission & lying in the tidal waters of the Firth of Forth above the Forth Bridge, was alleged to have committed larceny as a clerk or servant to the Navy, Army & Air Force Institutes. He was placed under arrest by an executive officer of the ship, &, some days later, by which time the vessel had arrived in Torbay, he was apprehended by the Devon police & charged before the justices, who committed him for trial at the Devon quarter sessions. The indictment charged an offence contrary to Larceny Act, 1916 (c. 50), s. 17 (1) (a), committed on the high seas. Prisoner was arraigned & pleaded not guilty & a jury was impanelled, but quarter sessions declined to proceed with the indictment upon the ground that Larceny Act, 1861 (c. 96), s. 115, which was said to give them jurisdiction, did not extend to offences committed in estuaries or rivers in Scotland, & that the offence charged was properly triable only by the Scottish cts.:—Held: quarter sessions had jurisdiction to try the indictment inasmuch as it alleged an offence which, by virtue of Naval Discipline Act, 1866 (c. 109), was committed within the jurisdiction of the Admlty. of England, & therefore, being an offence mentioned in Larceny Act, 1861, it was triable, under sect. 115 of that Act, in the county where the offender was apprehended.—R. v. DEVON JJ., Ex p. PUBLIC PROSECUTIONS DIRECTOR, [1924] 1 K. 1562a. —— —— Grounds for.]—A constable may arrest a person without a warrant if at the time of effecting the arrest he has reasonable & probable cause to suspect that a crime has been committed, & that the person arrested is guilty of it. The question of whether the constable had reasonable & probable cause for making the arrest is for the judge & not for the jury. Amongst the facts which the constable may properly take into consideration in deciding whether to make the arrest is the fact that clothing belonging to the suspected person has been found near the scene of the crime.

Per LORD WRIGHT : It is doubtful whether the constable may consider the fact that the person arrested was well known to the police & was absent from his home at the material date.—MCARDLE v. EGAN (1934), 150 L. T. 412 ; 98 J. P. 103 ; 32 L. G. R. 85 ; 30 Cox, C. C. 67, C. A.

Such persons can only be apprehended without warrant if they already are at the time of their arrest & imprisonment suspected persons or reputed thieves. That does not mean that if a constable suspects the person whom he apprehends he is entitled to arrest & imprison him without warrant. The person so apprehended must be some person who belongs to the class of suspected persons by reason of his antecedent conduct. "Suspected person" means a person who has acquired the character of a suspect & does not mean every person whom the apprehending constable suspects to be loitering with intent to commit a felony. Municipal Corpns. Act, 1882 (c. 50), s. 193, empowers a constable to apprehend an idle & disorderly person whom he has just cause to suspect of intention to commit a felony, but if in an action against a constable for false imprisonment it is not pleaded in the defence that the pltf. was an idle or disorderly person the deft. cannot rely on the sect.

Sect. 513 (2), (3) of Liverpool Corpn. Act, 1921, empowers a constable to arrest & detain without warrant any loose, idle, or disorderly person whom he has good cause to suspect of having committed or being about to commit any felony, misdemeanour, or breach of the peace, or who is found between certain hours lying or loitering in any street & not giving a satisfactory account of himself. To justify apprehension & detention under this section it must be established that the person apprehended belongs to the class of loose, idle, or disorderly persons. The power to apprehend does not arise where all that can be proved is that the constable honestly believed on reasonable grounds that the person apprehended was a loose, idle, or disorderly person. Sect. 513 of 1921 Act is contained in a private Act of Parliament which by its title gives no indication that it is an Act dealing with the authority of police-constables, & if a deft. in an action for false imprisonment desires to rest his defence on any part of that section he should give notice of it in the defence.

Per SCOTT, L.J.—Powers of arrest without warrant should be expressed in unambiguous & simple language which anyone can understand & the occasions for reliance on a constable's discretion should be defined with care in any statutory provision conferring such a power.—LEDWITH v. ROBERTS, [1937] 1 K. 1674 iii. ——.]—Where an arrest is not justified without a warrant, it is necessary for the constable making the arrest to have the warrant in his personal possession, even although the person arrested does not demand its production. It is not sufficient that a warrant has been issued directed to "all or any of the police officers" of the province, & is in possession of a constable on whose instructions by telephone another constable at a different place makes the arrest & delivers the person arrested to the constable who holds the warrant.—R. v. LINDER, [1924] 3 D. constables of the county of Chester, commanding them to apprehend pltf. & convey him before a ct. of summary jurisdiction at D. to be dealt with according to law. The warrant showed on its face that £19 17*s.* was payable by pltf. & was in the form prescribed by the Bastardy (Forms) Order, 1915, but it did not contain the words " unless the said sum & all costs & charges be sooner paid " which were directed to be inserted in such warrants by the Bastardy (Forms) Amendment Order, 1921. The warrant was delivered to deft., the superintendent of police at D., & some time later pltf. was arrested by a constable acting under deft.'s orders. Pltf. was taken in custody through the streets & placed in a cell by deft.'s order. At the time the arrest was effected the warrant was in deft.'s possession at the police station & was not in the possession of the constable who made the arrest. Pltf.'s father immediately after the arrest tendered £19 17*s.* to deft. & asked for his son's release, but deft. refused to accept the money. Pltf.'s solr. then sent a letter to deft. enclosing the £19 17*s.* & demanding pltf.'s release, but deft. did not open the letter & pltf. was kept over-night in the cell. Pltf. was brought on the following morning before a court of summary jurisdiction at D., when solr.'s letter was produced & found to contain £19 17*s.*, whereupon the magistrates ordered pltf.'s immediate release. Pltf. brought an action against deft. for false imprisonment, & the jury returned a verdict in pltf.'s favour & awarded £175 as damages for the arrest, & £175 as damages for the unlawful detention at the police station after the tender of the money :—Held : (1) the warrant was invalid by reason of the omission therefrom of the words " unless the said sum & all costs & charges be sooner paid," inasmuch as the provision in the Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895 (c. 39), that " the payment of any sum of money directed to be paid by any order under this Act may be enforced in the same manner as the payment of money is enforced under an order of affiliation," refers not to the date when that Act was passed, but to the date when it was sought to enforce the order, & in the present case at that date the Bastardy (Forms) Amendment Order, 1921, requiring the insertion of those words in the warrant, was in force ; (2) the arrest was wrongful, because the constable had not the warrant in his possession at the time he effected the arrest ; (3) deft. was not protected by Criminal Justice Act, 1925 (c. 86), s. 44, for in order to obtain that protection the warrant must have been lawfully issued, & the person apprehended must have been charged with an " offence," whereas in fact the warrant was invalid & pltf. was not charged with an " offence " within Criminal Justice Act, 1925 (c. 86).—HORSFIELD v. BROWN, [1932] 1 K. 2204a. —— —— Wrong statute inserted—Later statute in similar words.]—The accused, who was a trustee under a will, was charged with having in Mar. 1916, fraudulently converted to his own use certain shares deposited with him by co-trustee. In an affidavit filed by the accused in defence to proceedings for an account commenced against him by the co-trustee in the Ch. Div., the accused swore that he had, with the approval of his co-trustee, invested the capital in his own business. Subsequently, in his preliminary examination in bkpcy., he made admissions to the Official Receiver in regard to the disposition of the capital by him. He was indicted for fraudulent conversion as a trustee under Larceny Act, 1916 (c. 50), s. 21, but the judge, on his notice being brought to the fact that that Act was not in force at the time when the offence was alleged to have been committed, allowed the indictment to be amended by the substitution of Larceny Act, 1861 (c. 96), s. 80, for the later statute. The two statutes define the offence in almost precisely the same words :—Held : (1) the indictment was defective within Indictments Act, 1915 (c. 90), s. 5 (1), by reason of the wrong statute having been inserted, but in view of the fact that the offence under the earlier Act was defined in almost the same words as those used in the later Act, applt. could not have been prejudiced by the amendment, nor could injustice have been done to any defence that he might have had. The amendment was, therefore, rightly allowed ; (2) the accused was not protected from prosecution by Larceny Act, 1861 (c. 96), s. 85, either in regard to acts disclosed by his affidavit or in regard to acts disclosed by his preliminary examination in bkpcy., as such disclosures were not " in consequence of any compulsory process of any court of law " ; (3) the admissions in the preliminary examination in bkpcy. were not admissions made " in any compulsory examination or deposition before any ct. on the hearing of any matter in bkcpy.," & could, therefore, be given in evidence at the trial without infringing Larceny Act, 1916 (c. 50), s. 43 (3).—R. v. TUTTLE (1929), 140 L. T. 701 ; 45 T. L. R. 357 ; 21 Cr. App. Rep. 85 ; 28 Cox, C. C. 610, C. C. A.

2219a. ——.]—Applt. was accused of having obtained sums of money by way of deposit from persons, who desired to be employed as managers of public-houses, by representing to them that he would appoint them to those positions. The indictment contained eighteen counts, relating to nine distinct offences, which were charged alternatively as obtaining sums of money by false pretences, & as larceny by a trick of the same sums. In every one of the counts relating to false pretences, the indictment as originally framed ran : " by falsely pretending that he would appoint . . . as manager." At the close of the case for the prosecution the judge thought it right to amend the counts relating to false pretences so as to read " by falsely pretending that he was in a position to appoint," etc. The jury convicted applt. on all counts :—Held : (1) the conviction for false pretences must be quashed, as the amendment of an indictment allowed by Indictments Act, 1915 (c. 90), s. 5 (1), is an amendment of a defect in form, & not the alteration & revision of the substance of a charge, such as had taken place in this case, which must necessarily prejudice accused ; (2) the conviction for larceny must be quashed, because there was no evidence of larceny, as the persons seeking employment had in each case intended to part with their money ; (3) Larceny Act, 1916 (c. 50), s. 44 (3), could not apply where the indictment had charged false pretences & was up to the last moment wrong in substance.—R. v. HUGHES (1927), 136 L. a ii. —— Indecent assault & carnal knowledge—Second count added in new trial.]—A new trial having been ordered after conviction on a charge, preferred by the agent of the A.-G., of indecent assault on a young girl :—Held : the agent of the A.-G. was entitled on the second trial to arraign the accused on a new charge containing, in addition to counts alleging indecent assault, counts alleging carnal knowledge of the same girl at the same time.

In answer to the contention that by proceeding on the count for carnal knowledge the agent of the A.-G. deprived the accused of the right to elect a speedy trial thereon :—Held : the accused had already made a sufficient election to cover that charge ; it was admitted that the charge of carnal knowledge was one which might be founded upon the evidence disclosed in the depositions taken on the preliminary inquiry on which the accused had been committed for trial & that he had been brought before a District Ct. judge to make his election upon the charge in respect to which he had been committed & that he then demanded a jury trial ; therefore, it must be assumed that his demand for a jury trial related to the charge of carnal knowledge as well as to the other offences charged.—R. v. DREW (No. 2), [1933] 2 W. After interviewing the prisoner, counsel told the judge that the question had occurred to him whether the prisoner was fit to plead to the indictment. The senior medical officer of the prison where the prisoner had been in custody was called, & said that he saw no reason to depart from the view he had put forward in a report, which was before the Judge, & that the prisoner was, in his opinion, fit to plead. The indictment was again put to the prisoner, & he again pleaded guilty, & was sentenced to death :—Held : the procedure followed was perfectly proper & there was, in the circumstances, no necessity to empanel a jury to try the issue whether the prisoner was 3156f. —— ——.]—(1) A prisoner was charged with two distinct sexual offences, one against a young boy, & the other against a girl aged five. The charges were included in one indictment & were tried together. In his summing-up the judge referred first to the evidence relating to one offence, & subsequently to the evidence relating to the other, but he did not warn the jury that they must be careful to distinguish the evidence relating to one offence from the evidence relating to the other, & that they must not supplement the evidence in regard to one of the offences by looking at the evidence as a whole, nor were the jury directed to find separate verdicts on each charge:—Held: the conviction must be quashed.

(2) With regard to the offence against the girl, corroboration was required by Children Act, 1908 (c. 67), s. 30, & there was evidence which might be regarded as corroboration of her story. The judge, in his summing-up, referred to this evidence, but made no reference either to the statute or to the necessity for corroboration in this case:—Held: though the mere omission to refer to the statute would not in itself be a ground for quashing the conviction, yet since neither the statute nor the necessity for corroboration had been brought to the attention of the jury, the conviction must be quashed on that ground also.

(3) Where corroboration is not required by statute but only as a rule of practice, the jury should be directed in regard to corroboration in the terms laid down in R. v. Cratchley, 9 Cr. App. Rep. 235.

(4) Qu.: whether the evidence of a young child can be admitted unsworn under Children Act, 1908 (c. 67), s. 30, unless the judge has affirmatively satisfied himself, in the presence of the accused & jury, that the child possesses a degree of intelligence sufficient to justify the reception of its evidence & understands the duty of speaking the truth.—R. v. SOUTHERN (1929), 142 L. 3172a i. Where unsworn statement & evidence on oath of witness in conflict.]—When a witness whom the party calling him is allowed to treat as hostile admits making or is proved to have made a previous statement inconsistent with his present testimony said party may be permitted to cross-examine him upon that statement; but the use which may be made before the jury of the statement is a limited one; it can be so used only to impeach the witness' credit & thus remove any prejudicial effect which his present testimony might otherwise have on the case of said party, but not as evidence of the allegations of fact contained in the statement. Therefore the duty devolves upon the trial judge, in summing up, to make the limitation of such use clear to the jury; & his failure to make it clear constitutes a misdirection which may be held to have occasioned a substantial wrong or miscarriage.—R. v. FRANCIS & BARBER, [1929] 3 D. 3555a. ——.]—On Jan. 20, 1937, two summonses came before justices sitting in petty sessions charging appct. with certain motor car offences. When the summonses were called on appct. was not present. The service of the summonses was proved, evidence was given by the police & the justices fined the appct. Before the decision of the justices had been entered in the register of convictions & orders of the ct. kept under Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), s. 22 (1), the justices, while they were still sitting, were informed of certain previous convictions of appct. in respect of motoring offences & that there had been delay on his part in paying the fines imposed for those offences. In view of that information the justices formed the opinion that the matters raised by the summonses ought to be dealt with in the presence of appct. & they issued a warrant for his arrest. Appct., accordingly, appeared before a differently constituted bench of justices on Jan. 23, when he pleaded guilty to the two summonses & was ordered to pay fines larger than those imposed on Jan. 20 :—Held : the decision of the justices on Jan. 20 constituted a complete & effective conviction of appct., although it had not been entered in the register, &, therefore, on Jan. 23 appct. was entitled to plead autrefois convict of the offences with which he was then charged.—R. v. MANCHESTER JJ., Ex p. LEVER, [1937] 2 K. That ct., after hearing the evidence on both sides, announced that it found deft. guilty. Certain previous convictions of deft. were then proved, whereupon the ct., without passing sentence upon him, committed him for trial at quarter sessions. At the trial deft. raised a plea of autrefois convict, but the ct. of quarter sessions overruled it & convicted him :—Held : by the Ct. of Criminal Appeal, there had been a conviction of deft. at petty sessions ; in order to support the plea of autrefois convict it was not necessary that the conviction should have been followed by sentence, & the quarter sessions should have accepted that plea ; & the conviction of deft. by the latter ct. should be quashed.—R. v. SHERIDAN, [1937] 1 K. The learned magistrate committed him to quarter sessions for trial & wrote to the clerk of the peace for the County of London as follows : "I am committing for trial to-day J. G. I feel it is a case quarter sessions should deal with." At the trial, before quarter sessions, applt. was unrepresented & he did not put forward any defence or cross-examine the witnesses for the prosecution. He stated, however, that he had not had a fair trial as sentence. There is authority for saying that in cases of misdemeanour there may be special circumstances which permit a trial in the absence of the accused, but on trials of felony the rule is inviolable, unless possibly the violent conduct of the accused himself intended to make trial impossible renders it lawful to continue in his absence. The result is that, except possibly where there has been such conduct by the accused, sentence passed for felony in the absence of the accused is totally invalid.—R. v. LAWRENCE, [1933] 3 W. W. 3608a. Demanding with menaces—Threatening to print or publish with intent to extort.]—The test whether a plea of autrefois convict has been established is not whether the facts relied on by the Crown are the same in the two trials, but whether the accused has been convicted of an offence which is the same, or practically the same, as that with which he is charged on the second trial. The offences of threatening to publish with intent to extort, contrary to Larceny Act, 1916 (c. 50), s. 31 (2), & of uttering a letter demanding money with menaces, contrary to sect. 29 (1) (i), of the same Act, are quite distinct & separate, & the fact that the accused has already been convicted of the former will not sustain a plea of autrefois convict if he is subsequently charged with the latter, even though the two charges be supported by the same evidence.—R. v. KENDRICK & SMITH (1931), 144 L. On the trial under said Act it was established that the girl had had sexual intercourse prior to the occasion with respect to which she had given evidence in support of the charge then being tried. This prior act of intercourse was the basis of the charge under the Code. The girl's fourteenth birthday was Apr. 25, 1934; so that, under sect. 2 (2) of the Code, she was deemed to have been under fourteen until the end of that day. 3835 i. Confined to general reputation —What amounts to.]—Evidence of general repute does not mean the placing of a heterogeneous mass of more or less general statements by any witness who can be produced to say something on hearsay or otherwise & label it "general repute." A man's general repute is just as much a fact as any other fact which can be proved by a witness, & the witness should be asked questions to show that he is in a position to know what the general reputation of the accused is, & as to when & in what circumstances he has heard the character of accused discussed.—EMPEROR v. RAM LAL (1929), I. 3848 ix. ——.]—Two prisoners, brother & sister, charged jointly with the murder of another brother, were convicted & sentenced to death. During the course of the trial the following questions were put by the judge to one of the witnesses:—The judge: "What kind of a woman was H. (the female prisoner) in disposition—was she cross?" Witness: "She was not cross to us." The judge: "Had you any opportunity of observing her demeanour about her own place? Was she cross or good-tempered?" Witness: "When she would meet us she would not want to talk. That is how she would treat us." The judge: "Was she different from M. A. (another sister)?" Witness: "Yes, she was." The judge: "M. A. was a good-tempered, pleasant woman?" Witness: "Yes, my Lord." On appeal to the Ct. of Criminal Appeal objection was taken, on behalf of the prisoners, to the admissibility of this as evidence; it was submitted that it was evidence of the bad character or disposition of the female prisoner, which could only be admitted if evidence had first been offered by her as to her own good character; & could only be proved by evidence of general reputation & not by the experience of the particular witness:—Held: the evidence & the answers of the witness did not refer to moral character, nor to general reputation, nor to a moral disposition or tendency to commit the crime of murder. & the witness stated nothing but the demeanour & manners of the prisoner & of her sister as manifested to the witness, & accordingly, as the evidence was, in the circumstances, relevant, the objection to its admissibility was unsustainable.—A.-G. v. O'LEARY, [1926] I. The prisoner had been previously convicted on several occasions, but the judge, being unaware of this & with a view to ascertaining what explanation of the possession of these notes the prisoner had to offer, put to him a number of questions with regard to his occupation & history for several years past. At the conclusion of this cross-examination, defending counsel felt that he had no alternative but to inform the jury that the prisoner had been in prison during part of that time. Other evidence of happenings between the time up to which the children were able to testify & the wife's death tended to show that prisoner had become tired of her:—Held: the children's evidence was properly admitted both as evidence of the malicious mind with which prisoner killed his wife & of the fact that he killed her, & also as rebutting the possible defences that the wife had taken the poison herself, either suicidally or accidentally.—R. v. Munn, [1930] N. On a criminal trial if circumstances other than those connected with the crime charged are relevant to other matters which the Crown has to prove as properly part of its case, evidence of them may be admissible in certain cases even though they incriminate the accused with respect to other offences. At the same time, great care must be taken in determining the immediate purpose in view in tendering such evidence. On the trial of a man on a charge of murdering a newly born infant, the mother of the child who described the alleged murder also testified that the accused had subsequently murdered in a similar way three other newly born children of hers. 4052 xiv. —— ——.]—A person accused of obtaining goods on false pretences from B. & S. was convicted on the two counts. The pretence consisted, in the B. case, of representations that accused was a bank officer, at a certain place, was low in clothes & was about to take a holiday, & giving an assumed name; in the S. case, accused wrote a letter with similar false statements of his name & employment & stating that he desired to obtain personal requirements, as he was about to be married. Subsequently accused called & obtained goods at S.'s warehouse. The statements as to the holiday & the marriage were not proved to be untrue. Accused wrote a similar letter to M., but it was not shown that he obtained goods there. Accused also obtained credit from F. The only false representation to F. was the giving of the false name:—Held: evidence of the representations to M. & F. was rightly admitted on the question of intent.—R. v. REYNOLDS, [1927] S. A. The indictment further charged accused with pretending, in pursuance of the scheme, in an hotel in Brussels, in Oct., that a forged document was a genuine draft of the same finance co.:—Held: while admittedly the incident in Belgium could not be made the subject of a substantive charge, that incident & the crime charged were sufficiently closely connected to admit of evidence relating to that incident being used by the prosecution for the purpose of supporting the other charges.—H.M. 4729a. Question as to previous acquittal—Admissibility.]—A person charged with an offence, who has put his character in issue, within Criminal Evidence Act, 1898 (c. 36), s. 1 (f) (ii.), as a rule cannot be asked in cross-examination whether he has been charged with an offence other than that wherewith he is then charged when that charge has resulted in an acquittal; for such a question does not satisfy the crucial test of relevance. In general, no question as to whether a prisoner has been convicted or charged or acquitted should be asked or, if asked, allowed by the judge, who has a discretion under proviso (f), unless it helps to elucidate the particular issue or goes to credibility. Such a question, even if it goes to credibility, ought not to be admitted if the jury may be misled by it into thinking that it goes not to credibility but to the probability of his having committed the offence of which he is then charged. The mere fact of a charge cannot in general be evidence of bad character & is no proof that the person charged had committed the offence.—MAXWELL v. DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC PROSECUTIONS, [1935] A. 4816 i. Admissibility under Children Act, 1908 (c. 67), s. 30—Conditions of reception.]—Held : the purpose of sect. 30 of Children Act, 1908, was to enable a child " of tender years," age not defined by the statute, who does not, in the opinion of the ct., understand the nature of an oath, to give evidence not upon oath if, in the opinion of the ct., the child has sufficient intelligence to justify the reception of the evidence & understands the duty of speaking the truth. The sect. did not alter the previous law as to the reception of the evidence of children on oath, which was & is a question, not of age, but of the intelligence & actual mental capacity of the child witness, his sense & reason of the danger & impiety of falsehood. Strictly speaking, the objection to the reception of the child's evidence on oath should be taken, & the witness interrogated by the ct., on the voir dire, but the practice became established that the objection might be taken on facts elicited, after the person was sworn as witness, during the direct examination or even during the cross-examination, &, if it prevailed, the judge would strike out the evidence & withdraw it from the jury.—A.-G. v. O'SULLIVAN, [1930] I. The case against her rested entirely on the evidence of her granddaughter, & this evidence, as regards the main facts, was practically wholly uncorroborated. This evidence went to show that the granddaughter implicated in the crime. The woman was convicted & sentenced to death :—Held : the rule requiring corroboration of the evidence of an accomplice applied to the facts of the case, & the jury should have been warned as to the danger of acting upon the granddaughter's evidence alone without corroboration. (2) The notice of intention to charge the prisoner with being a habitual criminal wrongly stated the particulars of one of his previous convictions in that the sentence was for two years' imprisonment plus a period of 522 days remanet, & in the notice there was no information as to the remanet :—Held : the notice sufficiently informed the prisoner of what was alleged against him & was therefore a valid notice.—R. v. MURRAY, [1932] 1 K. He was also found to be a habitual criminal on the ground that he had been convicted on three previous occasions & that he was leading persistently a dishonest or criminal life, & he was sentenced to five years' preventive detention. In Sept. 1923 applt. was sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment as a suspected person, & he was released on July 23, 1924. From Sept. to Dec. 1924 he was in honest employment. He committed the shopbreaking for which he had now been sentenced on Jan. 2, 1925 :—Held : it was questionable whether, on these facts, the jury could properly have found applt. to be a habitual criminal, but if they had done so it must be on a direction to them that the burden of proof always rested on the prosecution to show that during the relevant period applt. had been leading, persistently, a dishonest or criminal life ; as there were passages in the summing up which might have conveyed to the jury that, when the prosecution had gone a certain length, the burden rested on applt. to show that he had turned over a new leaf, the conviction must be quashed.—R. v. DRISCOLL (1925), 89 J. p i. —— —— Sentence already served.]—A motion on behalf of the Crown under sect. 1013 (2) of Criminal Code for leave to appeal from a sentence is not "a further or other criminal proceeding for the same cause" within sect. 1079 of the Code. Therefore the fact that the term of imprisonment has been suffered before said motion has been made or, if granted, before the appeal comes on for hearing, does not take away the jurisdiction to grant the leave or entertain the appeal.—R. v. KIRKHAM, [1935] 3 W. t iii. —— Whether grounds of dissent must be specified in judgment.]—Applt. was convicted, & upon appeal the conviction was affirmed by a majority of the ct., the dissent of one judge being merely mentioned in the formal judgment. Under a recent amendment sub-sect. (6) was added to sect. 1013 Criminal Code providing that, in case of a dissenting opinion, the formal judgment should specify the grounds in law on which such dissent was based. The Crown contended that, owing to the failure of the appellate ct. so to specify the grounds of dissent, an appeal to this ct. was not open to applt. :—Held : this ct. had jurisdiction to entertain this appeal. The only sect. of the Criminal Code dealing with the jurisdiction de plano of the Supreme Ct. of Canada is sect. 1023, under which the fact there has been a dissent on a question of law is the sole condition for the foundation of its jurisdiction : the circumstance that the grounds of dissent are not specified in the formal judgment of the appellate ct. does not avoid the fact of there having been a dissent, which is the only requirement contained in Criminal Code, s. 1023.—REINBLATT v. R., [1933] S. a vi. ——.]—The general appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Ct. of Canada is confined to civil matters ; to found an appeal to the ct. in any criminal matter, resort must be had to some special statutory provision enacted by the Dominion Parliament. Save for the special case provided for by sect. 1025 of the Criminal Code, the only right of appeal to the ct. in any criminal cause is that conferred by sect. 1023. For an appeal to come within sect. 1023, the conviction must have been affirmed by the ct. below & there must have been dissent by some member thereof on a question of law.—STEINBERG v. R., [1931] S. C. R. 421 ; 4 D. L. R. 8 ; 56 Can. C. C. 9.—CAN.

a vii. ——.]—An appeal from the judgment of Appellate Div. Ont. affirming applt.'s conviction for stealing was dismissed, on the ground that there was no jurisdiction to hear the appeal, the questions raised, & on which there was dissent in the Appellate Div., being all questions of fact, in regard to which there was no right of appeal to this ct. Assuming that the question whether there was any evidence to support a conviction should be deemed a question of law, yet the question whether the proper inference has been drawn by the trial judge from facts established in evidence, is not a question of law but one of fact.—GAUTHIER v. R., [1931] S. On the hearing of their grounds of appeal before the Ct. of Appeal, applts. moved also for leave to admit new evidence. This motion was dismissed by a majority of the Ct. of Appeal, two judges expressing dissenting opinions. Later on, the Ct. of Appeal rendered judgment affirming unanimously the conviction of applts. ; & such judgment contained also a paragraph mentioning the fact that dissenting opinions had been expressed by two members of the ct. on the motion to adduce new evidence :—Held : the dissent in the Ct. of Appeal on the motion for leave to introduce new evidence is not a dissent of that ct. against the affirmance of applts.' conviction on a question of law within sect. 1023 of the Criminal Code.—YIP SING v. R., [1935] S. a ix. —— Conflict of judgments.]—Applt. was an insolvent trader & had been convicted under sect. 417*c* Cr. C. for not having kept proper books of account. Application for leave to appeal under sect. 1025 Cr. C. was made on the ground that, inasmuch as sect. 417*c* Cr. C. was alleged to have been virtually abrogated by sect. 193 of Bkpcy. Act subsequently enacted, the decision of the appellate ct. in affirming the conviction failed to apply the principle of law that a subsequent statutory enactment has the effect of abrogating an anterior enactment which is inconsistent with it ; &, at the hearing, counsel for appct. cited three judgments which were alleged to be in conflict with the above decision :—Held : the application for leave to appeal should be dismissed as the judgments cited were not rendered "in a like case" & by an "other ct. of appeal" within the provisions of sect. 1025 Cr. C. ; they were not in conflict with the decision intended to be appealed from : the appellate ct. had clearly admitted the principle of law above cited ; but it had held that sect. 193 of the Bkpcy. Act was not inconsistent with the provisions of sect. 417*c* Cr. C.—LIEBLING v. R., [1932] S. C. R. 101 ; [1932] 1 D. L. R. 232 ; 57 C. C. C. 113.—CAN.

ff i. —— By Crown—Principles applicable.]—On an appeal by the Crown from an acquittal those rules are not appropriate in aid of the Crown which when an accused is appealing from a conviction are applicable in aid of his appeal, since they are based on the traditional policy of the English law for the safeguarding of life & liberty that everything must be assumed in favour of innocence & that guilt must be established beyond reasonable doubt.—R. v. CURLETT, [1936] 2 W. W. R. 528; 3 D. L. R. 199; 66 Can. C. C. 256.—CAN.

ff ii. —— —— ——.]—On an appeal by the Crown from an acquittal the ct. should not set aside the verdict or grant a new trial, even if misdirection of the jury on a material matter be shown, if the accused can satisfy it that upon the evidence adduced such room exists for the entertainment of a reasonable doubt as to his guilt that according to every reasonable probability an impartial jury properly instructed would have returned the same verdict; but in such event the ct. should hold that no "substantial wrong or miscarriage of justice," within the meaning of sect. 1014 (2) of Criminal Code, has occurred. In interpreting "substantial wrong or miscarriage of justice" in sect. 1014 (2) on appeals by accused persons & formulating for that purpose the rule that, misdirection in a material matter having been shown, the onus is on the Crown to satisfy the ct. that the jury, charged as it should have been, could not as reasonable men have done otherwise than find the accused guilty, the cts. have always had in mind the safeguards which under our criminal law accused persons have thrown about them to protect them from the possibility of injustice, such as the presumption in favour of life, liberty & innocence, & the maxim that no one is to be twice placed in jeopardy for the same offence. These safeguards are, however, alien to the status of the Crown, or, in other words, an accused should not lose their benefit on an appeal by the Crown merely because the Crown has now been given the right to appeal & the amendment giving that right says nothing about changing said rule.—R. v. BOURGEOIS, [1937] 2 W. 5k. Meaning of conviction.]—A conviction, at common law, in strictness, consists of verdict, judgment, & sentence. The word, however, is sometimes used as meaning the verdict of a jury &, at other times, the sentence of the ct. Criminal Procedure Code uses the word in both senses. The meaning of the word "conviction" in sect. 439 (6), in relation to a case like the present, limits the accused to impugning the judgment of the ct. which sentenced him.—SUPERINTENDENT & REMEMBRANCER OF LEGAL AFFAIRS, BENGAL v. JNANENDRA NATH GHOSH (1929), I. 1516a. Two claims under marriage settlement—One claim statute-barred but satisfied by legacy in will—Other claim ignored by will.]—A testator by a settlement made on his first marriage in 1884 covenanted (a) that he would take out a policy of insurance of £2,000 payable on his death to the trustees of the settlement, & (b) that he would by his will bequeath to the same trustees all his interest in every copyright to which he was entitled. Testator never took out a policy of insurance, but by his will he bequeathed to the trustees of the settlement £2,000 in full satisfaction of all obligations arising out of the covenant to effect such a policy, & he left the residue of his property, which included the copyrights, by way of a general bequest to his widow, who was a second wife & not a party to the marriage settlement. Testator died in 1935, & a summons was taken out to determine whether the trustees of the settlement could claim both the £2,000 under the will & an assignment to them of the copyrights or damages in lieu thereof, or whether they were put to their election between the two claims :—Held : (1) the covenant applied to all copyrights to which testator was entitled at the date of his death; (2) if the trustees claimed the benefit under the will, they ought on the general principles of election to give effect to the whole will, including testator's plain intention that the copyrights should not go to them, although any remedy upon the covenants in the marriage settlement was statute-barred.—Re FLETCHER'S SETTLEMENT TRUSTS, MEDLEY v. FLETCHER, [1936] 2 All E. Even assuming the life interest of the intestate in the appointed share of the settlement funds surrendered by him to the appointee to be money or property paid by way of advancement within clause (iii) aforesaid, in view of the fact that the value of that life interest to be brought into account under that clause has to be reckoned as at the date of the death of the intestate & therefore could be of no value, the surrender could have no effect upon the proposition first above stated.—Re REEVE, REEVE v. REEVE, [1935] Ch. 110 ; 104 L. accepted by the trust co., declared certain trusts upon which the lands were to be held. P.'s wife was to have a life interest in three of the parcels conveyed, & certain other benefits, & at her death the property was to be distributed among P.'s children ; this life interest was to be in lieu of dower in all P.'s lands. On Feb. 21, 1921, P., by letter, requested the trust co. to sign a declaration of trust to the effect that it held one of the parcels of land conveyed to it, in which the wife was given a life interest, in trust, for payment to an investment society of $7,500 " which pays off the loan on stock for that amount held by my wife," & this the trust co. did. By P.'s will, made on the date of the execution of the conveyance & declaration, he appointed the trust co. his exor. & trustee. The wife took nothing under the will. P. died in July, 1921. In Jan. 1923, the trust co. made a mtge. in favour of an assurance co. upon three of the properties in which the widow claimed a life estate, to secure repayment of a large sum of money which was advanced to the trust co. & which the trust co. applied in paying off loans made to P. 1743 l. Satisfaction defined.]—Satisfaction is the donation of a thing, with the intention, either expressed or implied, that it is to be taken, either wholly or in part, in extinguishment of some prior claim of the donee. The doctrine has no application to cases where the prior portion has actually been transferred or paid.

One whose life was insured assigned to his son a portion of the insurance moneys $1,000, in consideration of an undertaking by the son to advance from time to time moneys necessary to pay parts of the premiums. Subsequently the insured made his will by which he gave to his son $1,000 " out of the money payable at my death out of my life insurance policy " :—Held : the $1,000 given by the will could not be regarded as a satisfaction of the $1,000 assigned to the son.—Re MARKS (1921), 64 D. 2713a. Threatened disclosure of confidential information.]—The manager of deft. cos. endeavoured by dishonest means to procure for his cos. information to which they had no right whatever. He had attempted to secure this information from employees of pltf. co., but the attempts were unsuccessful. These employees were under stringent service agreements, prohibiting them from disclosing confidential matters. Pltfs. & defts. were interested in television, & pltfs. were a research co., going through the preparatory stages in order to perfect & render commercial a method of television which had not yet reached a commercial stage. The disclosure of the information to defts. would have caused pltfs. irreparable damage. Pltfs. prepared a draft letter complaining of these matters, which was shown to defts., & the latter promised that the attempts should cease ; but whatever was done proved quite ineffective to stop such attempts. Pltfs. then issued the writ in this action asking for an injunction to restrain defts. & their servants & agents from making such attempts:—Held: (1) it being proved that defts. through their manager were wrongfully endeavouring to persuade employees of pltfs. to disclose information, & that such disclosure would cause irreparable damage to pltfs., the latter were entitled to the injunction asked for, although such attempts had been wholly unsuccessful; (2) pltfs. were not under any duty to take any further steps before issuing the writ in this action; (3) it was no answer to the claim for an injunction that the manager who made the attempts was now employed by defts. in a different capacity. The important fact was that he was still in their employment.—SCOPHONY, ... v. TRAUB, [1937] 4 All E. R. 279; 81 Sol. Jo. 981, C. A.

d i. ——.]—A testator directed his trustees to divide the balance of the annual income of his estate into ten equal shares, & (inter alia) to pay one such share to each of his four daughters during their respective lives, & further, on the death of any daughter leaving issue, to apply her share for her issue. Testator further directed that, after the death of his widow, the amount payable in respect of each of these shares was not to exceed £600 per annum. One of the four daughters, who survived testator, predeceased his widow leaving issue. At the time of the daughter's death her one-tenth share of income amounted to £2,800 per annum. The trustees having been assessed to estate duty upon one-tenth of the trust estate, they & the daughter's exors. petitioned for recall of the assessment. Petitioners maintained that, on the daughter's death, a passing of property, within Finance Act, 1894, s. 1, had taken place, & that, the daughter's interest in income being restrictable upon the widow's death to £600, the principal value of the property passing on her death fell to be estimated, under sect. 7 (5) of the Act, upon an actuarial basis :—Held : the case was one in which property passed on the death of the daughter within sect. 1, & the property which passed was the property which produced the one-tenth share of the income which she enjoyed immediately before her death, & which immediately thereafter became applicable for the benefit of her issue, no account falling to be taken of the circumstance that the beneficiaries' interest in the property was restrictable on the death of testator's widow.—DUNDERDALE'S TRUSTEES v. INLAND REVENUE, [1936] S. two private Acts of Parliament vested in trustees for the life of Sir H. F. de T., the late baronet, to uses for raising £250,000 for portions for the late baronet's younger children & subject thereto to the use of Sir H. E. de T., the present baronet, for life with remainder to his first & other sons in tail male; & it was provided that the annual income of the estate should during the life of the late baronet be held & applied by the trustees in making certain payments & among them a payment of an annual sum of £8,000 to the present baronet during the joint lives of the late baronet & the present baronet; furthermore, the present baronet was authorised to charge the estate with sums amounting to £50,000, not to be raised or paid during the life of the late baronet. The late baronet exercised to its full extent his power of appointing portions for his younger children by various deeds poll charging the estate with various sums to be raised & paid after his death. The present baronet borrowed from the trustees sums amounting to £50,000 &, in pursuance of the authority above mentioned, charged the estate with payment thereof after the death of the late baronet. By an order of the Chancery Div. dated July 28, 1928, & referred to above, the trustees were empowered to raise & pay in the lifetime of the late baronet the two sums of £250,000 & £50,000. At some time after Aug. 15, 1928, the £250,000 was accordingly raised & paid as portions to the younger children of the late baronet, & the £50,000 was treated as repaid to the trustees. On Jan. 10, 1929, the late baronet died. On an information by the A.-G. claiming estate duty at the appropriate rate under Finance Act, 1894 (c. 30), s. 1, in respect of the principal value of the estate as property passing on the death of the late baronet, including the sums of £250,000 & £50,000 as property deemed to have passed thereon under Finance Act, 1900 (c. 7), s. 11, as amended by Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (c. 8), s. 59 (1), the trustees contended that they were entitled to deduct from the estate alleged to pass: (1) a principal sum sufficient to produce a yearly sum of £8,000, being the yearly sum payable to the present baronet immediately before the death of the late baronet; (2) the two sums of £250,000 & £50,000 mentioned above:—Held: (1) the property passing on the death of the late baronet included the principal sum sufficient to produce the yearly £8,000 inasmuch as the yearly sum ceased to be payable on the death of the late baronet; (2) the sums of £250,000 & £50,000 fell within the words of the 1900 Act, s. 11, as amended by 1910 Act, s. 59 (1), being sums in which the trustees had an interest limited to cease on the death of the late baronet, which had been surrendered within three years before the death for the benefit of persons entitled to an interest in reversion, & which therefore were deemed to pass on the death of the late baronet.—DE TRAFFORD v. A.-G., [1935] A. 27b. Restricted estate under protective trust—Lands passing to tenant in tail.]—By a deed of settlement made in July, 1889, the Fifth Earl of C. & his eldest son settled the C. Estates to the use of the eldest son as tenant for life with remainder to the use of his sons successively in tail male & in default of such issue to the use of the second son of the said Fifth Earl for life with remainder to the use of his sons successively in tail male with remainders over. In 1893 the Fifth Earl bought the life estate of his said second son, & this interest was conveyed to trustees their heirs & assigns for the life of the said second son upon discretionary trusts in favour of the said second son, his wife & his children or remoter issue &, subject to this trust, upon trust to accumulate the surplus of the rents & profits, invest it, & apply the proceeds in discharging debts or incumbrances upon the estates, with a proviso limiting the duration of this trust. In 1908 the eldest son of the Fifth Earl died. In 1910 the only son of that son died. In 1915 the Fifth Earl died & was succeeded by his said second son as Sixth Earl & the life estate of the Sixth Earl became an estate in possession. In 1933 the Sixth Earl died & was succeeded by his only son as Seventh Earl & tenant in tail male in possession of the estates:—Held: estate duty became payable on the death of the Sixth Earl when the property passed to the Seventh Earl & his estate became an estate in possession instead of an estate in remainder; he then became entitled to receive the whole income of the property which was formerly applicable for the benefit of the objects of the discretionary trust, & it mattered not that he was himself one of the objects of that trust.—SCOTT & COUTTS & CO. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1937] A. 27c. Discretionary trust for payment to class—Death of member of class—Trust for payment to new class.]—A testator devised all his real property to trustees in fee simple upon trust in their absolute discretion to pay a yearly allowance of such amount as the trustees should think fit to his son H. for life or to pay or apply the same for the benefit of H. or his wife or children or other specified persons & after the death of H. in trust for the first & other sons of H. successively in tail male; & in default of such issue to pay to his son R. during his life a similar yearly allowance & after the death of R. in trust for the first & other sons of R. successively in tail male; & in default of such issue as therein directed. The will contained a proviso that if any equitable tenant in tail should be born in testator's lifetime the interest of such person should be excised from the will, & the trustees should hold the property in trust to pay him a yearly allowance of such amount from time to time as they should in their uncontrollable discretion think fit, & after his death in trust for his first & other sons in tail male. After certain other dispositions the will devised the property in ultimate remainder to testator's right heirs. Each beneficiary who should be entitled to an allowance was given power to appoint a jointure to his wife & to charge the property with portions for his children. During the life of H. the persons who were beneficially interested in the discretionary trusts were H. himself, his wife, his sons W. & M. & his daughter G. After the death of H. the persons beneficially interested in the trust were W., his wife & his brother M. :—Held : on the death of H. the title to the beneficial interest in the property passed under Finance Act, 1894 (c. 30), s. 1, from the first named group of persons to the secondly named group, notwithstanding that certain persons were members of both groups. —BURRELL & KINNAIRD v. A.-G., [1937] A. 40a. —— Liability to reduction in lifetime of annuitant.]—Testator by a trust disposition & settlement & codicils thereto, after providing for his debts & other expenses & making other dispositions, directed his trustees to divide the balance of the annual income of the trust into ten equal shares & to pay five of these to his wife & one to each of his four daughters & his sister-in-law during their respective lives. Should any of his daughters die leaving issue, the share of income which would have been payable to her was to be applied for the maintenance & education of her issue until the youngest of them should have attained the age of twenty years & thereafter should be paid in equal portions during their lives to such of them only as were daughters. After certain other declarations he further provided that after the death of his wife no beneficiary should receive more than £600 per annum from the income of the trust & that the balance should be otherwise disposed of as directed. Testator was survived by his wife, his four daughters & his sister-in-law, & for a time the income of the trust fund belonged, & was paid, as to one moiety to the widow, as to one-tenth to the sister-in-law, & as to one-tenth to each of the four daughters. One-tenth of the income of the fund amounted annually to £2,800. Mrs. N., one of the four daughters, died leaving three children her surviving. At the date of her death her mother was still living :—Held : as Mrs. N. was immediately before her death entitled to the income of one-tenth of the residuary estate property which produced that income passed on her death under sect. 1 of 1894 Act.—CHRISTIE v. LORD ADVOCATE, [1936] A. sc. Gift made within three years before death—Money spent on improving house —Whether gift to wife.]—A husband & wife, with their children, lived together in a house which belonged to the wife ; each enjoyed a separate income. The husband paid to a builder with whom he had made contracts about £3,000 for improvements & repairs to the house. A few months later he died at the age of fifty-three. It was found that the transaction was not entered into with intent to diminish the value of the husband's estate, but that the object was simply to improve the family home in accordance with their means & station in life : & that there was no reason to believe that the husband would not enjoy the normal span of life, or that he would necessarily predecease his wife :—Held : the payments did not constitute a gift to the wife of the deceased within Death Duties Act, 1921, of New Zealand, ss. 38, 39, so as to be deemed to be part of the husband's estate for the purposes of that Act.—FINCH v. STAMP DUTIES COMR., [1929] A. sf. —— Settlement—Trust property not transferred to trustees.]—In 1918 a resident in New Zealand held mtges. & debentures securing £57,200, the deeds & certificates being in the custody of his agents, who managed his private affairs under a general power of attorney, & kept accounts relating thereto. He wrote to them giving particulars of a settlement of £30,000 which he proposed to make on his children, & instructing them to take that sum from his capital for the trusts. Thereupon they debited his capital account with £30,000, & credited it to a special trust account. By the deed of settlement, which was executed by all the necessary parties, the trustees acknowledged the receipt of the £30,000, & the trusts were declared. No money, however, was paid, nor any securities transferred, to the trustees. Further sums were settled in 1919, 1920, & 1924, similar entries being made in the agents' books. Interest at a flat rate was paid to the beneficiaries on the sums settled on them respectively, the payments being made out of the income received by the settlor from the securities in his agents' custody. Those securities varied from time to time, but the amount always exceeded that settled. Upon the settlor's death in 1928, his estate was assessed to duty under Death Duties Act, 1921 (N.Z.), as including the settled sums, less capital which more than three years before the settlor's death had been paid out to two of the beneficiaries under power in the settlements, & subject to an allowance for gift duty paid when the sums were settled :—Held : having regard to sect. 5 (1) of the Act the assessment had been rightly made, as the settlements could not be treated as gifts perfected either by transfer of property or declaration of trust ;

63a. —— —— —— Disentailing deed & resettlement.]—By a disentailing deed & a deed of resettlement, A. & his mother appointed property to trustees upon trust for the mother for life, & then upon certain trusts for management. There followed a discretionary trust in favour of A., his wife or children, with remainder in trust for A.'s sons, & with ultimate remainder to E. The mother died in 1925, & estate duty was paid on the value of the settled property. The trustees, under their discretion, then paid £50 a month to A. & the balance of income to E. In 1926 A. died, unmarried, & estate duty was claimed :—Held : A., in executing the disentailing deed & resettlement, had acted as a person "competent to dispose of property" within 1894 Act, s. 22 (2) (a), & the discretionary trust in his favour was a reservation by him of an "interest" in the property within Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1881 (c. 12), s. 38 (2) (c). Therefore, by that sub-sect. read with 1894 Act, s. 2 (1) (c), the property was deemed to have passed on A.'s death & estate duty was payable.—A.-G. v. FARRELL, [1931] 1 K. B. 81 ; 99 L. J. K. 67a. —— Contingent succession—Accumulations.] By a deed, dated Mar. 1924, appointing trustees of a large sum of money, the settlor, who died in Mar. 1928, provided that during his life the income of the whole was to be paid or applied by the trustees for the benefit of all or any of his children in such manner as he should direct, & so far as any direction should not extend the income was to be held as an accretion to the capital of the settled funds. After his death the capital & income of the funds not already distributed were to be held in trust for his children living at his death in such manner as he should by deed or will appoint, & in default of appointment in trust as to two-fifths for his son, & the remaining three-fifths for equal division among his three daughters as tenants in common. The settlor made no direction by deed or will, & on his death the Crown claimed that the property the subject of the trust "passed" within Finance Act, 1894 (c. 30), s. 1, or that the children's interests which arose on his death were interests provided by the settlor within sect. 2 (1) (d), & that in either case estate duty was payable on the whole of the funds & accretions :—Held : the funds & accretions did not pass on the settlor's death & estate duty was not payable in respect thereof under sect. 1, but that on the true construction of sect. 2 (1), the beneficial interest of each child of the settlor in the settled funds & accumulations sg. —— Land transferred to children subject to partnership agreement.]—In 1909 M., the owner of 35,000 acres of land in New South Wales on which he carried on the business of a grazier, verbally agreed with his six children that thereafter the business should be carried on by him & them as partners under a partnership at will, the business to be managed solely by M., & each partner to receive a specified share of the profits. In 1913, by six registered transfers in the form prescribed by the Real Property Act, 1900, M. transferred by way of gift all his right title & interest in portions of his land to each of his four sons & to trustees for each of his two daughters & their childen. The evidence showed that the transfers were taken subject to the partnership agreement, & on the understanding that any partner could withdraw & work his land separately. In 1919 M. & his children entered into a formal partnership agreement, which provided that during the lifetime of M. no partner should withdraw from the partnership. On the death of M. in 1929 the land transferred in 1913 was included in assessing his estate to death duties under Stamp Duties Act, 1920–1931 (N. S. W.), on the ground that they were gifts dutiable under sect. 102 (2) (a), of that Act :—Held : (1) the property comprised in the transfers was the land separated from the rights therein belonging to the partnership, & was excluded by the terms of sect. 102 (2) (a) from being dutiable, because the donees had assumed & retained possession thereof, & any benefit remaining in the donor was referable to the partnership agreement of 1909, not to the gifts ; (2) the transfers did not mention the rights of the partnership, & therefore under sect. 42 of Real Property Act, 1900 (N. S. W.), might in law give a title free from those rights, was not material, because the substance of the transaction had to be ascertained, as liability to taxation ought not to be based upon refinements but on clear words.—MUNRO v. STAMP DUTIES COMR., [1934] A. p l. —— ——.]—By an indenture T., who was entitled in fee simple to certain lands subject to certain leases then current, conveyed the lands to A., his daughter, for life, or until the happening of certain events, with remainder to her children, in consideration of covenants by her to make annual payments to him & his wife during their lives, & to indemnify him in respect of covenants contained in the unexpired leases. T. & his wife predeceased the daughter, & she died leaving children. Her life estate had not determined in her lifetime :—Held : the lands comprised in the indenture did not form part of the dutiable estate of A. by virtue of sect. 102 (2) (k) of "Stamp Duties Act, 1920–24." The dominant words of that provision are "under or by virtue of any agreement made by the deceased," & they mean that the passing of the property shall proceed from the volition of deceased.—ANGUS v. COMR. se. Reservation of life interest to settlor —On surviving wife.]—By a marriage settlement made in 1876, £30,000 was settled upon trust to pay the income to the settlor's wife for life, after her death to the settlor for life, & after the death of the survivor upon trust for the children or remoter issue as they should by deed jointly appoint, or in the absence of a joint appointment as the survivor should by will or deed appoint, & in default of appointment for the children as therein provided. The settlor died in 1925, without having exercised the joint power of appointment, leaving his wife & children him surviving. For the purpose of death duty under the Stamp Duties Act, 1920–1924, of N. S. W. :—Held : as the settlement contained a trust to take effect "after the death" of the deceased settlor & in reference thereto, his property was to be "deemed to include" the property subject to the trust, without deducting the value of his widow's life interest therein.—RABETT v. STAMP DUTIES COMR., [1929] A. sf. —— Jointly with wife.]—In 1896 a husband settled property in N. S. W., directing that the income therefrom should be paid to his wife during their joint lives, & upon the death of either of them to their daughters equally for their respective lives. The settlor died in 1914, & was survived by his wife :—Held : the settlement contained a trust "to take effect after his" (the settlor's) "death" within Stamp Duties Act, 1898, of New South Wales, s. 58, & accordingly upon the death of the settlor duty under that sect. became payable.—THOMSON v. STAMP DUTIES COMR., [1929] A. to the extent to which the principal value of such beneficial interest upon the death of the settlor exceeded the actual value, if any, of the expectant beneficial interest of each child before such death was an interest accruing or arising on his death, & was, therefore, to be deemed to be property passing on the death of the settlor, & that estate duty on the principal value of such excess was leviable & payable accordingly.—ADAMSON v. A.-G., [1933] A. 67b. ——————.]—By a deed of settlement the settlor caused to be issued to or transferred into the names of trustees certain shares in a co. in trust for all such one or more of her children or remoter issue, or the husbands or wives of the children or remoter issue, as she, the settlor, should by deed revocable or irrevocable or by will appoint, & until & in default of appointment upon trust to divide the trust fund into three equal shares & appropriate one share to each of her three named children, but so that the three shares should be retained by the trustees upon the trusts therein declared.

By a deed of appointment the settlor directed the trustees of the settlement to hold the trust fund in trust during her life to accumulate the income & after her death to stand possessed of the trust fund & accumulations in trust for her three named children in equal shares, but so that the share which after her death was to be held for each of the said three children should not vest absolutely, but should be retained by the trustees upon trust during the life of each child to pay to him or her the income of his or her share & after the death of such child to hold that child's share in trust for the children or remoter issue of that child as he or she should appoint, & in default of such appointment in trust for all or any of the children of that child who being sons or a son should attain the age of twenty-one years or being daughters or a daughter should attain that age or marry if more than one in equal shares. There followed a hotchpot clause, & an accruer clause in case the trusts declared concerning the share of any child should fail. Finally, the deed reserved to the settlor a power of revocation by deed or will. The settlor died without having revoked the appointment. She left her surviving the three children unmarried :—Held : the rule in Lassence v. Tierney (1849), 1 Mac. & G. 551, applied to the settlement; under it the three children took absolute & immediate interests in the trust fund (though liable to defeasance) & nothing passed to them under it on the death of the settlor within Finance Act, 1894 (c. 30), s. 1; also, the life interest of each child was deemed to be property passing on the death of the settlor within sect. 2 (1) (d) of the Act, & the duty thereunder was leviable on the excess, if any, of the value of the expectant life interest of each child after the death of the settlor over its previous value.—A.-G. v. LLOYDS BANK, LTD., [1935] A. The assets included shares in a co. situate in the Irish Free State. N., the life tenant, died on Apr. 23, 1928, within two months of the death of B., & before representation to the estate of B. had issued. A claim for estate duty arose on the death of N. in respect of the residuary estate of B., passing on the death of N. under the will. It was contended on behalf of the Crown that the residuary estate of B. as at the death of N., constituted a Northern Ireland chose in action, as B. died domiciled in Northern Ireland & the forum of administration of her estate was the Northern Ireland Cts. The exor. of the estate of B., however, contended that the estate of B. passed in specie on the death of N. :—Held : after the death of B., N. has a proprietary interest in her mother's estate & estate duty was payable in the Irish Free State & not in Northern Ireland, the residuary estate having passed on the death of N., & having consisted of shares in a co. situate in the Irish Free State.—A.-G. v. WALKER, [1934] N. who declared that the instrument was to take effect according to the law of Hong Kong where he was domiciled, devised & bequeathed his property, which was situate out of the United Kingdom, to trustees on trust to invest a sum to produce an annuity for his wife, to pay certain legacies & to stand possessed of the residue to pay the annual income thereof to his sons or son during their or his lives or life, & on the death of the last survivor of his sons in trust for his son's children. The tenant for life, who was the only son of testator living at his death, wished to borrow money &, at the request of the lenders, he appointed, in England, four new trustees of the will, three of whom were resident in England. Between 1913 & 1922, owing to the tenant for life's dealings with the trust funds, proceedings in the Ch. In 1922 the tenant for life died, leaving him surviving his widow & two infant sons, who were domiciled in Hong Kong but had been made wards of ct. by virtue of the proceedings in the Ch. Div. & the orders made therein. The trust property was situate abroad:—Held: the succession of the infants to testator's residuary estate was at his death a succession by virtue of Hong Kong law & to Hong Kong property, & it had never lost that character or fallen within 1853 Act, s. 2, & the property was not liable to estate duty under 1894 Act, s. 2 (2). —A.-G. v. BELILIOS, [1928] 1 K. The certificates were in all cases situate in London, & the securities themselves were transferable in London at the outbreak of war, & at the date of testator's death. Testator died in 1915, in Berlin, being domiciled in Germany. By his will three-fifths of his property were bequeathed to German & Austrian beneficiaries, & two-fifths to British & Polish beneficiaries. In 1915 the will was proved in Germany by the exors. named therein. In 1922, grant of administration in England was made to pltf. By virtue of Treaty of Peace Orders, the whole of the interests of the German & Austrian beneficiaries became charged with & subject to the claims of the Custodian of Enemy Property. In 1922 all the South African securities were transferred to the South African Custodian, an exor. dative was appointed in South Africa to administer testator's South African estate, & estate duty in South Africa was paid by him in respect thereof. Some of the American securities were transferred to the American Alien Property Custodian, administration of testator's American estate was granted in America, & the securities were transferred to the American Custodian to be distributed by the American administrator among the beneficiaries. All the remaining American securities, with the exception of a small balance, were released to pltf. by the English Custodian. In May, 1924, pltf. filed a corrective affidavit, including therein those of the American securities which had been released to him at that date, & he paid estate duty & interest in respect thereof:—Held: (1) all the shares were locally situate in England & the administrator was bound to include them as property of which testator was competent to dispose, & was accountable to the extent of the assets he had received for the estate duty in respect thereof; (2) the basis of valuation of such shares was the price similar shares would fetch in the open market at the date of testator's death.—Re ASCHROTT, CLIFTON v. STRAUSS, [1927] 1 Ch. 313; 96 L. s ii. —— Discharge by son of legit —A father granted a bond for £30,000 in implement of an undertaking by him in his second son's marriage contract, in contemplation of the son's marriage, & in consideration of a conveyance executed by the son's intended wife for behoof of the spouses. In the marriage contract the son accepted the obligations therein contracted by his father as in full satisfaction in any event of all legal claims for legitim or otherwise he might have upon his father's estate. At the date of the marriage contract & of the bond the only claim to legitim possible to the son was in the event of his elder brother predeceasing his father. That event happened, & at the father's death the amount of legitim to which the second son would have had a claim, had he not discharged it, was £25,000:—Held: the bond could not be regarded as a debt incurred by the father for full consideration in money or money's worth wholly for deceased's own use & benefit in the sense of 1894 Act, s. 7 (1), & did not form a proper deduction in determining the value of his estate for the purposes of estate duty.—LORD ADVOCATE v. WARRENDER'S TRUSTEES (1906), 8 F. the transaction was a bonâ fide sale between mother & son, & no succession duty was payable; (2) as to the claim for estate duty, there had been a "purchase for partial consideration" within 1894 Act, s. 3 (2), the consideration paid represented four-fifths of the value of the property at the date of such purchase, & estate duty was payable only upon one-fifth of the value as at the date of the death of the tenant for life; (3) "partial consideration," in sect. 3 (2), meant something less than the full & fair value as between buyer & seller.—Re BATEMAN (BARONESS). The word "power" in the phrase "power . . . to appoint or dispose of property as he thinks fit" in Finance Act, 1894 (c. 30), s. 22 (2) (a), is not used in the strict sense attaching to it when used with reference to a power of appointment, but in the sense of capacity.—Re PENROSE, PENROSE v. PENROSE, [1933] Ch. 793; 102 L. Settlement estate duty was paid on so much of testator's residuary estate as was required to provide for the annuities payable under the will. E. died in 1930 & his widow, A., became entitled to the annuity. Estate duty was payable, but an allowance of interest was claimed under Finance Act, 1914 (c. 10), s. 14 (b), as a set-off in respect of the settlement estate duty already paid on testator's death:—Held: the annuities having been paid in full, the persons entitled to the allowance were the persons entitled to the residuary estate.—Re GRINLINTON, PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. GRINLINTON, [1933] Ch. 344; 102 L. PART II. SECT. 4, SUB-SECT. 2.

c i. —— Annuity paid out of general income—No property settled.]—Sect. 4 of Estate Duty Ordinance, 1932, of Hong Kong, provides that estate duty shall be paid on the principal value of "all property passing on the death" of a deceased person, which, by sect. 5 (1), "shall be deemed to include . . . (b) property in which deceased or any other person had an interest ceasing on the death of deceased, to the extent to which a benefit accrues or arises by the cesser of such interest, . . ." By sect. 25 (1) of the Ordinance: "If estate duty has already been paid in respect of any settled property since the date of the settlement, upon the death of one of the parties to a marriage, no estate duty shall be payable on the death of the other party to the marriage unless such person was at the time of his or her death or had been at any time during the continuance of the settlement competent to dispose of such property. (2) For the purposes of this section, the term settlement means any . . . will, . . . under or by virtue of which instrument . . . any property, or any estate or interest in any property, stands for the time being limited to or in trust for any persons by way of succession, & the term settled property means the property comprised in a settlement."

A testator by his will bequeathed to his wife an annuity of £10,000 during her life. No specific fund was set aside by the trustees of the will to meet the annuity, which was in fact paid out of the general income of the estate. The whole of that income was not applied in meeting the annual payments. The annuitant was not at any time competent to dispose of the property out of the income of which her annuity was payable. Estate duty had been paid in Hong Kong on the whole of the testator's estate when probate was granted. On a claim by the Estate Duty Comr. that upon the death of the annuitant estate duty became payable under sect. 5 (1) of Estate Duty Ordinance, 1932, to the extent to which a benefit accrued by the cesser of the annuity:—Held: (1) there was property of testator in which the annuitant had an interest ceasing at her death within the meaning of sect. 5 (1) (b) of the Ordinance, & therefore to the extent to which a benefit accrued by the cesser of the annuity that property was deemed to be included in property passing on the death of the annuitant; (2) there was not a "settlement" within the meaning of sect. 25 (2) of the Ordinance, under or by virtue of which any property, or any estate or interest in property, stood during the lifetime of the annuitant limited to or in trust for any person by way of succession, & therefore the exemption conferred by sect. 25 (1) did not operate, & estate duty was accordingly payable. The phrase "any property, or any estate or interest in any property" in sect. 25 (2) of the Ordinance, coupled with the words "stands limited," referred to definite property or an estate or interest in it which actually existed & could be precisely defined. There was no such definite property allocated in the present case, & a hypothetical slice of the property passing by the will could not properly be treated as an interest in that property within the meaning of sect. 25 (2).—ARMSTRONG v. ESTATE DUTY COMR., [1937] A. ss. "Interest in business"—What is—1914 Act, s. 15.]—A father & two of his sons carried on business in partnership. By a re-arrangement of the partnership relations the father accepted £124,646 in full of his whole rights in the old firm & its assets, & agreed to allow this sum to remain as a loan to the new firm at 4 per cent. interest, on condition that, if called up by him, or in any event on his death, it was to be repaid by ten yearly instalments. The father contributed no capital to the new firm apart from the loan, but had an interest in the profits to the extent of a one-tenth share. He died in 1922, leaving a will by which he bequeathed the residue of his estate, including the loan, to his family, & estate duty was duly paid thereon. The two sons came to an arrangement with their father's exors., under which the sons agreed to repay the loan at once in return for a certain discount; & in settling with the exors., they retained in the business the respective shares of the loan falling to them, by crediting themselves with the amounts in the books of the firm. Within two years of the father's death one of the sons died, & estate duty became payable on his estate. His exor. having claimed a reduction, under the above sect., of the estate duty payable on the sum credited to the son in the firm's books in respect of his share of his father's loan:—Held: the father's right to repayment of the loan was not an "interest in the business" within the sect., & the sum standing in the son's name in the books of the firm was an interest in the assets of the firm, & was not identical with his father's interest in the jus credit of the loan.—GLEN v. INLAND REVENUE, [1926] S. ss. —— —— ——.]—The proprietor of a wine & spirit business, by his trust-disposition & settlement, directed his trustees to convey the residue of his estate to his only daughter on her attaining twenty-five years of age, with a destination over in the event of her predeceasing the period of conveyance, & to pay her the income of the residue until that date. He directed his trustees to sell the business. The daughter died eight days after testator, under the age of twenty-five, & before the direction to sell had been implemented. The trustees having claimed a reduction, under Finance Act, 1914, s. 15, of the estate duty payable on the daughter's death, in so far as assessable on the value of the business, the Comrs. of Inland Revenue refused the claim:—Held: sect. 15 applied, in respect that the beneficial possession & enjoyment of the residue, including the business, had passed to the daughter on testator's death, & had again passed on her death: & the trustees were, accordingly, entitled to the relief claimed.—WARREN'S TRUSTEES v. INLAND REVENUE, [1928] S. The income was so accumulated for several years. On the death of the deceased the Comrs. contended that for determining the rate of estate duty the said accumulations should under Finance Act, 1894 (c. 30), s. 4, be aggregated with the rest of the settled property passing on the death, & that they were not property in which deceased " never had an interest " within the meaning of the proviso to that sect. :—Held : the contention of the Comrs. was correct.—A.-G. v. DICKINSON & BARON, [1937] 2 K. In 1892 the redemption of the annuity for a sum of £55,890 was agreed upon, & that amount was paid into ct. & invested in the purchase of Consols. The fifth Viscount E. died in Aug. 1922, & the sixth Viscount in Feb. 1923. Questions having arisen as to the payment of estate duty, the ct. was asked whether estate duty became payable (a) upon the capital of the sum of Consols, or (b) upon the value of the interest of the successor to the title in such sum of Consols, & if estate duty became so payable, then whether, for the purpose of determining the rate of estate duty, such sum of Consols ought (a) to be aggregated with the other property, or (b) to be treated as an estate by itself :—Held : " chattels " in collocation with settled lands in 1894 Act, s. 5 (5), did not suggest personalty generally, but those particular items of it which were usually settled upon trusts that followed the devolution of the settled land, & the sum of Consols was not " chattels " within the sub-sect., & must be aggregated with the other property for the purpose of paying estate duty.—Re EXMOUTH'S ANNUITY, [1925] Ch. 280 ; 94 L. Testator died in 1893, & H. entered into possession of the lands under the trusts of the will. J. died intestate & unmarried in 1897, leaving his brother, the said H., his heir-at-law. By an order of the ct. made in 1908 it was declared that on the death of J., H. took an estate for life, with a vested absolute interest in remainder, subject to being divested if he left issue, in the freehold lands devised by his father's will, &, accordingly, that H. could make a valid testamentary disposition or otherwise dispose of his estate or interest in the lands. On the death of J., H. took out a grant of administration, & paid duty in respect of the personal property which passed on the death of J., but he did not pay any estate duty in respect of the contingent interest in the lands which had been devised to J. by his father's will, & which passed to him, H., as his brother's heir-at-law. H. died without issue in 1920, & estate duty was paid by his exor. on the value of the property which passed on his death, including the lands in question :—Held : the Revenue Comrs. were entitled to claim estate duty on the death of J. in respect of his contingent estate in the lands which passed on his death to H., & the rate of estate duty was to be calculated according to the value of that interest when it fell into possession on the death of H., together with the value of the rest of the estate of J.—Re O'CONNOR'S ESTATE, HENDRICK v. REVENUE COMRS., [1931] I. The business had been turned into a limited co. in 1898, with a share capital of £30,000, divided into 30,000 shares of £1 each, of which 23,007 had been issued, & it was turned into a private co. in 1908. At the date of his death the testator held 18,501 shares, & his son, the assistant managing director, held 4,251. The shares were transferable, subject to the right of the directors to refuse to register any transfer of shares upon which the co. had a lien, or a transfer to a transferee of whom the directors did not approve. 137a. Bequests of shares of residue—Accruer clause—Calculation of value of interest of deceased beneficiary.]—Viscount N. by his will & three codicils thereto disposed by clause 6 of his will of 74¼ hundredths of the income of his residuary estate. By sub-clause 28 he provided that on the death of any of the legatees, his or her share should accrue to the survivors. By sub-clause 29 he provided for the application of the remaining income in payment of other legacies, & these being paid the remainder was to be applied in the same manner as the 74¼ hundredths. By clause 10 it was directed that the capital should go in moieties to charities. By an order made on July 28, 1924, the income was divided into one hundred & thirds. Two of the income beneficiaries had now died. On a summons taken out in these circumstances asking whether the estate duty payable by reason of the death of any person entitled to any share of the income was to be paid upon the value of the share in the capital equal to that of the income previously enjoyed by such person or upon the like proportion of the actuarial capital value of the income during the respective lives of the several persons entitled thereto or other the period during which the trusts in respect of such income should be subsisting or how otherwise the same ought to be calculated & out of what fund the same was payable:—Held: (1) the property which passed on the death of any such person must be taken to be a share of capital in the residuary trust fund, & that estate duty must be paid on the value of such share; (2) the duty payable on any such death was a first charge on that portion of the residue out of which the income was payable, & must be borne by the corpus of such estate.—Re NORTHCLIFFE, ARNHOLZ v. HUDSON, [1929] 1 Ch. 327; 98 L. the last balance sheet, prior to the date of the death of the testator, showed a surplus of assets over liabilities of £36,399, the principal asset consisting of the stock-in-trade, valued in the last balance sheet at £23,329. The shares, which were all held by members of testator's family, had never been dealt with on the Stock Exchange, & therefore they had no market quotation. As the co. was a private co., in which practically no one was interested except the directors, the profits could be divided up either as salaries or dividends as the directors chose, & they decided to give the profits as salaries. At the time of his death the salary of testator was £2,000 & that of his son £1,000 per annum. For the six years previous to testator's death the actual dividend paid averaged 5–3 per cent. on the issued capital of £23,007. Both testator & his son had special knowledge of the business, to which they gave constant daily attention. Testator's exors. when making their return for the purpose of estate duty, valued testator's shares at 15*s.* each, basing their estimate of value on the average dividend for the preceding period of six years & the market price of similar shares, a valuation which they subsequently offered to increase to 17*s.* 6*d.*, but the Revenue Comrs. declined to accept these values:—Held: the co. could be fairly regarded as capable of earning on a commercial basis 10 per cent. on its capital, but, taking this as the principal test of value, it must be subject to the consideration, on the one hand, of the restriction upon the transfer of the shares, &, on the other, to the added value by reason of the security of the co.'s position. Also, the Comrs.' contention that testator's shares would be most likely sold en bloc to a single purchaser, & that their value should be fixed accordingly, was unsustainable as the possibility of the shares being divided up among several purchasers, either members of testator's family or of the public, must be considered, for Finance Act, 1894 (c. 30), s. 7 (5), does not contemplate in the term "open market" not only a market which is hypothetical, but also only hypothetical purchasers wanting a block of shares.—SMYTH v. REVENUE COMRS., [1931] I. Amongst other debts there was one of £32,279 which was secured by mtge. or charge over a part of his home assets &, also, over certain of his foreign assets which were valued at £33,427:—Held: the case fell within Stamp Duties Act, 1920, s. 109 (3), & in assessing death duty on the estate no allowance should be made for the debt or any part thereof.—SOLLAS v. STAMP DUTIES COMR. 161a. —— ——.]—A rentcharge of £50,000 per annum charged on L. settled estates was limited to the use of deft., the fourth Viscount P., for life with remainder to the use of his eldest son during his life, to commence from their respective successions to the title & to be paid without any deduction except for death duties, & a similar rentcharge was limited in remainder, in the event of any other issue of the fourth Viscount succeeding to the title, to the use of the sons of such eldest son & other sons of the fourth Viscount in tail male. Subject to such rentcharge, the L. settled estates were limited to the use of pltf. for life with remainder to the use of his eldest son for life with remainders over. By a deed poll dated Oct. 15, 1913, provision was made for the abatement of the £50,000 rentcharge in certain events. The third Viscount, who was tenant for life of the estates in question, had died in 1923, while nine of the sixteen half-yearly instalments of estate duty payable in respect of the death of the second Viscount, who had died in 1919, remained unpaid. One of the questions for the decision of the ct. at the original hearing of the summons (Re Portman (Viscount), No. 249, post) was as to what proportion of the balance remaining unpaid at the death of the third Viscount of the estate duty, which became assessable on the death of the second Viscount in respect of the L. estates, should be borne by the yearly rentcharge of £50,000, & it was admitted in argument that there was no difference in principle in respect of that unpaid balance between that duty & that which was assessable upon the death of the third Viscount. After judgment had been delivered & before the minutes had been finally drawn up, leave was given to withdraw the admission made in argument as aforesaid, & it was directed that the question with regard to the liability of the rentcharge in respect of the unpaid instalments of estate duty assessable on the death of the second Viscount should be argued :—Held : the effect of 1894 Act, s. 14 (1), was to throw the incidence of the duty ratably & in proper proportions upon all persons becoming beneficially interested in the property upon which the duty was constituted a first charge by force of sect. 9 (1) of the Act ; the rentcharge, or the abated rentcharge, must be dealt with, as regards these unpaid instalments, in the manner indicated in the original judgment ; & the order would be in the terms of the minutes prepared in accordance with that judgment.—Re PORTMAN (VISCOUNT) (No. 2), [1925] Ch. 294 ; 94 L. 209c. —— Incorporation of Form 8 of Statutory Will Forms, 1925.]—Testator by his will, after making specific & pecuniary bequests, gave to his wife absolutely any freehold or leasehold house belonging to him & in which he should be residing at his death. He declared that all legacies thereby given should be free of all death duties & devised & bequeathed all his residuary real & personal estate to his trustees, & declared that (inter alia) Form 8 of the Statutory Will Forms, 1925, should be incorporated in his will so far as it was applicable to his residuary estate. The only real estate testator possessed at the time of his death was a freehold house in which he was then residing. Questions arose : (a) whether having regard to Form 8, clause 4 (c), of the Statutory Will Forms, 1925, the estate duty payable in respect of testator's freehold house on his death should be borne by the testator's widow or by the residuary estate, & (b) whether upon the true construction of the will, the estate & succession duties payable by reason of the testator's death in respect of the freehold house were payable out of the residuary estate :—Held : (1) although the exor. was by reason of the provisions of Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 16, now accountable for estate duty on realty, the incidence of the duty remained unchanged & was still charged by virtue of the Finance Act, 1894 (c. 30), s. 9 (1), on the realty in respect of which it was paid. Form 8, clause 4 (c), therefore, had no application, & apart from the question of construction the estate duty on the freehold house must be borne by the widow ; (2) on the true construction of the will testator had used the word "legacies" not in its strict sense, but as including the gift of the house in which he was residing at his death, although that house was of freehold tenure.

PART II. SECT. 9, SUB-SECT. 1.—B. a i. ——.]—By his will testator directed that all his debts & funeral & testamentary expenses should be paid as conveniently as might be after his decease, & thereafter proceeded by his will to devise & bequeath all his real & personal property not otherwise dis- of :—Held : (1) estate duty was under the direction payable actually out of the residuary estate ; (2) in the event of the residuary estate being insufficient to pay the estate duty, the life interests were not liable for a portion of the deficiency, but the annuitants & specific devisees of real estate should jointly contribute to the deficiency.—CALDWELL, ETC. v. FLEMING, [1927] N. Z. L. R. 145.—N.Z.

The estate & succession duties payable by reason of testator's death in respect of the freehold house in question were therefore ...ble out of the residuary estate. STURGES v. PREVITÉ, [1931] 1 Ch. 447; 100 L. J. Ch. 286; 145 L. T. 40.

209e. —— ——.]—Notwithstanding the provisions of Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), which abolish tenancies in common of land & direct such land to be held by certain persons as trustees for sale upon statutory trusts, the death duty to be paid on freehold land which just before the commencement of Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), was held in undivided shares, & in respect of which there have been no dealings since the commencement of that Act, is, even where the duty only became payable after the commencement of that Act, deemed to be "duty due upon an account of real property" within Finance Act, 1894 (c. 30), s. 6 (8), & under that sub-sect. as amended by Finance Act, 1896 (c. 28), s. 18, & Finance Act, 1919 (c. 32), s. 30, the duty may be paid by instalments extending over a period of eight years with interest at 4 per cent. per annum as therein provided.—A.-G. v. PUBLIC TRUSTEE & TUCK, [1929] 2 K. 227a. —— ——.]—By his will a testator who died on Nov. 3, 1915, directed that all legacies & annuities thereby given should be paid & enjoyed free of death duties, & the question arose whether the exemption from duties was limited to duties payable on the death of testator or extended to those payable in future in respect of settled legacies:—Held: the duties, other than the legacy duties from which the legatees were relieved, were those payable on the death of testator & not those accruing in the future.—Re LAIDLAW, WILKINSON v. LYDE, [1930] 2 Ch. 392; 99 L. 227b. —— ——.]—Testator by his will dated Feb. 24, 1930, after giving several pecuniary & specific legacies, directed by clause 6 that all the pecuniary legacies & specific bequests & devises given by his will "shall be free from all death duties which (whether presently or presumptively or prospectively payable) shall be paid out of any general personal estate."

He then directed his exors. to invest a sum of £5,000 upon trust to pay the income to his daughter L. during her life with provision for forfeiture in certain events & after her death or forfeiture to hold the investments in trust for her daughter A. absolutely. He devised & bequeathed his residuary real & personal estate to his exors. upon trust for sale & conversion & out of the proceeds (inter alia) to pay his testamentary expenses (including all estate duty leviable at his death in respect of his residuary estates). Testator died on Dec. 6, 1931. Questions arose whether under the terms of the will the estate duty which would become payable on the death of the daughter & the legacy duty which might become payable in the event of the forfeiture of her life interest would be payable out of the residuary estate or out of the settled legacy:—Held: as the words used in clause 6 were found in precedent books published prior to the passing of Finance Act, 1914, they could not be held to apply exclusively to the future estate duties imposed by that Act, the words of the will showed that the mind of testator was directed to the duties payable at his death, & did not provide a context which would justify a more extended construction being imposed upon clause 6, & the estate duties which would become payable on the death of the tenant for life upon the settled legacy would not be payable out of the residuary estate, but the legacy duty would be so payable.—Re HICKS, BACH v. COCKBURN, [1933] Ch. 335; 102 L. 5593b. —— ——.]—In this case the observations made in R. v. Willmott by CHARLES, J., apply with added force. Appct. was convicted on Jan. 20, & his notice of appeal was dated Jan. 31. The notice contained five paragraphs & was in itself a very long document. On Feb. 9 he sent in a further document of fourteen closely-written sheets which he called " further grounds of appeal." On Feb. 23 he sent in a mass of further documents & a great many pages of further grounds of appeal. This morning there have arrived a great many more documents from appct. & among them twelve or fourteen closely-written pages relating to the old & new grounds of appeal. In these circumstances, the ct. desires me to say that this case is one in which the ct. would normally adopt the course of adjourning the application, with the result that, unless leave to appeal were given, appct. would remain a longer time in prison than otherwise. Such a practice causes the greatest possible inconvenience. In this case, however, for special reasons, the ct. does not propose to take this course (HUMPHREYS, J.).—R. v. MCLAREN (1933), 24 Cr. The exors. paid the said sum to the window. The Revenue Comrs. claimed legacy duty from the exors. in respect of this sum, which claim the exors. declined to pay, contending that the money was given to them upon a secret trust, viz. for testator's widow, who was the actual beneficiary, & that it had been paid to her :—Held : the gift was a legacy to the exors. & liable to legacy duty notwithstanding that a secret trust appeared on the face of the will ; the benefit to the cestui que trust under the secret trust was a benefit derived dehors the will & not by virtue of the will.—REVENUE COMRS. v. STAPLETON & O'BRIEN, [1937] I. By various appointments the tenant for life appointed the sum of £160,000 between his two younger sons & the issue of one of them. The tenant for life died in 1929 & the question arose whether succession duty was payable on his death in respect of this sum at the rate of 5 per cent. as on a succession from the tenant in tail or at the rate of 1 per cent. as on a succession from the tenant for life :—Held : the tenant in tail's succession had to the extent of this sum of £160,000 become vested during the lifetime of the tenant for life by " alienation " within Succession Duty Act, 1853 (c. 51), s. 15 ; & succession duty was therefore payable by virtue of that sect. at the same rate as if there had been no alienation, with the result that duty was payable at the rate of 1 per cent. only as on a succession from the tenant for life.—A.-G. v. DE TRAFFORD, [1934] 1 K. 694a. Resettlement by party with defeasible estate & party with contingent interest subject thereto.]—By the combined effect of a settlement & a will, E. T. T. D. in 1915 became entitled to certain real property absolutely, should he survive the Great War, &, if he failed so to survive, such property went to G. P. T. D. absolutely, subject only to an annuity of £1,200 to the widow of E. T. T. D. In 1917, E. T. T. D., being in want of money, agreed with G. P. T. D. that certain of these hereditaments should be settled, subject to certain prior charges, upon E. T. T. D. for life, after his death to secure an annuity of £1,200 to the surviving wife of E. T. T. D., subject thereto to secure portions for the younger children of E. T. T D., subject thereto for the first & other sons of E. T. T. D. successively in tail male with remainder to G. P. T. D. for life & then to his sons successively in tail male. In consideration of the settlement, G. P. T. D. was to release his contingent interest in other hereditaments subject to the will. A settlement in pursuance of the agreement of 1917 was executed in 1921, the grantors being both E. T. T. D. & G. P. T. D., & upon the death of E. T. T. D. in 1933, without sons, the property passed to T. T. D., the eldest son of G. P. T. D., under the last limitation, subject to the annuity for the widow & portions for the daughter of E. T. T. D. The question then arose whether, for the purposes of the payment of succession duty, E. T. T. D. was the sole predecessor of the beneficiaries or whether E. T. T. D. & G. P. T. D. were joint predecessors :—Held : for the purposes of this case the settlement of 1921 must be treated as coming into operation in 1917. As T. T. D. then became entitled to a vested estate in tail male in remainder, & as that interest could be created only by E. T. T. D. & G. P. T. D. acting together, E. T. T. D. & G. P. T. n iii. —— ——.]—The Crown, in the right of the province of Quebec, by its action claimed the sum of $15,775.95, as representing succession duties alleged to be due by resp., as sole trustee & exor. of the estate of the late S. who died in New York in 1929 & was at the time of his death domiciled in the province of Ontario. Amongst the assets of his estate were certain bonds or debentures of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Co. & the Canadian National Railway Co., respectively, guaranteed by the Govt. of Canada. These bonds or debentures, registered in Montreal, were at the time of S.'s death in the possession of the latter in Toronto. Succession duties were paid to the Govt. of the province of Ontario; but the Govt. of the province of Quebec also claimed succession duties on the ground that these bonds or debentures were to be considered for succession duty purposes as property situate in the province of Quebec according to the definition of the word "property" in sect. 5 of Succession Duties Act, because the two cos. debtors had their head offices at Montreal & the bonds & debentures were registered & transferable on the cos.' registers in that city :—Held : those bonds or debentures had not, in the relevant sense, a local situation within the province of Quebec, &, therefore, were not subject to the payment of succession duties in that province. Debentures authorised by the Parliament of Canada & charged by statute upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund have the character of specialties. The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Co. has statutory powers to create bonds having the character of specialties. The bonds in this case must, as respects the obligation of the railway co., be considered specialties, although the head office of the co. is fixed by statute in Quebec; &, in view of the statute law applicable to the case, it must be held such a specialty has its situs in Ontario. Neither, for the reasons fully stated in the judgment, have the bonds of the Canadian National Railway Co. in question in this case a situs in Quebec. —R. v. NATIONAL TRUST CO., [1933] S. C. n iv. —— ——.]—The vendor under an agreement for the sale of land in Sask. died domiciled in Alta. At his death there was a large amount still payable under the agreement. The agreement was made in Sask. & described the parties as both resident at S. in that province; & the purchaser continued to live there. It also provided that the money payments as well as the deliveries of grain thereunder were to be made in Sask. & that it should for all purposes be construed according to the laws of Sask. All the beneficiaries of the estate were domiciled elsewhere than in Alta. The agreement was executed in duplicate under seal. Upon the vendor's death his copy was found in his safety deposit box in Edmonton & was there reduced into the possession of the administrator of his estate; the purchaser's copy was then & had at all material times been in the possession of the purchaser within Sask. The province of Alta. contended that the debt due under the agreement was subject to succession duties under Succession Duty Act, 1934 (Alta.) :—Held : the rule that the situs of a specialty debt is the place where it is found in the creditor's possession at his death was not affected by the fact that the purchaser's copy of the duplicate agreement was in the latter's possession in Sask. Therefore, Alta. had the right to impose the tax. All the cases dealing with the situs of specialty debts in which the test put is where is the specialty "found," or where is it "conspicuous," or where does it happen "to be," relate as a matter of course to the specialty as the property of the creditor in his possession or in some place where he has placed it.—SCHMIDT v. ALBERTA PROVINCIAL TREASURER & A.-G. Under Succession Duty Act (Que.), 1909, art. 1376, duty was imposed upon "property actually situate within the province, whether the transmission takes place within or without the province" :—Held : as the ownership of the shares could be effectively dealt with only in Nova Scotia, they were not property situate in Quebec, & the claim could not be maintained. —BRASSARD v. SMITH, [1925] A. He also devised & bequeathed the residue of his real & personal estate to his trustees upon trust, after payment of his debts, funeral & testamentary & trust expenses & legacy, succession & other duties, to divide the same into thirty-four equal parts, & to stand possessed of one of such equal parts in trust for each of thirty-four residuary legatees named therein. A question arose whether the succession duty payable on the death of S. would be payable out of the residuary estate or out of the property so devised & by the person or persons entitled thereto upon her death:—Held: upon the true construction of the will the words "free of all duties" applied only to the succession duty presently payable on the death of testator, & did not extend to the succession duty payable on the death of S.—Re TRIMBLE, WILSON v. TURTON, [1931] 1 Ch. 369; 100 L. 229a. Judgment in action on bond—Subsequent action on another bond of same series.]—Defts. issued on Aug. 1, 1884, 6,000 First Mtge. Gold Bonds of like amount, tenor & date. The bonds were secured by a mtge. trust deed & all became due on Aug. 1, 1934. The bonds stated that on that date defts. for value received promised "to pay to the bearer or registered holder thereof £100 sterling gold coin of Great Britain of the present standard of weight & fineness at its agency in London, England, with interest thereon" at 5 per cent. per annum payable in London or at the holder's option at deft.'s office in New Brunswick. The interest coupon stated that the co. would pay the bearer £2 10*s.* sterling at its agency in London, England, or at its office in New Brunswick on Aug. 1, 1934. Pltfs., a holder of 992 such bonds, claimed in respect of each bond the sum in sterling calculated on Aug. 1, 1934, then representing the gold value of £100 on Aug. 1, 1884:—Held: pltfs. were not entitled to be paid on such gold basis, but only £100 sterling; because upon the true construction of the bond, & the question was purely one of construction, the contract was not one for a payment of gold in specie, but one for the repayment of £100 sterling. The interest was similarly payable in sterling.

In an action between the same parties upon one of the said bonds pltfs. obtained judgment on Nov. 7, 1934, upon the gold basis now claimed, the present defts. not having put in any defence to that action. The statement of claim in that action did not allege that all the bonds were identical in their terms:—Held: there was no estoppel by record, because each bond was a distinct contract &, further, the record of the previous action did not show that all the bonds were in the same terms.—BRITISH & FRENCH TRUST CORPN. v. NEW BRUNSWICK RY. 253a. Judgment relating to right of set-off—Claim to set off contingent liability under guarantee—Subsequent application as to disposition of dividend—After payment under guarantee.]—F., having guaranteed advances by certain banks to the T. Assocn., in which he was interested, subsequently executed two deeds of arrangement in favour of his creditors. The Assocn. having gone into liquidation, the liquidator lodged a proof against F.'s estate in respect of sums due by F. to the Assocn. The trustee of F.'s estate rejected the proof

Assocn. for which F. had given his personal guarantee. At that time, although one or more of the banks had proved against F.'s estate under the guarantees, nothing had been paid to any of them. The Assocn. was admitted to prove against F.'s estate for a very large sum, & the trustee declared an interim dividend of 1*s.* in the pound. The banks were paid the dividend in respect of their admitted proofs, which also amounted in the aggregate to a considerable sum. The sums constituting the amount of the banks' proofs represented the amount of the Assocn.'s debt which had been guaranteed by F. The question arose whether the trustee of F.'s estate was under the circumstances entitled to pay to the liquidation of the Assocn. the sum representing the interim dividend declared in respect of the admitted proof. The matter came before the ct. by way of motion on behalf of the trustee, the question being whether this declared dividend was properly payable to the liquidator of the Assocn. or the trustee was entitled to withhold payment of all or any part thereof. On behalf of the Assocn. it was urged that the previous proceedings reported Re Fenton, [1931] 1 Ch. 85, had concluded the matter, that the question was now res judicata, & that, notwithstanding the payment to the banks of the amount of the dividend since that decision, the liquidator of the Assocn. was entitled to the full dividend in respect of the Assocn.'s admitted proof :—Held : the question raised by the motion had not been determined by the Ct. of Appeal in the previous proceedings. —Re FENTON (NO. 2), Ex p. FENTON TEXTILE ASSOCN., LTD., [1932] 1 Ch. 178; 146 L. In that action the patent had been held to be valid. It was contended by deft. that the ct. was bound by the prior decision only as to construction of the specification & not as to subject-matter, that the additional documents relied on showed features claimed in the specification not disclosed by G. or V., & that, owing to the issue of infringement not having been contested it had been unnecessary for the ct. to define the ambit of the claims :—Held : the ct. was not strictly bound by a prior decision as to anticipation, & it was open to deft. to prove anticipation by documents not before the ct. in the 296a. —— Action for arrears of maintenance—Agreement to release—Judgment by consent—No evidence that consent based on agreement.]—Pltf. & deft. were divorced in 1925, & an interim order for maintenance was made on Dec. 21, 1925, for payment to pltf. of £3 10*s.* a week. In Feb. 1927, an agreement was entered into whereby deft. was to continue to pay £182 per annum but the payments were to be quarterly. The agreement also provided inter alia, that each party should give to the other full discharge of all sums claimed & that all actions, claims, demands at law & otherwise were withdrawn by consent. Payment fell into arrears & pltf. brought an action in the Mayor's Ct. for the amount then owing. The defence was withdrawn & judgment consented to. Payments again fell into arrears & the present action was brought in respect of them. Deft. contended that, as the agreement provided for the payment of a sum which deft. was already liable to pay, it was void for want of consideration. Pltf. replied that deft. was estopped from relying on this defence by th proceedings in the Mayor's Ct. which arose out of a breach of the same agreement:—Held: (1) there was no estoppel inasmuch as there was no evidence that judgment in the Mayor's Ct. was based on the agreement. It might have been consented on because the money was in any event due under the maintenance order; (2) the settlement of all accounts & claims was good consideration for the agreement & pltf. was entitled to succeed.—MANN v. MANN, [1936] 1 All E. 296b. Admission.]—Under a will the annual income from an estate in Australia was divisible by the trustees between testator's daughters. The trustees objected to an assessment for the financial year 1918–1919 under Land Tax Assessment Act, 1910–1916, of Australia; they claimed under sect. 38 (7) of the Act a deduction of £5,000 in respect of the share of each daughter, & a case was stated for the opinion of the Full Ct. of the High Ct. upon the questions: (1) whether the shares of the joint owners, or of any & which of them, in the land were original shares within sect. 38; (2) how many deductions of £5,000 resp. should make. The Full Ct. answered these questions as follows: (1) the shares of the six children surviving at the date of the assessment; (2) six. Upon the assessment for 1919–1920 the comr. allowed only one deduction of £5,000, contending that the beneficiaries were not joint owners within the Act. Upon a case stated the Full Ct. upheld that view, & held that the comr. was not estopped by the previous decision:—Held: the comr. was estopped, since although in the previous litigation no express decision had been given whether the beneficiaries were joint owners, it being assumed & admitted that they were, the matter so admitted was fundamental to the decision then given.—HOYSTEAD v. TAXATION COMR., [1926] A. 315a. —— Fraud—Fraud alleged in letter to registrar in previous proceedings.]—Resp. co. took proceedings to recover certain instalments, amounting to about £6, due under a hire-purchase agreement. In the ordinary course, & under County Cts. (Amendment) Act, 1934 (c. 17), s. 19, the case came before the registrar. Resp. co. was represented & was admittedly a consenting party; applt. was not represented, but he wrote to the registrar alleging that the contract had been obtained by fraud. The registrar gave judgment for resp. co. Subsequently resp. co. started a second action to recover further amounts due under the same contract. Applt. counterclaimed for cancellation of the contract on the ground that it had been obtained by fraud. The county ct. judge found that the contract had been obtained by fraud, but he held that applt. was estopped from raising this defence, as the registrar had already decided this point against him. On appeal applt. contended that the registrar had had no jurisdiction to hear the case, as applt. had not applied to the registrar to hear the case:—Held: applt.'s letter to the registrar amounted to an application to the registrar to hear the case, & applt. could not therefore raise the question of fraud which was res judicata.—RENTIT, LTD. v. DUFFIELD, [1937] 3 All E. caustic soda, & before the assignment of the business to pltfs. the firm had bought from defts., who knew the purpose for which it was required, a supply of caustic soda sufficient to last for three years. This caustic soda turned out to be of inferior quality, & in consequence the firm, using it without knowledge of its defects, suffered a loss in their business before the date of the assignment to pltfs. After the assignment pltfs., not knowing that the loss had been caused by the fact that the caustic soda was defective, continued to use it in the business, & suffered further loss in consequence. Ultimately, when the loss had been traced to the caustic soda, pltfs. brought an action against defts. for damages in respect of the loss suffered by the firm before the assignment, & in that action obtained judgment for a sum of £292 10*s.* 3*d.* Subsequently they brought this action to recover damages from defts. in respect of the loss which they had themselves suffered by using the remainder of the caustic soda after they had taken over the business. Defts. pleaded res judicata & contended that the action was not maintainable, & an order was made for the trial of a preliminary issue, whether pltfs. had a cause of action:—Held: where the same breach of contract has caused the same kind of damage a pltf. cannot bring two actions for different parts of the same kind of damage; he can recover in one action for all damage actual or prospective, & if he does not ask for both in that action he cannot afterwards bring another action for damages for which he omitted to ask in the first action.—ROWNTREE (ALFRED) & SONS, LTD. v. ALLEN (FREDERICK) & SONS (POPLAR), LTD. As against her the matter is res judicata. But if it appear that she has transferred the moneys to a person with knowledge of the proceedings against her action will lie against the transferee as constructive trustee. Pltf. obtained against the first deft. a married woman judgment for payment out of her separate estate of the sum in dispute & costs. Evidence disclosed that the first deft. had parted with the whole of the sum, having transferred most of it to her sister, the second deft., who was not a party to the proceedings but knew of them at the time. Execution in respect of the judgment thus proving useless pltf. now brought this action alleging that the first deft. had paid the money to the second deft. in order to defeat any judgment for pltf., & that the second deft. received the money as constructive trustee :—Held : in regard to the first deft. the matter was res judicata, as pltf. had already obtained judgment against her separate estate & therefore could not now on the same facts obtain against her another form of judgment for payment of the moneys into ct.—GREEN v. WEATHERILL, [1929] 2 Ch. 213 ; 98 L. 599a. —— —— —— What amounts to conviction.]—To an action for an assault deft. pleaded that, before action brought, pltf. caused deft. to be summoned before a magistrate to answer a complaint in respect of the assault, & that the magistrate " adjudged & determined the said complaint & charge, & then ordered deft. then to pay, & then convicted him, deft., in the costs as well of the said complaint & charge as of the hearing thereof, but did not further order or convict deft." The magistrate had decided only that deft. should enter into recognisances to keep the peace & pay the costs thereof, & such costs only had been paid. No record of a conviction was produced, but the magistrate's clerk stated that it was not the practice to draw up a formal conviction in such cases :—Held : the plea was no bar to the action within Offences Against the Person Act, 1861 (c. 100), s. 45, & taking it as it stood it was not proved.—HARTLEY v. HINDMARSH (1866), L. After the case had been at hearing before the judge of Assize for a short time, deft. admitted the assault & the reasonableness of the damages awarded, & raised a new defence which had not been available to him in the county ct. Deft. relied upon Offences Against the Person Act, 1861, c. 100, s. 43, & it was contended on his behalf that deft.'s conviction coupled with the payment of the penalty operated as a release from " all further or other proceedings," including the re-hearing of the civil bill on appeal :—Held : the appeal did not constitute " further or other proceedings " within Offences Against the Person Act, 1861, s. 45.—MAGEE v. STOREY, [1929] N. 813a. Existence of shares.]—By a deed of arantee for the repayment of a loan of £250,000 & interest, which recited that the lenders had at the request of the guarantors advanced to the borrowers £250,000 upon security of a charge on certain shares, the guarantors covenanted, in the event of the borrowers failing to make the repayments provided for, forthwith to repay to the lenders the said sum of £250,000 with interest at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum. The deed further provided that whatever the position between the lenders & the borrowers, the guarantors should be liable for all moneys due as principal debtors & they were not to be released from liability by reason of time being given by the lenders or by their taking no steps to protect their securities. The shares above mentioned were at no time secured & had not in fact been issued. Upon default in repayment of part of the loan the liquidator of the guarantors rejected the proof by the liquidators of the lenders, contending that the security of the charge on the shares was a condition precedent to the guarantee :—Held : (1) upon a proper construction of the deed of guarantee, the contention of the liquidator of the guarantors was correct, & the guarantors were not bound by the guarantee. The existence of the shares was the basis of the contract of guarantee & this was not affected by the clause making the guarantors liable as principal debtors ; (2) the guarantors were not bound by the recital in the deed & were not estopped from setting up the facts relating to the shares.—Re PARENT TRUST & FINANCE CO., LTD., [1936] 3 All E. 853 i. Operation of rule—Money paid to solicitor producing executed deed—No intention that money should be paid over to party to deed.]—A solr. obtained from pltf., his client, a cheque for $1,100, representing that he would invest it upon the security of a mtge. upon land which had been mortgaged to his sister, whose mtge. would be paid off by the $1,100. In the receipt given to pltf. by the solr. it was stated that the cheque was given to him "re mtge. 10 R. St.", which was a brief description of land upon which defts. had made a mtge. to the solr.'s father's exors. The solr. notified defts. that the exors. desired payment of this mtge., & that he had a client who would advance the money necessary to pay it off. A mtge. by defts. to pltf. upon this land was thereupon prepared by the solr. & executed by defts. in Mar. 1923. They made payments from time to time upon the mtge. by cheque to the solr., who paid off the mtge. held by the exors., & consequently did not obtain a discharge of it. The $1,100 was misappropriated by the solr., who absconded in 1926. It was intended that the mtge. moneys should be paid to the exors. & not to the mtgors., & this pltf. understood. This action was brought to enforce the mtge., & pltf. in her evidence at the trial stated that the solr. showed her the mtge. in Mar. 1923:—Held: the facts that the mtgor. delivered the mtge. to the solr. & that he showed it to pltf. did not amount to a representation that the moneys advanced by pltf. had been paid to the holders of the first mtge., & that it had been discharged, & it could not be said that the mtgors. were estopped from disputing the fact that the moneys had been advanced to them.—MURRAY v. CROSSLAND, [1929] 4 D. PART VI. SECT. 1.

1019 i. General rule.]—The reason for precluding a party from relying upon an actual state of affairs as the foundation of his rights lies in the injustice of permitting him to depart from some contrary assumption if another party has based his conduct upon it. The injustice of allowing him to disregard the assumption must arise from the circumstances attending its adoption by the other party. There are well recognised grounds for compelling adherence to such an assumption. One such ground is that the assumption has been made because a belief in its correctness has been induced by the representation or the conduct of the party seeking to depart from it. But what makes it unjust to permit the departure from an assumption so induced is that, were it permitted, the party so induced would through making the assumption find himself in a position occasioning material detriment to himself. Without this element there is no estoppel. It must appear that upon the faith of his belief by act or omission he has placed himself in a position which, if his belief proved incorrect, would be productive of loss.—NEWBON v. CITY MUTUAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, LTD. Construction of agreement.]—If a person authorises or permits another to make a representation intended to be acted upon & it is acted upon, that person cannot afterwards be heard to say that the representation is not true. 1081a. ——.]—A man petitioning for a decree of nullity of an English marriage on the ground of the survivorship of a former husband of the woman to whom, as petitioner alleged, she had been married previously in Scotland was met by a plea of estoppel in pais. Particulars

1032 i. How estoppel arises.]—Estoppel arises where a man is precluded from denying the truth of anything which he has represented to be a fact, though it is not a fact.—Re MONTGOMERY v. DIAMOND, DIAMOND v. MONTGOMERY, [1925] 4 D. L. R. 736.—CAN.

1040 i. Where all parties know the truth—No representation.]—A tenant after the expiry of his original lease received from his landlord notice to quit at the end of the following month. In reply, he wrote a letter which contained (inter alia) an admission that he was a monthly tenant. At the hearing of a suit in ejectment the tenant contended that his original lease being for manufacturing purposes he had a tenancy from year to year, & was entitled to six months' notice :—Held : he was not estopped from so contending as the facts affecting the tenancy were within the knowledge of both parties.—JACKS & Co. v. JOOSAB MAHOMED (1923), I. 1041 xiv. ——.]—In 1894 applt. granted a lease of land "from year to year" to resps. In 1903 resps. wished to build a house on the land & applt. wrote that the lease was a permanent one, though the rent was liable to enhancement. Resps. built a house & applt. received a bonus in respect of it. In 1916 applt. sought to eject resps. :—Held : whether the lease was a permanent one under the agreement, applt.'s statement in the letter that it was so was a representation of fact & not an expression of opinion, & he was estopped from denying it.—FORBES v. RALLI (1925), L. 1041 xv. ——.]—The principal question in this case being whether the purchasers of some of the plots abutting on the land in question, which was described in their conveyance as "land kept for the proposed 100 feet drainage road of the Calcutta Improvement Trust," or as "the proposed drainage road of the Trust," had a right of way over the land by reason of any rule of estoppel :—Held : in order that a representation may operate as an estoppel, it must be a representation of an existing fact & not of a mere intention or future promises. It was a statement of what the Improvement Trust was going to do with regard to the land, which was described to be on the boundary of the plots sold, & did not confer any title on the purchasers of the plots sold, either by express grant or by implication. Hence no right of easement was created.—HINDUSTHAN CO-OPERATIVE INSURANCE SOCIETY, LTD. v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL (1929), I. L. R. 56 Calc. 989.—IND.

of the alleged estoppel were that in an earlier suit in this ct. by the former husband of the woman for divorce from her on the ground of her adultery with the present petitioner, petitioner as co-resp. in that suit had expressly adopted a plea of the woman denying the validity of the Scotch marriage, & further that in certain proceedings then taken by the woman in the Scotch ct. seeking a declaration that she & petitioner were husband & wife & praying that the former husband of the woman should be " put to silence in respect of false & calumnious allegations by him that he was married " to the woman, the petitioner had not only been a party to those proceedings as " curator & administrator " of the woman & " for his own interest in the premises " but had also been a party to the settlement of them, resulting in the former husband of the woman admitting that there had been no legal marriage in Scotland between him & the woman & withdrawing his suit & subsequently marrying another woman in England :—Held : none of the requirements for an estoppel had been fulfilled. Although petitioner had adopted the plea by the woman denying the validity of the Scotch marriage he had not done so with intention to mislead the woman, whose knowledge of the facts was greater than his own. Both parties were simultaneously making the same statement for a common purpose, & neither could be estopped as against the other by the making of it. Finally, in the proceedings taken by her in the Scotch ct. the woman relied upon her own knowledge of the facts as to the alleged Scotch marriage in which the petitioner had no part, & if she had acted to her own detriment she did not do so on the faith of any statement by the petitioner.

Deft. did not reply to the letter, & the railway was made across his land without further communication with him. A year or two afterwards pltf. & deft. had an interview, but did not agree as to the price to be paid for the land, & three or four years after the railway was made deft. brought his ejectment, whereupon pltf. filed his bill for an injunction, charging acquiescence. The ct., on motion, restrained the action, upon pltf. giving judgment in the ejectment, & paying a sum into ct. not less than the amount of the utmost valuation of the land.—POWELL v. THOMAS (1848), 6 Hare, 300; 67 E. An alternative claim for judgment against M. was dismissed. The exors. appealed :—Held : the evidence did not support the finding of estoppel, & since it had been properly found that there was no actual contract between the exors. & M. authorising him to act as their agent or manager of the hotel, the appeal must be allowed; & since there was no appeal or cross-appeal against the dismissal of the action as against M. the ct. could make no order respecting it.—WILSON v. WILLOUGHBY, [1934] 3 W. After some months the son arranged with a teller employed by the bank to honour cheques on his signature alone. Some time later this arrangement came to the notice of the applt., but he took no step to stop the practice & made no communication to the bank & in one instance indorsed negotiable instruments so drawn. The practice continued. 1472a. ——.]—In 1925, a certain piece of land, known as B. Lodge, was sold to J. & M. In the conveyance a quantity of timber trees, saplings, etc., was excepted out of the sale by the vendors, who reserved to themselves the right to cut & remove them before Oct. 11, 1927. In 1926 pltf. purchased the timber trees, etc., & proceeded to cut & remove them. A large amount of the cut timber was, however, left on the land after Oct. 11, 1927, & in these circumstances J. & M. stated that pltf. had lost his title thereto & forfeited his right to remove it, & they claimed it as their property. As the result of an action in 1930 against J. & M. it was held that the property in the timber remained in pltf. after Oct. 11, 1927, & a certain sum by way of damages for conversion against J. & M. was at the instance of the judge agreed between all parties to the proceedings & awarded pltf. In the meanwhile J & M. purported to sell the cut timber to the present defts.

Pltf., who had taken no steps to enforce the order which he had obtained against J. & M., gave notice on June 10, 1930, to defts. that the sale by J. & M. to them was ineffective, as J. & M. had no title to the timber, & requesting the return of the timber to him. Defts. having refused & repudiated liability, pltf. commenced an action, & by his statement of claim asked for a sum by way of damages for conversion; the conversion relied on being the refusal by deft. co. to return the timber in compliance with the notice of June 10, 1930 :—Held : no special circumstances existed sufficient to constitute any confirmation by pltf. of any title to the timber in J. & M., nor did pltf. by accepting judgment in the form he did against J. & M. confer any title on them or deft. co. by estoppel.—ELLIS v. STENNING (JOHN) & SON, [1932] 2 Ch. 81; 101 L. 1477a. Money paid on forged cheque—Failure to inform bank of forgery.]—Pltf. had an account with deft. bank, & his wife forged his signature on cheques & thereby drew out all the money left in the account, & she lent it to her sister. Pltf., on discovering the facts, did not at once inform the bank, but about nine months later, when his wife told him that she wanted more money for her sister, he stated his intention of going to the bank, & that night his wife committed suicide. Pltf. then went to the bank & told the manager about the forged cheques. In an action by pltf., claiming to be credited by deft. bank with the amount of the forged cheques, the bank pleaded (a) adoption & ratification, & (b) that pltf. was estopped by his silence from alleging that the signatures were forgeries. The tribunal of first instance found that the forged cheques were honoured through the carelessness of the bank officials. There was no evidence that pltf. had ever adopted the forged cheques as his own :—Held : ratification had no applicability to a forged signature, but pltf. was estopped from alleging the forgeries because his silence until after his wife's death had caused the bank to lose their right of action against the forger, & therefore the action failed.—GREENWOOD v. MARTINS BANK, LTD., [1933] A. 80a. Procedure by judgment summons.]—In an action by pltf. against an unincorporated body & seventeen named persons, described as its committee, in which pltf. claimed damages for libel, judgment was given in the High Ct. for deft. with costs. On a bkpcy. notice founded on that judgment not being complied with, defts. presented a petition in bkpcy.; but this petition was dismissed by the registrar as being wrong in form, on the ground (inter alia) that the petition was by an agent on behalf of an unincorporated assocn. & others, whereas such an assocn. cannot sue or be sued, either in its own name or by a purported agent. Subsequently, defts. took out a judgment summons in the county ct., & the county ct. judge ordered pltf. to pay by instalments the sum due under the judgment of the High Ct., together with the costs of the summons :—Held : (1) as procedure by judgment summons is a mode of enforcing a judgment & directly in connection with the action, as distinguished from a bkpcy. petition, which is not, the county ct. judge had jurisdiction to make the order :—Held : (2) the death of one of the successful defts. since the judgment did not render it necessary for the survivors to obtain the leave of the ct. before they could enforce the judgment.—BUNDY v. MOTOR CAB OWNER DRIVERS' ASSOCIATION (1930), 143 L. sr. ——.]—There is no authority for an extension of the time for renewal of an execution either before the execution has lapsed for want of renewal or after that date. There is no doubt an inherent power in the ct. in exceptional cases to make an order nunc pro tunc, e.g., where an officer of the ct. has frustrated an application to renew. An execution, by statutory provision carried into the Rules, has force for a fixed period. At the end of that period, unless previously renewed, it is not in force, & however meritorious it may appear to overlook a slip or omission of pltf. in renewing within the time, there is no provision warranting that procedure.—JOHNSTON v. DIMOND, [1934] 3 W. 366a. Payment of irrevocable sum—Title of plaintiff not proved—Should not be ordered.]—Pltf. was the widow of a man employed by deft. co. as a derricker. The deceased had left the barge on which he was employed & volunteered to act temporarily as tipper on a second barge in order to relieve a fellow-workman. The fellow-workman was in fact a director of the co., but at the time he was acting merely as a foreman over the job, & was not there as representing the board of directors. While engaged as a tipper in these circumstances he stumbled & fell into the hold, sustaining minor injuries. He was removed to hospital & given an anæsthetic under which he collapsed & died. The post-mortem examination showed that he had a diseased heart, but neither the history of the man's activities nor the use of a stethoscope did or would have disclosed the man's condition. At the trial it was held that the death was due to the negligence of defts., who were ordered to pay to pltf. £785, of which sum £300 was not to be recoverable in any event. On appeal :—Held : (1) on the facts there was no negligence on the part of the defts. ; (2) the fact that the fellow-worker was a member of the board of directors did not in a case where he was in fact acting as a foreman bar the defence of common employment ; (3) on the work upon which the deceased was engaged at the time he was merely a volunteer & the defence of volenti non fit injuria applied ; (4) the administration of the anæsthetic was not a wrongful act intervening between the accident & the death, & could not be relied on as a case of novus actus intervenions ; (5) where there is an appealable matter, the ct. should not, as a condition of granting a stay of execution, order to be paid to pltf. & to be irrecoverable in any event any sum to which it is possible that it may ultimately be decided that pltf. has no title.—BLOOR v. LIVERPOOL DERRICKING & CARRYING CO., LTD., [1936] 3 All E. 1224a. Failure to remove goods—Liability to execution creditor—Measure of damages.]—Pltf. recovered judgment against C. for a certain sum, the order providing for payment by instalments & providing that, in the case of default in payment of any instalment, execution might issue for the whole debt & costs remaining unpaid. C. defaulted in the payment of one instalment & pltf. immediately caused an execution to be levied upon C.'s business premises. The bailiff, by an assistant, went into possession & seized certain furniture. C. paid the amount of an instalment into ct. & the amount then owing, together with certain fees, was £41 19*s.* 8*d.* C. urged the assistant bailiff not to remove the furniture, some of which C. had agreed to sell. L., a friend of C., said there was an application being made to the ct. to stay the execution & that he was ready to pay the money into ct. as a deposit pending the application. The assistant bailiff accepted this arrangement & gave a receipt for the £41 19*s.* 8*d.*, stated to be "received of C. on account of the debt, etc.," with a note at the foot "paid by L. as deposit pending application." Upon the application being made it was ordered that, upon C. undertaking to discharge the balance of the debt & costs by regular instalments & paying the costs of the execution, the warrant of execution should be set aside & the £41 19*s.* 8*d.* returned to L., but in default of the payment by C. of the costs of the execution the £41 19*s.* 8*d.* was to remain in ct. to attend the further order of the ct. Pltf. appealed to the Ct. of Appeal. The appeal was allowed & a new trial ordered to determine whether L. paid the money as agent for C. or otherwise. The county ct. judge's order was held to be irregular, for, if L. paid as such agent, the debt was discharged & the execution was at an end, & no further order could be made with regard to it, & if he was not an agent no order could be made in respect of the sum paid as a deposit, as L. was not a party to the action. Further, the county ct. judge had jurisdiction only to stay the execution & not to set it aside. L. was then joined as a party & at the new trial the judge held that the payment by L. gave pltf. no right to the money, & being satisfied that C. was unable to discharge the instalments due under the judgment he ordered the execution to be suspended upon the terms of a new order for payment by instalments. Pltf. was ordered to pay L.'s costs of that application, & C.'s costs of both applications, such costs to be set off against the costs payable by C. to pltf. under the order of the Ct. of Appeal. C. failed to make any payment under the new order for instalments & pltf. thereupon claimed from the bailiff, as damages suffered by reason of the assistant bailiff's breach of his duty to remove the furniture seized under the execution, the amount of his judgment debt, L.'s costs, C.'s costs, his own costs &

2059a. Judgment by default—Against dissolved foreign corporation.]—Before the Bolshevik Revolution of Oct. 1917, in Russia the M. Bank in London owed a Russian Bank a large sum of money. At the same time the Russian Bank was largely indebted to L. Brothers, also bankers in London. Between Oct. 1917, & Aug. 3, 1921, numerous decrees of the Govt. of Russia & orders of various Departments thereof were made & published purporting to nationalise or liquidate all banking corpns. in Russia, including the Russian Bank above mentioned. In Oct. 1930, L. Brothers, having filed an affidavit stating that the Russian Bank was a co. registered & domiciled in Russia, obtained leave under R. S. C., Ord. 9, r. 2, to issue a writ against the Russian Bank & to serve notice of the writ by sending it by registered post to the former address of the Bank in Moscow. Having then signed judgment in default of appearance against the Russian Bank, L. Brothers obtained a garnishee order nisi against the M. Bank attaching all debts due from the M. Bank to the Russian Bank, & an issue was subsequently directed to be tried, whether the M. Bank was indebted to the Russian Bank to any & what extent. On the evidence of Russian lawyers who had practised in Russia since the Revolution :—Held : the Russian Bank had ceased to exist in & before Oct. 1930, & consequently the writ, the judgment & the garnishee proceedings, were null & void & must be set aside.—LAZARD BROS. & CO. v. MIDLAND BANK, LTD., [1933] A. 2084a. Person out of jurisdiction.]—R. S. C., Ord. 45, r. 1, contemplates both a garnishee & a debt recoverable within the jurisdiction.

A judgment debtor had a balance in an English bank with foreign branches where foreign currency was in use. It was claimed that a garnishee order obtained in England against the bank should extend to possible balances to the credit of the judgment debtor at its foreign branches :—Held : the foreign balances, not constituting a debt recoverable within the jurisdiction, could not be attached by a garnishee order.—RICHARDSON v. RICHARDSON, [1927] P. 228 ; 96 L. The assignment had been executed by deft. co. under seal by its president & its secretary-treasurer. The president was the garnishor. The assignment stated that it was made "for valuable consideration," & the accompanying affidavit by an agent of the bank stated that the assignment was "for good or valuable consideration, as set forth in said conveyance or assignment" :—Held : although the assignment was defective because it did not comply with sect. 3 of Bills of Sale & Chattel Mtge. Act, C.A., 1924, which governed the assignment in question, in that the assignment did not set out the full & true consideration for which it was given, nevertheless said defect was of no avail to the garnishor since the right to garnish depends upon the debt belonging to deft. when the order is taken out, & if the debtor has already parted with the debt under an assignment good as between him & his assignee the defect is immaterial.—MCKAY v. BANK OF MONTREAL, [1932] 1 W. Sect. 263 of County Courts Act, R. S. M., 1913, provides that a garnishing order & summons may be issued pending action when there is filed an affidavit "in one of the forms appropriate to the purpose in the schedule of forms." In the present instance the appropriate form was No. 27, which says: "The said primary debtor is justly & truly indebted . . . to the primary creditor in the sum of . . ." The affidavit which was filed said: "The deft. is indebted to pltf. in the sum of $100":—Held : the omission from the affidavit of the words "justly & truly" was a substantial variation from the statutory form; &, therefore, the filing of said affidavit did not give the clerk of the county ct. jurisdiction to issue the garnishee summons.—HAUG v. BROWN & B. & B. 311b. Charge by deposit of title-deeds—Memorandum relating to charge.]—In an action in which pltfs., exors. of M., claimed that they were entitled as part of their share in the estate of T., the father of M., to a charge for £300 on a farm called "W.," they sought to prove in support of their claim a certain memorandum which was signed by H. the exor. & trustee of the will of T. & with whom the title deeds of "W." had been deposited to secure the sum of £300 with interest, & was also signed by M. & her sister E., which memorandum related the facts upon which pltfs. relied to prove their claim & in which memorandum M. accepted the £300 charge as partial satisfaction of her share in the estate of T.:—Held: the memorandum was admissible in evidence because (1) it ought to be treated as part of the res gestæ, as it was sufficiently contemporaneous with the allocation of the charge; it might be described as an incident of the event under consideration; & (2) the statement in the memorandum whereby M. accepted the £300 in partial satisfaction of her share was a declaration against her proprietary interest & therefore was excepted from the rule against hearsay evidence.—HOMES v. NEWMAN, [1931] 2 Ch. 112; 100 L. 447 viii. ——.]—The girl the subject of a charge for ill-treatment of a State child gave evidence under cross-examination that she had made a statement to the police, but was not cross-examined by counsel for the defence as to such statement, nor was its production called for at that stage. Later a constable stated under cross-examination that he had taken the statement which was then called for, but the police magistrate ruled that it was privileged from production. On appeal on the ground of the wrongful rejection of evidence:—Held: even if the document were not privileged, it could not have been put in evidence, both because counsel for the defence had not laid the basis, by the cross-examination of the girl, for its admission as an inconsistent statement, & also because the girl not being the complainant, her statement was not admissible as between the parties, & that, therefore, there had been no wrongful rejection of evidence.—MCCLINTOCK v. NOFFKE, Ex p. NOFFKE, [1937] Q. 535a. Admissions "without prejudice."]—At the trial of an action, pltfs. proposed to put in evidence the examination, taken on commission, of a representative of pltfs. as to admissions alleged to have been made by a representative of defts. Defts. contended that the alleged admissions had been made at interviews which, although they had not been expressed to be "without prejudice," were such that they would be regarded as having been made "without prejudice," & that the examination was inadmissible:—Held: the examination was inadmissible.—SCOTT PAPER CO. v. DRAYTON PAPER WORKS, LTD. 624a. Agent of predecessor in title—Licensee of copyright.]—(1) By an agreement in writing dated June 30, 1898, one G., the author & sole proprietor of the right to perform a certain play, granted to pltf. the sole & exclusive right to perform, or have performed, the play in Great Britain & Ireland. On Sept. 22, 1898, G.'s agent wrote to pltf. stating that the play had been first performed in Great Britain on a certain date & at a certain place:—Held: a copy of the letter of Sept. 22, 1898, the original having been lost, was admissible as evidence in a copyright action between pltf. & third parties, who claimed a right to produce cinematograph films of the play under an agreement for value with G., dated Sept. 6, 1919, to prove that the first performance of the play took place in this country as stated in the letter since (a) being written by G.'s agent, it constituted an admission by G., a person who, although not named on the record, had a substantial interest in the result; & (b) it constituted an admission by defts.' predecessors in title.

(2) An entry in the register of first performances of dramatic productions at Stationers' Hall is admissible in evidence as a public register. If such an entry is incorrect, the party producing a certified copy of it may be precluded from relying on it as primâ facie proof of a right to produce or reproduce the play to which it relates, but it can be regarded by the ct. as corroboration of other evidence of title.—FALCON v. FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO., LTD., [1926] 1 K. Certificate & memoranda of case.]—A husband petitioning for divorce was counter-charged by his wife with adultery with a named woman, who had at a material date been examined by a surgeon as to her sexual condition. The surgeon gave a certificate & in addition made memoranda of the case. He died before the trial of the present counter-charge. On these documents being tendered in evidence :—Held : the circumstances founded no exception to the general rule that evidence must be given in open ct. & subject to cross-examination. The exception is limited to cases where it was the duty of deceased to perform a particular act & record having done so. In the present case the surgeon had no duty to perform which brought him within the exception, & the documents were therefore inadmissible.—SIMON v. SIMON, HOGARTH, PRESTON & SHAW, [1936] P. 17 ; 105 L. 965 vi. ——.]—The matter in controversy in resp.'s action involved the title to & ownership of 200 acres of wilderness or woodland. Resp. claimed title to the property through a conveyance dated May 3, 1920, from John & James F., the sons & heirs of one David F., deceased, who, in turn, was alleged to have been the only child of one Elizabeth F., the original grantee from the Crown. Applt. co. claimed a documentary title to the property through a series of five conveyances from the first deed in 1897 to the last in 1909, & also claimed a title by continuous, exclusive & adverse possession in itself & its predecessors in possession for a period of over twenty years. The trial judge, after having admitted as evidence, subject to objection by applt.'s counsel, the declarations made to witnesses by the two brothers, John & James F., concerning their own pedigree, excluded them in his judgment & dismissed resp.'s action, finding that applt. co. had established its title to the property. The Appeal Div. reversed the judgment :—Held : the trial judge was justified in excluding the declarations of the deceased grantors in the deed to resp., John & James F., as evidence that they were grandsons of Elizabeth F., the original grantee from the Crown & that he was also justified in re the conclusion that resp. had to establish his title.—PEJ PAPER CO. v. FARREN, [1933] S. No witness was called who had ever known the third; &, except the mention of him in the lease (which described him as aged ten years), there was no proof that he had ever existed. No evidence of search for him was given:—Held: to raise the presumption of his death, there should have been evidence that he had not been heard of by those persons who would naturally have heard of him had he been alive, or that search had been ineffectually made to find such a person; & that the mere fact that no witness called had heard of him was not sufficient.—DOE d. The justices ought to have concluded from the wife's evidence that the marriage in Feb. 1930, was void. Fresh evidence, now admitted, showed that the wife & the previous husband were still living together as a married couple in 1925. 1437b. ——.]—After twenty-two years of married life a man left his wife & she summoned him for desertion. He claimed that she was not really his wife as she had been previously married & it had not been established that the former husband, who was last heard of alive some six years before the second marriage, was dead at the time of that ceremony, which took place in 1910. The magistrates accepted evidence that fruitless inquiries had been made as to the former husband's whereabouts up to the second marriage, & made an order for maintenance on the basis that husband appealed on the grounds that there was no evidence admissible that the first marriage was not subsisting, & that the magistrates were wrong in law in holding that the burden of proof was on the applt. to prove that that marriage was subsisting:—Held: the issue before the magistrates was whether the wife was free to marry in 1910, & whether it could be inferred from the evidence that the former husband was then dead. q i. —— —— Reconstructed cash book.]—A fire in the office of the secretary-treasurer of the pltf. municipality having destroyed most of the pltf.'s records therein, including the record of payment of taxes made since the last audit, the secretary-treasurer, under the authority of the council, employed an office assistant & canvassers, who compiled from the surviving records & from receipts, cheques & other evidence in the hands of taxpayers a statement called "the reconstructed cash book," showing the amounts paid by them during two months of 1921. In an action against the secretary-treasurer to recover an amount alleged to have been misappropriated by him during 1921, pltf. sought to charge him with the receipt of the sum which was shown by said "reconstructed cash book" as received & said book was submitted in evidence:—Held: said book was not admissible against deft.; its contents were not obtained in the manner contemplated by Rural Municipality Act &, therefore, it did not, even if it had been wholly compiled by deft., constitute an acknowledgment by him, as the entries in the original cash book would have done; he had not so recognised or acted upon it as to make its contents evidence against him; it was not secondary evidence of the destroyed cash book; &, the necessary foundation not having been laid for the purpose, it was not admissible as secondary evidence of the taxpayers' receipts & cheques.—GLEN BAIN RURAL MUNICIPALITY v. HALEY, [1928] 3 D.
